THE SENATE on the 23d passed the House bill to provide for the muster and pay of certain officers and enlisted men of the volunteer forces; also the annual pension appropriation bill. The Labor Bureau bill was then taken up. Mr. Aldrich moved a substitute, which was agreed to—yeas 38, nays 18—and the bill, as amended, then passed—yeas 55, nays 2. The Utah bill was then taken up, but without action the Senate went into executive session and soon adjourned until the 25th....In the House a resolution by Mr. Kellogg, asking for an investigation into the subject of his alleged connection with the star route cases, was referred to the Judiciary Committee. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the private calendar. Bills providing for the retirement of Colonel Henry J. Hunt as Major General, and for the payment of quartermaster claims known as Fourth of July claims were laid aside with favorable recommendation. The committee rose and the bills passed. In the evening forty-six pension bills were passed, including one of $50 per month to the widow of General Ord. Adjourned.

IN the House on the 24th, Mr. Hatch of Missouri presented the conference report on the bill to establish a bureau of animal industry, which recommends concurrence in all the Senate amendments. The amount of the appropriation is $150,000 and the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Agriculture is limited to such investigation and such disinfection and quarantine measures as may be necessary to prevent the spread of contagious and infectious diseases from one State or Territory into another, and is prohibited from applying any money toward paying for animals which it is found necessary to slaughter in order to prevent the spread of disease. The report was agreed to. The Senate bill granting permission to L. K. Reynolds, U. S. N., to accept the decoration of the Royal and Imperial Order of Francis Joseph from the Government of Austria, for gallantry in saving the lives of eleven Austrian sailors, was passed without division. The bill restoring Alfred Hopkins to the rank of Captain in the Navy, gave rise to a long debate, but was finally passed. Adjourned.....The Senate was not in session.

DOMESTIC.

EX-SPEAKER RANDALL is of the opinion that Congress will adjourn about the 20th of June.

THE London News states that a Canadian loan of £10,000,000 is imminent to assist in the conversion of five per cent. bonds.

IN the English House of Commons on the 21st a bill amending the Irish laborers' act of 1883 was rejected by a vote of 138 to 75. Parnell complained of the opposition offered by Trevelyan, Chief Secretary for Ireland. He said the Government must not find fault if it meets with a little retaliation. "Does the Government," he asked, "mean to wait until the laborers burn the houses over the heads of the dissenting landlords? The laborers have been patient, but it is intolerable that they should continue to live upon mud floors until a commission has investigated their grievances."

IT is reported from St. Johns, N. F., that the French brig Senorine, with fifty-three passengers and nine crew had sunk to the eastward of Great Bank and all on board were lost. She left St. Malo, France, on the 5th of March, laden with a general cargo, bound to Saint Pierre, and succumbed to the gale of the 5th of May.

IT is reported that the Bank of Montreal exported $8,000,000 in gold to New York during the recent financial panic.

THIRTEEN deaths from yellow fever occurred at Havana during the week ended the 24th.

THE Spanish Slavery Abolition Society has petitioned the Minister of Colonies to stop flogging negroes in Cuba. The Minister has promised a stricter execution of the law.

THE English Admiralty has ordered the torpedo flotilla at Chatham and Portsmouth to be prepared for active service.

LATER.

AT noon of the 26th the doors of the Penn Bank at Pittsburgh were again closed, the following notice, signed by the directors, being posted thereon: "Owing to the serious illness of President Riddle and the inability of the directors to consult with him, it is deemed proper to close the bank." It was said the failure to make their balances good at the Clearing House was the prime cause of the closing. It was reported that President Riddle's illness was caused by an overdose of chloroform.

J. D. FISH President of the Marine Bank, recently arrested for misapplying to his own use moneys belonging to the bank, was on the 26th released on $3,000 bail.

TILDEN G. ABBOTT, late cashier of the Union Market National Bank of Watertown, Mass., has been indicted for forgery and embezzlement.

THE Senate on the 26th concurred in the House amendment to the bill extending the Court of Alabama Claims to December 31, 1885. Bills were reported favorably and placed on calendar: To provide for two additional associate justices for the Supreme Court of Dakota; to forfeit the unearned land grants of the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad and restore the same to settlement. The Mexican pensions bill was taken up and discussed at great length, but without action it went over. The Utah bill was then placed before the Senate, pending discussion of which the Senate adjourned. In the House the Senate amendments to the agricultural bill were non-concurred in. Mr. Hewitt of New York introduced a bill, which was referred, to punish by fine and imprisonment any official of a National bank who shall obtain from the bank with which he is connected any loans for his own benefit, or benefit of any company of which he is a member, by which loss shall occur to the bank. Bills were introduced and referred: Granting pensions to all honorably discharged soldiers of the rebellion when they reach the age of forty-five; appropriating $500,000 for the erection of a home for disabled officers of the Confederate army at Danville, Va. The contested election case of McKinley was taken up, but pending a matter went over for the weather. Adjourned.

Spring Without Blossoms.

Late in Life to Look for Joy—Yet Never too Late to Mend.

Readers of Hawthorne's "House of Seven Gables" will recall the pathos with which poor Clifford Pyncheon, who had been unjustly imprisoned since his early manhood, said, after his release: "My life is gone, and where is my happiness? Oh! give me my happiness." But that could be done only in part, as gleams of warm sunshine occasionally fall across the gloom of a New England autumn day.

In a letter to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., Mr. L. H. Titus, of Pennington, N. J., says: I have suffered untold misery from childhood from chronic diseases of the bowels and diarrhœa, accompanied by pain. I sought relief at the hands of physicians of every school, and used every patent and domestic remedy under the sun. I have at last found in PARKER'S TONIC a complete specific, preventive and cure. As your invaluable medicine, which did for me what nothing else could do, is entitled to the credit of my getting back my happy days, I cheerfully and gratefully acknowledge the fact."

Mr. E. S. Wells, who needs no introduction to the people of Jersey City, adds: "The testimonial of Mr. Titus is genuine and voluntary; only he does not adequately portray the suffering he has endured for many years. He is my brother-in-law, and I know the case well. He is now perfectly free from his old troubles, and enjoys health and life, ascribing it all to PARKER' TONIC.

Should the contest between Blaine and Arthur become bitter the chances will then favor some great unknown. The best political prophets are all at sea.

The conflict thickens. The Republican clans will assemble next Monday at Chicago, and before another HERALD goes to press we shall probably know who the Republican candidates will be.

Hayes enjoys this advantage over Grant, says the Utica Observer He will never be charged with having allowed his name to be used by a firm of swindlers. You couldn't get a loan of ten cents on R. B. Hayes' name.

Morenci Observer: It is currently reported that the Hon. J. K. Boies, of Hudson, has withdrawn from the congressional course. His defeat at the last election was a piece of political chicanery that will not soon be forgotten.

A novel temperance pledging was one through with in Cooper Institute, New York, last week, when Co. D, of the 12th regiment, swore off by wholesale. The members of the company marched to the front of the platform and with uplifted hand took the pledge all together.

Blaine and Arthur seem to be neck and neck in the race at the present time. The Republican rank and file in the Republican states are evidently for Blaine. The machine is for Arthur. It is a significant fact that the bulk of Arthur's strength comes from the Southern states all of which will be hopelessly Democratic on election day.

The Toledo Blade has come out in favor of the nomination of Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan, for president on the Republican ticket.—The convention could certainly go further and fare worse and it will probably do so. Judge Cooley is no politician and has no barrel, two very important things in a nominating convention.

If the Pennsylvania Bible Society want to double or treble Ingersoll's audiences for a season or two, and to that extent multiply his profits as a lecturer, they will arrest him under the Pennsylvania statute forbidding blasphemy. Ingersoll's stock in trade is notoriety, and if he could only provoke religionists to put him in prison for a week or two, his fortune would be made.

An exchange has the following "o'er true" words about the work of most newspaper editors:

The trouble with the funny men is they don't have time to be funny.—The most of them are newspaper editors. Their lives are one demnition grind. When we have waded through a bushel of exchanges, helped at the spring cleaning, attended to the wood and coal, had a fight with a tramp printer, thrown a dun down a flight of stairs, stood umpire at a dog fight, reported a fire, pied a form, jammed our thumb in a door, put out a clothes line, bought some liver for the dog, taken part in a vestry meeting, and ground out a religious editorial and poem on "A Balmy Day in May," we certainly do not feel a flush of fun flurrying in our soul and bubbling in our inkstand. At least, not much so, unless we have just got a new subscriber and feel recklessly magnified over our good fortune.

The Evening News has these sensible words about the wool tariff:

Two hundred citizens from various parts of the country are in Chicago devising ways and means whereby the remainder of the fifty or sixty millions of the country shall be mulcted for their benefit. The two hundred are wool growers; they want more tariff, and they assume to represent all the wool growers of the country, not two per cent. of whom, we venture to say, know of their having gathered. Outside of four or five States, the farmers do not own two sheep apiece, and even in the great sheep-growing sections the bulk of the stock is owned by a few. All the sheep in the country, divided evenly, would not give each farmer more than 9 head. If the whole tariff proposed by the 200 at Chicago, were so much actual profit to the farmer, he would get about $5 per year out of it—not quite enough to pay the actual tariff levied on two pair of blankets, not half as much as he pays on one suit of clothes, not nearly so much as he pays annually on the nails he uses in mending. To the few big wool growers there may be profit in the wool tariff, but to 90 farmers out of 100, the country over, it is as costly as any other item of the long list of 2,000 articles upon which they pay taxes for other people's benefit.

FAILS A SECOND TIME.

The Penn Bank at Pittsburgh Again Closes Its Doors—Great Excitement Among the Depositors.

PITTSBURGH, May 27.—The Penn Bank closed its doors again at seven o'clock yesterday and posted the following notice on the door: "Mr. Riddle, the President and chief executive officer of the bank, having become suddenly and seriously ill and unable to communicate with the Board of Directors, it is deemed proper to close the bank under the existing circumstances until he sufficiently recovers to be present at an adjustment of its affairs. By order of the Board."

The news of the second suspension spread rapidly and created intense excitement and surprise owing to the fact that everybody had faith in the bank's ability to pay all claims against it. The immediate cause is at present unknown and nothing definite can be learned as the directors positively refuse to be interviewed. Large crowds have been flocking to the bank and the pavement in front is filled with anxious depositors and persons attracted through curiosity. President Riddle appeared to be in his usual health at ten this morning, but half an hour later was prostrated with hemorrhage of the lungs and since then has had three repetitions. He is lying at the Duquesne Club rooms unconscious, with only slight hopes of recovery. Close friends of Mr. Riddle are unable to give an explanation of the sudden turn of affairs. It is said, however, that there has been a heavy run on the bank this morning, principally by checks and that $260,000 were drawn in this way through the Clearing House.

The crash was brought about by the Clearing House throwing out checks amounting to $265,000. According to a statement the directors of the bank had raised $931,000 to pay liabilities of $918,000. It is said that there were $300,000 certified checks out which did not include this and which had to be paid. The banks which loaned the suspended institution funds to tide them over are amply secured.

LATER.—The cause of Riddle's illness is an overdose of morphia or chloroform taken this morning. Physicians are endeavoring to relieve him of the medicine.

Officers have been placed in charge who refuse to permit an audience with any of the board. There is great excitement.

DACOTA'S CAPITAL.

The Feeling at Bismarck Over the Supreme Court Decision—Governor Ordway's Friends Fighting for His Retention.

BISMARCK, Dak., May 26.—The decision of the Supreme Court reversing Edgerton's decision was received in this city with great enthusiasm, although the people had no doubt of the final result and permanent location of the Capital here. The decision sets at rest the possibility of delay and embarrassment to the city. No sooner did the news reach Bismarck than bands of music, bonfires, and general jubilation gave evidence of the feeling of rejoicings. Speeches were made by George P. Flannery, Dr. W. A. Bentley, John A. Stoyell, John Holembach, the Rev. S. H. Thompson, Receiver Francis, and Farmer Wallace. Cheers were given for Governor Ordway, Alexander McKenzie, the Capital Commissioners, and the Supreme Judges. At least 4,000 people assembled around the speakers' stand and the most intense enthusiasm prevailed. A large amount of Bismarck capital has been held in reserve for the decision, and will now be invested in certain business blocks, residences and public improvements. Work will be resumed on the Capitol immediately, and the city will assume a brighter and livelier appearance than ever before. Flags were raised, cannon fired and the city was in a state of great excitement and jubilation all night. It is now an acknowledged fact with all parties at interest that the next Legislature will meet in this city, and elaborate preparations will be made for their accommodation. The Capitol will be completed and Legislative halls finished before fall.

YANKTON, Dak., May 26.—Governor Ordway and his friends are making a strong fight against his removal from office. Attorney General Hughes has filed charges against United States Attorney Hugh J. Campbell for official misconduct in connection with the indictment of Governor Ordway and other matters during the past two years. As Ordway's four years' of office expired two days ago his enemies are wondering why the President does not appoint his successor. It is thought that Campbell's possible indictment will not hasten Ordway's retirement, as Territorial officials do not retire until their successors are appointed.

Manitoba Doesn't Want Our Hogs.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 26.—The Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad Company has been notified by the Collector of Customs at Winnepeg that no hogs could be imported from the United States to Manitoba for breeding purposes; that the shipment of hogs into Manitoba is forbidden except under regulations providing for their immediate slaughter. For all hogs entered under such regulations bond must be given as a pledge that they will be slaughtered immediately.

Fish Pleads Not Guilty.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Fish, President of the Marine Bank, arrested Sunday, appeared in the United States Commissioner's office yesterday afternoon and pleaded not guilty to misapplying for his own use moneys belonging to a United States bank. The court fixed the bail at $30,000 and Fish produced bondsmen for the amount.

The Ingratitude of Republics Exemplified.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 26.—John Lawrence, who was Farragut's pilot in the battle of Mobile Bay, died in the poor house of Mobile Sunday afternoon after months of suffering. He passed his latter days in great destitution, and his frequent appeals for aid from the Federal Government met with no response.

Damaging Rains in Louisiana.

COUSHATTA, La., May 26.—The heaviest rains on record have fallen here during the past ten days. The river is higher than for a number of years. Crops are suffering and hands are unable to work. All the creeks and bayous are swelling into immense proportions. Planters and business men are very much discouraged.

A Dire Contagion in Kansas.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., May 26.—Dr. Holcomb, State Veterinary Surgeon, reports that fifteen counties of Kansas are infected with glanders, that three people and fifty head of horses have perished already, and that the dread disease is spreading.

$200,000 Fire.

READING, Mass., May 26.—The Mayall rubber factory was destroyed by fire yesterday morning: loss estimated at nearly $200,000.

STOCKS GENERALLY HIGHER.

The Market Gloomy in the Early Hours but Brighter at the Close.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The vigorous attacks of the bear cliques forced out a torrent of liquidations and made stock speculation gloomy and depressed yesterday morning. Though timidity and distrust prevailed there was a change for the better during the afternoon, when there was quite a scare among the little shorts, who, discovering the heavy oversold condition of the market made a rush to cover and carried Lackawanna up to 95. Great efforts were made to effect a grand rally all around, and, in view of no further bank developments it looked as if it would be successful, though how long it would last no man would venture to cast an opinion.

The upward turn was attributed to Gould and his following and the desires of bear operators to rid themselves of too much company. The change in the tone of the market began about eleven o'clock, and the change from weakness to strength was quite marked. The subsequent advance, and especially in the last hour, left nearly the whole list higher than it closed on Saturday. The most important advances were Burlington & Quincy, 4¼, Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis 2½, Central Pacific 2⅜, Delaware & Hudson 5½, Illinois Central 1, Lake Shore 2⅜, Long Island 3½, Missouri Pacific 3⅝, New Jersey Central 1¾, Northwestern 1½ and 1, Northern Pacific 1 for the common and 2¾ for the preferred, Pacific Mail 1, Reading 1, Rock Island 2¼, St. Paul 2½, Omaha preferred 2¾, Manitoba 1, Texas and Pacific 1, Union Pacific 2, Western Union 1½. The only important decline was Michigan Central, 3 per cent.

The representatives of the Vanderbilt interest say Mr. William H. Vanderbilt has transferred $5,000,000 of Governments into the name of William K. Vanderbilt. Although nothing is said as to the object, it is inferred that the transaction is to protect and strengthen his stocks.

General Manager Hoxie telegraphs to Jay Gould that the Transcontinental agreement has been remodeled, a very little, and again renewed, and Missouri Pacific and Union Pacific have rejoined the association, rates will now be maintained.

An Insane Woman Crushes Her Husband's Skull With a Club.

TOLEDO, May 26.—Word comes from Bowling Green of the horrible murder of Stewart Anderson, a man seventy-five years old, and for fifty years a resident of Wood County. He was killed by his wife, aged sixty-five. The victim was a farmer living four miles northeast of Bowling Green. The murderess is a large power ful woman, who for some time past has shown symptoms of insanity and was under treatment therefor. She is a sister of Dave Phillips who killed Charles Lundy, fifteen years ago, and after being convicted of manslaughter, was imprisoned for a year. Subsequently he became insane, and is now in the asylum at Columbus. The Anderson tragedy is supposed to have occurred about seven o'clock Sunday morning, though no one was present. With a club or a poker Mrs. Anderson battered in her husband's head which was beaten to a jelly. After killing him she dragged the body into another room washed it, and placed a book under his head. She then started for the residence of Dr Whitaker, half a mile distant, but meeting him on the way, got into his buggy and returned home, saying nothing of what she had done. Upon arriving at the house they found her son Val Anderson there. He was told by the doctor to keep close watch upon his mother as she was dangerous. Soon after the son entered the house and found the dead body of his father. His mother acknowledged having killed him; and expressed joy at his death. Mrs. Anderson was taken to Bowling Green in the afternoon and lodged in jail. There is no doubt of her insanity.

Greetings Exchanged.

SARATOGA, May 27.—In the Presbyterian General Assembly, morning session, a resolution was adopted for continuing the correspondence with the Southern Assembly by letter. A fraternal letter from the Methodist General Conference was read and received. A response to the assembly was also read. The recommendation of the Committee on Reduced Representation was adopted. The narrative on the state of the religion of the church and the nicrological report was read. The assembly next year meets at Cincinnati.

The Liabilities of F. Blanchard.

BOSTON, Mass., May 26.—Seven-eighths of the liabilities of S. Blanchard, of Richmond, Va., the wholesale grocer and importer, who failed Saturday for $225,000 are held in Boston. Kidder, Peabody & Co., representing Baring Brothers & Co., admitted they were creditors to the amount of $149,600. President Bigelow, of the Massachusetts National Bank, admitted his bank was a creditor to the amount of about $50,000, but said they were secured.

Base Ball.

CLEVELAND, May 27.—The Detroits were defeated here yesterday by the home nine. The score stood: Clevelands, 2; Detroits 0.

Buffalo—Chicagos, 0; Buffalo, 4.

Philadelphia—Bostons, 10; Philadelphias, 4.

New York—Providence, 10; New York, 4.

The Allegheny-Columbus game at Pittsburgh was postponed on account of rain.

The Presbyterian Assembly Adjourns.

VICKSBURG, Miss., May 26.—The Presbyterian General Assembly adjourned sine die yesterday. Among the last business was a fraternal letter to the Northern Assembly, teeming with the kindliest sentiments, but expressing the firm determination to adhere to the position taken by the last Assembly with regard to the mode of correspondence. A letter of the same purport was sent to the General Synod.

A Distinguished Party.

WASHINGTON, May 27.—A distinguished party left Washington at noon yesterday for Annapolis. It included the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House, Committee on Naval Affairs and Appropriations, Admiral Porter, Lieutenant General Sheridan, Ministers of England, Russia, Germany and France, and the Maryland members of Congress.

A Villainous Joke.

NORWALK, Conn., May 27.—A stupid local paper published a long article last Friday stating that there was a steady run on one of the oldest banks in the city. It excited the depositors and started a run which took $30,000 from the Norwalk Savings Bank before the alleged joker explained that he referred to a gravel bank.

Rubber Factory Fire.

Morenci Observer: Last Thursday morning Harvey Sutton, a well known citizen of Gorham, started for Detroit, and in the confusion of changing cars at Lenawee Junction, was run into by the incoming Detroit train and badly injured, one of his hips being terribly smashed in. He was returned by the freight train and left at Ritter's near his home.

The executive committee of the Co. Fair announced that, owing to excessive rent, no exhibition will be held on Lawrence Park this year. It is desired to purchase the Comstock property where the fair may have a permanent home, and the committee publicly appeal for aid in buying this place, asking not a donation, but an investment in a sufficient amount of stock for such purpose.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Conkling started yesterday on their California trip. They go to Lansing first where they will remain over Sunday; thence to Chicago where they will remain until after the convention; thence to Kansas City and Newton, Kansas, where they will spend a few days with John Conkling; thence to San Francisco and Los Angeles. They expect to be absent from home about three months.

The Sunday School connected with the Church of Christ, East Ridgeway, Michigan, will celebrate Children's Day, both forenoon and evening, on the second Sunday in June, at the church. The program for the forenoon will be a "Children's Day Service," and will commence at 9:30. For the evening a temperance concert exercise, entitled, "A Safe Sign," and will commence at 7:30. Everybody is invited.
B. F. RAPP, Pastor.

The Blissfield Advance recounts how a Riga man won the affections of a neighbor's wife till she deserted her husband and went to live with the widower. Then the injured husband went for the widower, and the matter was compromised by a mortgage for two hundred dollars. When the mortgage came due the woman had deserted the widower, and the first husband has now begun a foreclosure. It looks as though there was trouble for the widower.

Adrian Record of Monday: About forty of our citizens presented Miss Emma Hall with an elegant gold watch and chain, as a testimonial of their confidence and esteem. Judge Geddes made the presentation speech, at the close of the exercises at the Home Chapel yesterday morning, at which time Miss Hall made her farewell address. A number of friends were present to bid the superintendent good bye, and wish her a pleasant journey.

Upon taking the morning train on the M. & O. road Tuesday to go to Detroit, a delegation of fifteen or twenty ladies from the M. E. Church of Tecumseh took the same train. We concluded that some one was going to be taken by storm, and upon making enquiries found our conclusions were correct. They were going to Dundee to make Dr. John B. Haynes a surprise visit. They returned on the evening train well satisfied with their trip and visit.

The Michigan & Ohio railroad company are very anxious to run into Grand Rapids. They are negotiating with the G. R. & I. for an arrangement by which they can use the G. R. & I. tracks, and in case these negotiations fall through, they threaten to parallel the G. R. & I road from Monteith to this city. They are also anxious to reach Muskegon and will it is said, extend a line to that city after successfully reaching Grand Rapids.—Grand Rapids Leader.

Monroe Democrat: The Adrian Record says that "there is lots of worse places than Adrian to live in, because a woman was cured of inflammatory rheumatism. The next item starts off with the announcement that a certain lady "was found dead in her bed this morning." There may be found worse places than Adrian for inflammatory rheumatism but we know of no worse place to be found dead. You should not put your praise and "give aways" so close together.

If you would see a fine Threshing Machine, one that saves all the grain without cracking and cleans it ready for market, call at Slayton & Son's and see the Advance just received for Calvin and Frank Davenport. John Burtless has just ordered one.

The committee in charge of the floral arrangements for to-morrow, extend a general invitation to all to donate flowers for the occasion. The headquarters of the committee will be at the Council Building, where all donations of flowers will be received during the day. People are requested to bring their flowers as early in the forenoon as possible.

The new postal notes have been issued to several offices and will soon be put in general use. They are printed on a lilac-colored paper and are smaller than the yellow notes now in use. The date is written instead of being punched and the stamps of the issuing and paying offices are to be placed on the reverse side of the note. The dimes and cents are punched as in the old note, but the number of dollars is shown by printed lines on one end, the note being torn off so that the amount of dollars is read on the last line.

A large cigar manufacturer says: I don't suppose there is a smoker in a hundred who knows the significence of the words on the cigar boxes. They refer to the color of the cigar. For instance, "Colorado Clara" means very light; "Colorado Madura," good medium color; "Madura," dark. Dark is in the heaviest demand, so much as to be in excess of the supply of leaf. Wise smoker confines himself to the lighter brands, or medium at least. Kentucky wants a very dark cigar: Ohio takes a varied grade. Michigan uses light almost exclusively.

Several papers in Michigan are publishing articles to the effect that Mrs. Carlisle Wheeler, who claims to be the daughter of Jacob D. Crouch, was about to commence suit against the estate and would probably obtain possession of the same, as she could prove her mother's marriage, and she would become the sole heir, cutting off all the others. The printed rumor also states that Messrs. Blair and Gibson are her attorneys. This news(!) was forwarded from this city last week by the gatherer of items for the daily papers who heard the rumor but did not take the trouble to verify the reports. Gov. Blair and W. K. Gibson, Esq., state, that they were not aware such suit was to be commenced until they read it in the papers. There is no foundation to the report.—Jackson Citizen.

Hudson Gazette: The editor has a claim against some subscriber for "consequental damages." He borrowed neighbor Smith's beetle to work up some tough sticks. Now that beetle proper had seen much service. It was well battered, and the rings in places were half asunder. The handle was cross-grained, and one-half of it gone from the end clear down. Well, what should happen, but first one ring bu'st and flew off; next the remnant of that handle split; next away went the other ring; lastly, the beetle separated, and the jig was up. We have compromised the matter with Smith. He is to get a block and handle, we are to get the beetle turned and new rings, and the two houses will begin business again with a good weapon. But, we maintain that on the strength of such hard experience we are entitled to damages from some vender of "good, straight, easy-splitting wood."

ABOUT NORTHERN MICHIGAN.

LANSING, May 22, 1884.

FRIEND STACY:—Noticing the communication in the HERALD criticising my letter with regard to the "North Pine Woods," also a similar one in the Deerfield Record, I am inclined to think it quite possible that taking my information second hand, I may have done some injustice to the average soil and climate of that section.

I certainly had no motive or wish to do so. If I could have my way, every acre of land in Michigan would be worth $100 per acre for agricultural purposes, but it would avail very little to call it so, when it is not true.

I myself visited only the Beech and Maple ridge farm, about one and a half miles out from Lake City, and although I found that just as I described it, still perhaps it would not be fair to judge the rest by this. As to the worthlessness of the pine barrens there will be I presume no question nor dispute.

But I am told by reliable men, who have been there and seen the crops, that on some of the Beech and Maple ridges, the land is quite fertile, and that they do raise and mature quite respectable crops, and as to the profit and fertility of the peach and fruit lands, near the Lake, there is and can be no question. The influence of the lake waters puts off the frosts for more than a month after the crops in the interior are cut off by them, and this as all will see in that region, when the summer is all too short any how is a very material consideration.

Still I apprehend, that as I stated before, this whole region must look to lumbering rather than agriculture, as its principal source or prosperity, if not support.

But if inadvertently, or through misinformation I have been led into in any way misrepresenting its actual importance and value, I would as a matter of choice, without complaint from any one, most cheerfully retract any such insinuation even, for it has been the habit of my life, and far better comports with my feelings and disposition, to err if I must err at all, in exactly the opposite direction.

The Old State Pioneer Society holds its next annual meeting on next Wednesday the 4th day of June, and I hope we shall see many of the Old Lenawee Co., Pioneers here at that time.

Frank Dewey, the Lenawee County Pioneer Chairman is now here, also all the Historical Committee from over the State, making ready for that meeting. Perhaps the editor of the HERALD can put in an appearance here at that time, unless he should conclude to attend the National Republican Convention which will be in session at Chicago at the same time.
B.

A CARD.

Having been appointed Enumerator of the Census for the year 1884, and the work having to be completed within the month of June, I have to ask the co-operation of the inhabitants of this Township in order that the census may be completed within the time allowed and that the reports may be full, accurate and complete.

From farmers, whether owning the farms they work or holding under lease, I wish to have for the year ending May 31st. 1884, the number of acres in the farm; rods of ditching; values of farm and buildings; amount paid for wages in doors and out; cattle and stock raised and sold; acreage, production and value of each crop; orchards and their production and value; and amount of growing crops now in.

From manufacturers, and proprietors of productive industries, producing to the value of $200.00 or over annually, I wish to have the amount of capital; greatest and average number of hands employed, hours of labor and wages, average and total; months in operation on full, three-quarters, two-thirds, one-half, and less time; machines used; materials including supplies and fuel, kind, amount and value; productions including jobbing and repairing, kind, amount and value; for the year ending May 31st., 1884. The answers to these questions will be regarded as strictly confidential, and will in no way be made public or open to public inspection, and when the returns reach the Secretary of State they will be so tabulated that the facts relating to individual establishments can in no way be ascertained. "Proprietors of productive industries" includes blacksmiths, shoemakers, coopers, and the like.

I must also learn the number of volumes in each public and private library.

By having the above statistics prepared before the call of the enumerator you will confer upon him a great favor and will meet the requirements of the law.
FRED. B. WOOD,
Enumerator.
Tecumseh, Mich., May 28th, 1884.

Blissfield Advance: A letter was received the other day from the secretary of the Tecumseh base ball association, asking the Blissfield club to come to Tecumseh and play a game Decoration Day. The Tecumsehs evidently are anxious to again test the metal of our boys, and will undoubtedly be given an opportunity before long.

On June 3d, 1884, the Michigan and Ohio Railroad will sell Round Trip Tickets from all stations at which they have agents, to Chicago and return for one fare for the round trip, to enable people to attend the National Republican Convention, which meets in Chicago on June 3d., 1884. Tickets will be good for ten days from date of sale. For further particulars enquire of agents or the undersigned.
H. MCHUGH,
Genl. Pass. Agent.

News comes to us from the town of Raisin, Ridgeway, Macon and Tecumseh, and never returned, now lie mouldering in the dust of some Southern battle field. The Monument Association wish to obtain the names of all such, as well as those who sleep in the cemetery at home, that a complete list of all deceased soldiers for the four towns may be made. People are requested to give the names to S. P. Hosmer who is preparing the list.

Rev. W. G. Puddefoot, of St. Ignace, is busy shaking hands with his Tecumseh friends, all of whom are right glad to see him. We are sorry he cannot stay over Sunday and favor our community with a sermon.—He was an excellent doctor of souls when he lived here and we learn that he is just as good a doctor of souls in his present location.

The services of the Adrian city band are in great demand since their achievments at New Orleans.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stands it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most skeptical are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is exhibited the most malignant forms of disease. In proportion to every portion of the human frame, every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is strengthened and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to thinkfully state their experience when it is inspiring friends to hear one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

LIVES OF PAIN

RHEUMATISM and NEURALGIA have long enough run riot in the human system.

They have tormented the human family, and defied the medical faculty. From man, out of memory, they have stagnated the blood, demoralized the joints, vexed the nerves, frozen the muscles and racked the brain with wearying pain.

"ATHLOPHOROS" is the enemy of Rheumatism and Neuralgia, repairs tissue damage, renews the blood, eases the joints, enamels the nerves, soothes the brain, quiets the nerves and sends to the troubled brain, and anxious delightful sleep.

"ATHLOPHOROS" is a new remedy, but it has been thoroughly tried. For years and year sufferers from rheumatism and neuralgia, all persons who have for long suffering. It has proven their disease gone. It has cured them. That is all, and that is enough.

"ATHLOPHOROS" can do for you what it has done for these sufferers. It can drive out your Rheumatism and Neuralgia, and will do so if you give it a fair trial.

"ATHLOPHOROS" has by this time had such a good trial all over the country that its true worth is known, and its true character proved.

"ATHLOPHOROS" means "Prize-Bearer;" "Victor;" "Conqueror." It carries off the prize as victor over the attacks of these terrible maladies, and conquerors of the frightful agonies their victims have endured. Not a mere temporary relief, but a permanent, enduring, and triumphant cure.

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of [illegible] price, $2 per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

The Emperor Louis Napoleon smoked only the finest cigars the world could produce. Dead Hollford says the Emperor's cigars were made specially for him in Havana from leaf selected with the finest Best of North Carolina, the finest leaf grown. Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco is made from the same leaf used in the Emperor's cigars, is absolutely pure and is unquestionably the best tobacco ever offered.

Thackeray's artist daughter, Anne, in her sketch of Alfred Tennyson, in Harper's Monthly, tells of her visit to the great poet. She found him smoking Blackwell's Bull Durham Tobacco, urged him by Hon. James Russell Lowell, American Minister to the Court of St James.

In these days of adulteration, it is a comfort to smokers to know that the Bull Durham brand is absolutely pure, and made from the best tobacco the world produces.

Blackwell's Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco is the new and purest made. All dealers have it. None genuine without the trade-mark of the Bull.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—A colored Salvation Army has been organized in Charlotte, S. C.

—A lady has presented the New York Presbytery with $69,000 for needy churches.

—The largest hall in San Francisco, built by the Baptists and first occupied by Rev. Mr. Kalloch, of that denomination, has passed to the Spiritualists, who are very numerous in that city.—Chicago Journal.

—Dr. Thomas, in his lecture, "Will There be a New Religion?" says that any religion discovered in the future would simply be a modification of the faith, creed and forms of the religion of the present day.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—At the last meeting of the Newark (N. J.) Methodist Episcopal Conference, a committee submitted a report proposing that a centennial endowment fund of $100,000, to be known as the Francis Ashbury Fund, be raised for educational purposes.—N. Y. Examiner.

—Statistics show a gain of some 300,000 to the Roman Catholic population of the United States for the last year. The number of priests among them is reported at 6,835, with seventy bishops and archbishops. Ecclesiastical seminaries have decreased by nine.

—A petition, signed by Bishop Clark, Protestant Episcopal, and Bishop Henderson, Roman Catholic, was presented to the Rhode Island Senate at its recent session, praying that all prisoners in State Prisons be allowed to worship according to the dictates of their own consciences, but no action was taken.

—Yale College has abandoned the system of marking to determine the standing of students. Instruction is given entirely by lectures and no quizzing is allowed. There will be no syping on examination. If the student wishes to use any unfair means no effort will be made to detect him, nor will any punishment follow open wrong doing except the loss of the student's own self-respect and his instructor's confidence.—Hartford Post.

—Philadelphia appears to be fully roused to the necessity of industrial education. President Steel, of the Board of Education, in his annual address the other day said that an industrial school is now one of the greatest needs of that city. There should be such a school, he thought, capable of a commodating 2,000 students. The work-rooms should be ample, and provided with machinery for the manipulation of metal, wood and textile fabrics. All the sciences that apply to the manipulation of these materials into articles of use in our daily life should be taught in connection with their immediate practical application, from the generation of steam to the mixing of dyes.

PUNGENT PARAGRAPHS.

—Chicago boasts of a lady, now ninety-four years old who used to sit in George Washington's lap. The more we hear of George the more we get shocked.—Phila. Evening Call.

—Dr. Bernard Carpenter says: "Man commits suicide when he pays no attention to what he eats and drinks." Give me the charge of a person's food, and I will control him morally and physically.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

—It is very funny, but as a general rule the waiter in a swell restaurant is about the only person about the premises who doesn't wait for anything. The man who orders the chop does most of the waiting.—Boston Star.

—If a man wants peace to reign in the household he should count ten before speaking at times when he feels as if his clothes don't fit him. And on days when the kitchen stove doesn't draw he should count 480.—Middletown Transcript.

—A sewing machine agent was recently attacked by a fierce catamount near Milford, Pa. The intrepid agent caught the beast and sold him four new machines and two old ones on the installment plan. The catamount was unable to say no.—Chicago Herald.

—"Are you having much practice now?" asked an old Judge of a young lawyer. "Yes, sir, a great deal, I thank you." "Ah, I'm glad to hear it. In what line is your practice particularly?" "Well, sir, particularly in economy."—Judge.

—A merchant traveler at dinner requested the waiter to bring him a piece of rare beef, and when it came it was rare, indeed. "Waiter!" he remarked warningly, as he looked at the undone dish, "Yes, sah," responded the darky. "Take this beef out, please, and kill it." The waiter crawled into a napkin ring and disappeared.—Merchant Traveler.

Young Blabbitt has been making calls at stated intervals for some time. Sunday night he called as usual, and after waiting an hour in the parlor the girl's little brother came in, and in rather a sheepish manner asked to see Blabbitt's nose. "See my nose," exclaimed Blabbitt. "What do you want to see my nose for?" "Well, Plummer Plunkitt was over last night and Maria promised to marry him, and ma said she thought you'd find your nose out of joint when you called again.—Philadelphia Call.

—Just tall enough—
She took my coat—I'm rather tall,
And she's not so very;
The steps led upward from the hall;
She stood, the little lassy,
Just balanced on the second stair,
My great coat's burden holding;
And then her head is—the kindest pair—
The colder down were folding.
There never was an eye so clear,
No lips so red in morning.
"Just tall enough now, aren't I, dear?—
See how I've grown from loving."
Just tall enough! From eye to eye
Ran horizontal light,
"Just tall enough to—to marry?—
Yes, tall enough—good night!"

Didn't Want a Beauty.

"So you are going to get married at last, Snugger?" remarked Brown.

"Yes, I have at last concluded to do so. I have found a good woman—not pretty, but intelligent—and I propose turning Benedict."

"Not pretty! Why, I thought such an admirer of female beauty as you are would have selected a handsome woman. How is that?"

"Well, I remembered the old adage; 'a thing of beauty is jawey forever,' so I thought that I had better take my chances with a homely wife."—Texas Siftings.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a common Eruption to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the Stomach.
It gives vigorous vitality in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or to 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you, as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

Saved by His Wife.

A Times reporter has secured possession of the facts in a singular case of what was evidently meant to be deliberate murder and robbery, but which was thwarted by the well-grounded caution of the wife of the intended victim. It happened more than a month ago in Colchester, and only a few days before the murder of Harvey Chappell for his money in Le anon, a town adjoining Colchester, but nothing about it appears to have got into the newspapers. Mr. William Rollo, who lives in a rather secluded place on a cross-road in Colchester, had that week drawn five hundred dollars from the bank and had it with him. He was alone, for his wife had gone on a week's visit to her mother, Mrs. Lyman, in Hartford. These facts were known, as such things will be known in rural neighborhoods. On the night in question Mrs. Rollo had returned to Colchester, accompanied by her mother, and her intention to return at that time was not known in Colchester, at least not outside of her house. Just before dawn Mrs. Lyman, who chanced to awake, heard a low and rather dubious rapping on the side door. Waiting, she again heard it unmistakably and then she arose, and going to her daughter's bed-room, wakened her, telling her somebody was rapping. Mrs. Rollo got up, went to the door, and asked: "Who is there?" A mumbling voice answered: "The horse is down, and we want some help." As other help on the main road must have been nearer—provided the stranger had been traveling that road—Mrs. R.'s suspicions were excited, and she said: "Who are you? What's your name?" To this there was no immediate response. At length the name of "Sanford," or something like it was given.

By this time Mr. Rollo had risen, dressed himself and come to the door, intending to go out and assist the stranger. His wife, feeling a deep impression of danger, was resolute against his going without he took his revolver. Mr. Rollo at length acceded to her wish, took his loaded revolver, unlocked the door and went out. He saw nobody, but went on toward the barn, which was at some distance. Turning a corner of the barn he came upon two men who stood behind a big walnut tree. One had a big club.

Rollo, who had been growing more and more angry at every step, and who had now reached a decided pitch of indignation, exclaimed:

"Where is your horse?"

"Oh," one of the men said, as both stepped forward toward him, "he's got up and gone off."

Instantly drawing his pistol and covering the leader, Mr. Rollo, who was now nerved to anything, promptly answered:

"And you two follow him, quick, or I'll kill you in your tracks."

They saw he meant it, and that he "had the drop" on them, too—and the two villains turned and left in a hurry.

After daylight Mr. Rollo and a neighbor followed their tracks in the snow. They followed their tracks five miles to a certain place, but no arrests appear to have been made, and nothing done in the matter. One of the would-be murderers had a striking peculiarity in his heel, as shown in his tracks. This one had followed his companion from the barn almost to the house door, when the other rapped, and had evidently stood ready, if their intended victim had been (as they supposed) alone in the house and had opened the door, to have given the skull-crushing blow that was to have put him out of the way and left the villains free to rummage the house and secure the money.—Hartford Times.

Cornering a Bull-Dog.

Early yesterday morning a policeman found a man, arrayed in his night robes, resting in the top of a tree in his yard; while at the trunk sat a huge bull-dog, gazing upward in delight.

"Hello!" yelled the officer, "what are you doing up there?"

"Waiting for the sun to rise, of course," replied the man, sarcastically; "I seem to be having a picnic, don't I?"

"What's the matter with your dog?"

"D'ye see anything wrong with him?" eagerly asked the man, looking down. "If you do it's more than I've been able to see for the last six hours; he looks like a good, sound, healthy dog, don't he?"

"So he does; but how came you in such a predicament?"

"Well, I'll tell you: that dog has been pestering the life out of me, and I've concluded to kill him; so last night I climbed this tree, while having a romp with him, to get his gaze turned up."

"Which you succeeded in," laughed the policeman.

"Yes, I flatter myself that I did."

"But what was your object in getting him to look up?"

"Oh," replied the other, "that's where the secret lies; I've tried poisons of all kind on him, but no go; hired several negroes to drown him, and paid for as many colored funerals; shot at him, and received wounds in return; so I've decided to stay up here and attract his attention, till he breaks his infernal neck looking at me."

"I am not afraid of him," said the officer, "let me club him to death."

"Oh, I'm not scared of him, either," replied the freed man, "but I don't think you can kill him."

The policeman sprang over the fence and soon made short work of the dog.

"Is he dead?" came fom the tree.

"Yes," answered the cop, "he's done for."

There was a scrambling heard, and directly the voice sounded near:

"Are you sure?"

"Yes," impatiently replied the officer.

Another scraping of bark, and the man again asked:

"Are you dinged sure?"

On receiving an affirmative reply the man sprang from the tree and scooted for the house.—Atlanta Constitution.

—Unalterable Paste: Take one tablespoonful of flour, add gradually one pint of cold water; boil slowly and stir well to prevent burning until it thickens; keep boiling till it becomes thin; add one tea-spoonful of nitro-muriatic acid, and boil till it again thickens, when it is ready for use. This paste is harmless, cheap and will neither turn sour nor mold.—Scientific American.

A Place to Give a Poet Inspiration.

Joaquin Miller, a poet of the Sierras, has just got into his log cabin. I called upon him in it, and found a tall, well-made, blue-eyed man of forty-five, with long, tawny hair flowing out from under his slouch hat, with pantaloons tucked into a pair of fine boots, and a good-natured air of Western wildness, which well accorded with his picturesque surroundings. He received me cordially and kindly showed me over the cabin, saying that for fifteen years he had been wandering about over the face of the earth, and that he was glad to feel that he had at last a place he could call his home.

This cabin is on the heights at the head of Sixteenth street, the great street of the Washington of the future. As Wankeen says: "The President's house is at one end of it and his hut is at the other, but that while he has a cabin the President has only a cabinet." Sixteenth is a great wide street paved with asphalt, and lined alternately with $50,000 mansions and $50 negro huts. The White House, almost bathed by the Potomac and faced by Lafayette Park, is its starting point, and half way up towards Mr. Miller's cabin is a green plat in which a bronze equestrian statue of General Scott looks at the Executive Mansion. The street steadily rises, carrying with it old St. John's Episcopal Church, George H. Pendleton's mansion, negro laborers' cabins, Senator Cameron's great palace, and a like mixture till it reaches the boundary of the town, where there is a jump upward in the shape of a fifty-foot hill or plateau, running back into the country. On this plateau Joaquin Miller has bought a lot and put up one of the prettiest of log cabins.

The lot runs almost to the edge of the hill, and the view is certainly one of the finest in the United States. Mr. Miller says he has never seen anything equal to it, and that if man can write poetry anywhere he ought to be able to write it here. Stand in front of the large yard of the cabin, under one of the great oaks which shade it, all Washington lies before you surrounded by hills which make it look as though the nature around was a mammoth coliseum of the gods and the national capital the scene going on in the arena below. The great white classic Capitol is plainly seen, the Potomac flows on along the edge of the arena, and off on neighboring hills you can look into Alexandria and at the tombstones of Arlington.—Washington Special.

Origin of the Name Oregon.

The late Archbishop Blanchet contributed the following interesting paper to the Oregonian in 1863. It will be observed that the Archbishop speaks of himself in the third person: "Jonathan Carver, an English Captain in the wars by which Canada came into the possession of Great Britain, after the peace, left Boston June 6, 1766, crossed the Continent to the Pacific, and returned October, 1768. In relating his travels, which were published in 1774 and republished in 1778, he is the first who makes use of the word Oregon. The origin of that word has never been discovered in the country. The first Catholic missionaries—Father Demers, now Bishop of Vancouver Island, and Father Blanchet, now Bishop of Oregon City—arrived in Oregon in 1838. They traveled through it for many years, from South to North, from West to East, visiting and teaching the numerous tribes of Oregon, Washington Territory, and the Brittish possessions. But in all their various excursions among the Indians they never succeeded in finding the origin of the word Oregon. Now it appears that what could not be found in Oregon has been discovered by Archbishop Blanchet in Bolivia when he visited that country, Chili and Peru, in 1855 and 1857. The word Oregon, in his opinion, most undoubtedly had its root in the Spanish word 'oreja' (ear), and came from the qualifying word 'orejon' (big ear). For it is probable that the Spaniards, who first discovered and visited the country, where they saw the Indians with big ears, enlarged by the load of ornaments, were naturally inclined to call them 'orejon' (big ears). The nickname first given to the Indians became also the name of the country. This explains how Captain Carver got it and first made use of it. But the travelers, perhaps Carver himself, not knowing the Spanish language nor the peculiar pronunciation of the j in Spanish, for facility sake would have written it and pronounced it Oregon, instead of 'Orejon' in changing j to g. Such, in all probability, must be the origin of the word Oregon. It comes from the Spanish word 'Orejon.' This discovery is due, in justice, to the learned Dr. George Haygarth, A. M., M. D., of London, a man well versed in the Spanish, whom the Archbishop met in La Paz, Bolivia."—Portland Oregonian.

A Negro's Prayer.

Bishop Haven presided over the Texas conference in 1878. One day he scored some of the colored ministers on a too feeble recognition of meum rom tuum, and then called on a brother to pray, who responded as follows: "O, Lord, dou am honest, great an' holy; nothing dat am unclean an' dishonest can tuch de. O, Lord, come an' teach all classes an' colors de less on ob honesty; make um honest wid dare tongues, dare feet, dare hans an' dare heads. O, Lord, make um honest inside an' out, in de dark an' in de light. O, Lord, sweet Babe of Bethleheim, come and bress our Bishop front an' tight his ebry battle; send him threw dis world like a pigeon on de wings ob de eagle, an' when de race am run, an' de last battle am fought wid dat ole serpent, de debil, an' dar am no more for him to do in dis world, let him mount de chariot an hab a short ride home; an, dep, Lord, on de plains ob glory, himself all covered wid glory, let him ground his arms near de throne ob de Lamb, an' lib, an' rest, an' shout, forever an' ever."—Exchange.

—A Brooklyn woman said to her servant girl, a fresh arrival on the latest boat from Cork: "Bridget, go out and see if Mr. Block, the butcher on the corner, has pigs feet." The dutiful servant went out and returned. "Well, what did he say?" asked the mistress. "Sure, he said nuthin', mum." "Has he got pigs' feet?" "Faith, I couldn't see mum—he had his boots on."—*N. Y. Humor in the Stomach,

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhoea and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statements of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents, and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

The discovery of ATHLOPHOROS as a specific for Rheumatism and Neuralgia was not an accident, but the result of inquiry into his own case, by a gentleman of wealth, leisure and scientific accomplishment, who had been long a victim of Rheumatism. His own cure proved his theories as to the nature of the disease, and the merits of Athlophoros as a specific for it. Then his friends tried it, and their friends. And so the circle widened, till now Athlophoros is recognized in every state as the surest remedy for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

A lady died recently in one of our large cities who is said to have danced with LaFayette. The great General must have devoted most of his time to the art, as this adds one more to the 50,000 reported to have danced with him. It requires a vivid imagination to believe this, but none at all to believe the assertion that ten tin es that number of ladies have used DeLand's Soda and Salaratus, and always with one result. Success in every particular.

The Marshal presented the name of Delos Love for the position of Deputy Marshal and Delos Love was elected to that position. An appropriation of $200 was made for the payment of Night Watch during the coming year.

On motion the Council passed the following resolutions.

Resolved. That this Council do hereby require that a sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the east line of Pearl street in the village, which lies along and adjoining the west line of that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee Co., State of Michigan, known and described as follows viz: Lot bounded north by Temple lot and VanTine land, east by Gould & Emerson lots, south by Bidwell's lot and west by Pearl street, said sidewalk to be 4 feet in width, of sound pine plank 1½ inches thick and not to exceed 6 inches in width, laid lengthwise and well spiked down upon sound Burr or White Oak stringers 2x4 inches in size and placed not more than 2 feet apart, and double at joints, subject to the directions of the street Commissioner and to be completed within 30 days from date hereof. In case any default in the construction and completion of said walk as herein directed the street Commissioner is hereby directed to construct said walk and payment therefor shall be required of the owner of said adjoining land.

Resolved. That the Council do hereby require that a sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the east line of Pearl street in this village which lies along and adjoining the west line of the parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, county of Lenawee and State of Michigan, known and described as follows, viz: Lot bounded north by Kilbuck street, east by Wilson lot, south by Totten lot, west by Pearl street, said sidewalk to be 4 feet in width, of sound pine plank, 1½ inches thick and not to exceed 6 inches in width, laid lengthwise and well spiked down upon sound Burr or White oak stringers 2x4 inches in size and placed not more than 2 feet apart and double at joints, subject to the directions of the street Commissioner, and to be completed within 30 days from date hereof and in case of any default in the construction and completion of said walk as herein directed, the street Commissioner is hereby directed to construct said walk and payment therefor shall be required of the owner of said adjoining land.

A request was received from the Grand Army of the Republic asking the use of Military square for Decoration Day, the 30th of May next. The request was granted.

A complaint was made that some person or persons had removed a large quantity of soil from the several places in the streets of this village without authority from the proper authorities controlling said streets. The marshal was instructed to take such steps as to discover who the parties were, and when discovered to serve them with a notice to replace the soil so removed.

Also complaint that several of the street lamps of the village had been more or less injured and that steps should be taken to discover who the parties were.

Upon motion the Council authorized the offer of a reward of $10, to be paid to any person furnishing information that would lead to the discovering of the persons committing such depredations.

The Finance Committee reported the following bills and recommended payment.

JOHN L. SCHOOLCRAFT, Recorder.

THE PEOPLE'S CYCLOPEDIA.

Letters of Recommendation from a few of Tecumseh's Literary men.

From Prof. D. A. Hammond, Supt. of schools, Tecumseh.—"I have only been able to examine The People's Cyclopedia cursorily, but I like it and cheerfully recommend it. I consider it a solid, excellent work, sufficiently full for most purposes, and yet at so low a price as to place it within the reach of all the people. Having the Britannica, I still feel the need of a more concise work, and gladly avail myself of the opportunity of supplying that need."

From Rev. Geo. W. Hudson, Pastor M. E. Church, Tecumseh.—"I have examined at considerable length the People's Cyclopedia edited by W. H. DePuy and have no hesitation in pronouncing it the most convenient work of its class in the English language.—It gives just the information most needed by business and professional men and in such form as to be always ready to hand. Then the work is fresh, being up to date in every particular. Its unexpensive form, too, puts it within the reach of every intelligent family.

If you are in search of knowledge and want it in the most convenient and available form and at the lowest price, don't fail to examine the People's Cyclopedia of Universal Knowledge. We can give no better idea of the great value of this work, than by quoting the opinions of some of Michigan's best scholars and educators.

WILLIAM DEERING & CO'S

Annual Surprise

FOR FARMERS.

The season of 1884 will be another one of triumph for the Deering Harvesting Machinery. This time it is

The Deering Junior,

OR THEIR LIGHT 2-HORSE BINDER.

The latest and best thing out in Farm Machinery. It weighs but 1,200 pounds, and embodies in itself many new features and improvements, among which are

The newest and simplest knotter known.
A new adjustable reel.
A new raising and lowering device.
A new steel main wheel.
A new iron grain wheel.

It is full of fine points, and is bound to please. It has been thoroughly tested IN THE FIELD, and its success is assured.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Deering Twine Binder and Harvester

Has received a number of valuable improvements, and will go on giving complete satisfaction in 1884 as it always has done in the past.

FOUR POINTS

Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD.
Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS.
WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC.
WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing: use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes in to soak, rubbing plenty of soap in the most soiled parts. Be sure that the soaking water is hot; soak the clothes half an hour; stir them occasionally so that they may get the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them lightly out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil 15 to 20 minutes, rinse well, blue and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boiling by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Flannels and prints should not be boiled, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the wash-board, and being the best disinfectant known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury; the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press water out with the hand; boil 3 to 5 minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press carefully between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron between pieces of old flannel. Soak curtains 10 to 30 minutes and boil 5 to 20 minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, or pin every scallop to carpet over a sheet to dry; no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

Sold by leading wholesale and retail grocers everywhere. Dealers may obtain our goods upon application. ELECTRIC SOAP MANUFACTURING CO., Indianapolis, Ind., and 22-28 South Water St., Chicago, Ill.

When you come to think of it, it is not odd that literary people prefer a pipe to a cigar. It is handier to smoke when they are writing, and ever so much cleaner. And then it gives them the true essence and flavor of the tobacco.

The most fastidious smokers among all nations and all classes of men agree that the tobacco grown on the Golden Tobacco Belt of North Carolina is the most delicious and refined in the world. Lighter than Turkish, more fragrant than Havana, freer from nitrates and nicotine than any other, it is just what the connoisseur praises and the habitual smoker demands. The very choicest tobacco grown on this Belt is bought by Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co., and appears in their celebrated Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco. It is known the world over. Get the genuine, with Bull trade-mark, then you will be sure of having absolutely pure tobacco.

Cover Your Heads!

One week ago we opened our new Hat and Cap Department, and although we felt sure of the support of the public in our new venture we were not prepared to see our sales for the week fully double our expectations. Everyone handles the celebrated $1 Hat, which is sold by other dealers at $1.50. This Hat we make our specialty. We purchase such large quantities to supply our different stores that we can well afford to sell them at $1, and still have a fair profit. Our $1.50 Stiff Hats in all the latest shapes, other dealers' price $2. Our $2 and $2.50 Hats, from the best makers, and our $3, $3.50, $4 and upwards are all fine imported English Stiff and Soft Hats. Every line we sell at 50 cents less than elsewhere in the city.

TIPTON TATTLE.

"Childrens Day" is to be observed next sabbath at the M. E. Church when appropriate addresses, readings, recitations and music will be given by the members of the Sunday School.

A dress making establishment under the administration of Mrs. Tuttle has recently come to the front hard by the Post office where ladies desiring fashionable work can be agreeably accommodated.

Mr. Orville Kemp is having his pockets and his lands drained by extensive tiling.

An interesting and prosperous sunday school is held at German school house with Mr. Mixby as superintendent.

Miss Emma Mills has been quite sick with bilious fever but is now some better.

Mr. Wheelan's new barn presents a very neat and imposing appearance.

Rev. Whiteley preaches four times each alternate sabbath.

Many hundreds if not thousands of bushels of wheat have passed here to Tecumseh within the last two or three weeks.

Tipton needs a harness shop, a depot, oal and lumber yards which could hardly fail of success,

Fruit has not been injured in the least by the late frosts.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

For tax payers: please read trespassers in my last weeks letter and charge a mis-spell to the sick printer who is naturally anxious for assessment reform.

Too much wet dampened race course enthusiasm, though there were many nice horses displayed and a fair attendance the last day. There were a few accidents without serious results, and some purses and a gold watch changed owners, without leave.

A hardware salesman recovered his clothes on Friday morning, from the back yard of the Commercial hotel, but $31l. had gone astray. His stock of experience was not diminished so he departed, much wiser than he came.

The races have not proved to be the brilliant financial success anticipated by resident sportsmen, but they regard this deficit as cheerfully as a boy does the woodpile. The reason is said to be, too high premiums were paid. It cannot be expected that an association newly formed can gauge al their ventures with the free and easy precision of older and experienced organizations. There is another reason called thoughtlessness, that has something to do with this case. Probably every stockholder in the Fair ground is liberal enough and just enough in dealing with his neighbors, yet accepts as Turf-gospel the policy of making a few pay for amusement that should be shared among many; because it is endorsed by so many of his predecessors. It is a doctrine that mildews public feeling regarding any scheme, because it can be felt just as well as understood and disintegrates patronage. The catterers to any amusement, moral, religious or worldly, succeed best by sprinkling, immersing, and seasoning their plan with the extract of liberality. Any other spice creates acidity of sentiment. People call Barnum the Prince of Humbugs, but he gives more for the least money, than others, securing the crowd and per cent to sustain a prolonged wheedle. It would be nonsense to ask his admission price at the gate of our village race ground, because the animals possess more of a sameness and are fewer in number. When a man selects only himself, or perhaps a favorite boy, to go with him to the show because the price of admission is too high to afford taking the whole family, he leaves a bad feeling at home and takes selfishness enough with him to spoil a camp-meeting. No one need base expectations of wealth on such patronage. Much depends upon advertising good intentions. The home printer is the one most likely to sow such news broadcast, not only with the additional impetus lent by good will, but he is supposed to have both an interest and pride in stimulating unity of purpose in the direction desired. The more the merrier, and more extended his field of work. To hire workmen in cities, and leave those as competent to home idleness and discontent, is a way to knock the bottom out of village prosperity, warranted to outlast the millennium.

MACON MOLECULES.

A Fourth of July meeting was held last Monday, and an executive committee appointed to arrange the preliminaries for a celebration. This committee made its report Wednesday evening. Another general meeting will be held Friday night.

SPRINGVILLE SNUFF.

Working on the road seems to be the main occupation for the past week.

C. D. Smith will commence building a house for Ed. Taylor next week.

A. J. Ayres has improved the looks of his house very much by adding a coat of paint. A. J. Monagan wielded the brush.

Umphrey Egan, Sr., and Helen Kelley got into a fracas one day last week in which the former came out with a broken rib, and Mrs. K. says, "He'l not insult me again on me own premses."

Springville feels quite jubilant over the prospects of the removal of the depot at Onsted to Devel's Lake, and the building of another two miles east. How good the prospects are remain to be seen.

Earnest Ayres, who has been in the employ of Henry Mensing for the past six months, will return to his old home Pittsburg, Pa., soon.

FARMER'S SOCIAL CLUB.

A very pleasant meeting of the Farmer's Social Club was held at the residence of F. C. Rector, Friday afternoon, May 23d., where the program previously arranged was duly carried out.

The discussion on the best time to cut hay was discussed with a good deal of animation, and quite a diversity of opinion upon the subject. The ladies, at the same time, held a meeting of their own and discussed the question of fruit canning I understand with very much animation and a large difference of opinion in regard to some fruits.

After partaking of a plentiful repast the Club adjourned to meet at Putnam's Landing, Sand Lake, June 20th, to have a day of pleasure and recreation. All are respectfully invited to attend and bring their baskets of goodies to spread the table for a picnic dinner.

F. V. HORTON, Sec'y.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 5, 1884.

ROMANCE OF A TILE.

"I'll mark this hat," said a factory girl,
As she sewed her name in the band lining,
"When some fine duke or wealthy earl
Will soon observe how neat the lining;
And who, romantic, as such oft are,
Will offer his rank, his wealth and his love
And beat me away to his castle afar,
Where there's no thread to knot, nor needles to shove."

"I'd say that tin," said the cobbler grim,
As he gazed on the hat in the shop-keeper's case;
"The just the right shape, with its broad curves trim
To hide all the dirt, when I've not washed my face."

Ha! what a surprise 'twill be to old wife
When I enter the door, with a bow and strut,
"I've stared her almost out of her life
To see this chapeau o'erlopping the snout!"

"What! bought a new hat?" said the cobbler's spouse
As she angrily hoisted it off his big head.
"You'd better have gotten some things for the house,
And not be a vanity rob you of bread.
Didn't cost much?—Ha! what's this I see?
A name and address sewn near to the band
Mary Ann Johnson? This must to me
Take that—and take that!"—and his shoulders were tanned.

MISS ENDICOTT.

Miss Endicott was an old maid. If we are to believe her friends and neighbors she no longer went out to greenhouses, and as for flirting, they said she could not give it up because she had never taken it up.

"Why, I don't believe she ever had such a thing as a proposal in her life," said Mrs. Snow, and Rev. Mr. Snow wondered if it were wrong for a clergyman not to disabuse his wife's mind of such an error. Miss Endicott had accepted the verdict of her friends without a demur, and seemed resigned. What did it signify? If she had never been in love, was it her fault? She had once believed that the time would come, had waited and watched for her Hero; but he had delayed, and now she was passed, and heroes always loved youth and beauty, and she no longer expected him. She had her interests, her poor people, her books, her friends, and if these did not satisfy, she said, nothing would. If he was a little pleased comparing what she had expected of it, it was not because she brooded over all she had missed, and did not enjoy the sunset of the present in regretting the light that never was on sea or land." She loved to see other women with their lovers, and she often thought as she took as much pleasure in the sight of a pretty flirtation as those most concerned. Love making interested her impersonally; she no longer considered herself in the matter, and when met, young and old flocked to her receptions, she took no credit to herself they came to see the pretty girls with the bloom upon their cheeks, and were civil enough to seem interested in whatever she had to say. She did not know there was a change in her face, dependent neither upon youth nor bloom, "a sweet, attractive kind of grace," which even the pretty young girls coveted, in all she said.

"We are going to drive to the Glen to-day," ventured Mr. Lawrence one summer morning, when she was visiting at the country house of her friend Mrs. Turner. "Unless you will drive with me, I shall be obliged to go alone."

"And you don't care for your own society?"

"There is society I love more."

"Oh," put in Miss Hughes, "we needn't go alone, Mr. Lawrence. I heard Miss Scott express her regret that she would be prevented from going with you."

"Miss Scott was mistaken."

"Great old maid," said Miss Scott, as she silently watched Mr. Lawrence and Miss Hughes driving off. Every day there was a little journey hither and yon, and every day it was Miss Endicott to whom Mr. Lawrence attached himself. It was Miss Endicott whom he helped up the steep paths, for whom he found the wild flowers, to whom he gave the humming-bird's nest or the Indian arrow-head, whom he joined on the veranda, with whom he searched the heavens for the comet or tracked the constellations; it was Miss Endicott whom he rowed up the creeks among the meadows, to whom he brought the birds he bagged, to whom he read Matthew Arnold's poems under the lofty pine trees, or Browning on the sea-beach, for whom he sketched the glen.

"Why," pouted Miss Scott, "she is familiar enough to call her 'Vera' already."

"Hush," said their hostess, Mrs. Turner; "she has a right to call her 'Vera,' I suppose; they were engaged once, but she broke the engagement. This is only friendship."

"I did'nt know," declared Miss Scott, "I don't believe in friendship."

"When friendship and love look like love," quoted Miss Hughes. "I must say it's a dangerous experiment for two people who were once engaged to flirt."

"This is not flirtation; it is companionship," said Mrs. Turner.

"Of course he can't be in love with her at her age, too," continued Miss Scott. "Life's only a young man's."

What Miss Endicott thought about it was quite a moot place. Mr. Lawrence was her most intimate friend; they had known each other for years and years. They had been lovers; that is, he had loved her, and she had hoped to love him, and had failed. If she began to suspect that it was not impossible, after all, what then? Many a woman has loved in her maturer years the man whom she only liked in her youth. Was it because years had brought her the capacity for appreciation, insight and understanding? She began to wonder why the tones of his voice had never thrilled her in the old days, why she had not loved him, why he had not been her hero. Was it too late? It seemed not. He waited upon her glances, he loved her neighborhood; if there was a difference in this manner, was it not fear lest he be deluded himself again, lest he might seem to take too much for granted? Mr. Lawrence was hardly thirty; he was merely drifting. It had once been all the world to him to breathe in Vera's presence. They was a charm about her still, but had he a right to be charmed? He assured himself daily that he was not making love—nobody could mistake him. In old days he had been so different, so full of enthusiasm, so devoted—this was only a platonic affair between two hearts which understood each other. Was it not Lamartine who once said "a woman could have no such friend as another woman's lover," or something of the kind? Besides, Vera had never loved him, even in the old times; he had deluded himself for awhile, but it was she herself who had delegated him to the ideal region of friendship when he had poured out his affections upon her. Why should she make any mistake now?

"They had been out gathering wild flowers one afternoon.

"This herbarium," he said, "will be a kind of floral diary to me. I can read the history of the summer days among its leaves. In the days to come we discovered each flower to speak to us, will rise pleasing ghosts before me; we never I open the volume I will see again the paths we followed, the little clouds moving across the sky. I will hear your voice again, your words will echo in my."

"You are becoming a poet," said Vera, as Mr. Lawrence paused, with his eyes fixed on the veranda.

"I know you will be shocked to see me," said the young girl, who stood there smiling and holding out a dimpled hand, "but it is not my fault."

"It is half mine, at least," said Lawrence, taking the hand, and holding it longer than needful, thought Vera.

"Ah, that hateful old herbarium again! How I detest the sight of it! how it bored me! but I must tell you we were driving home from the mountains, Aunty, Harold, and I—Aunty would come this way—and the horses took fright, of course; they know she is timid—just half a mile away, and spilled us out, and bruised her so badly she is unable to go further."

"It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, I see," said Lawrence, unfeelingly; "but now that you have taken breath, let me introduce you to my old friend Miss Endicott. Vera, I suppose you have heard that you know—Miss Rose Allen and I are going to take each other for better or worse."

"I am sure it will be all for the better," Vera said.

"That depends upon whether he burns the herbarium or not," laughed Rose, and then they went in to tea, and Vera ate her meal, and drank her chocolate, and talked and laughed with the rest, but in inventory of the charms of Rose, ended herself for having made the grim mistake of thinking that he loved her still. But the world was no longer the cheerful sphere she had known. The sun had set and the stars had not arisen.

"I know he was only making believe with Miss Endicott," said Miss Scott; "she'll be left out in the cold after this with a vengeance. It seems a pity, too, to be disappointed, at her age; but then she had no business to expect anything."

It seemed to Vera, however, as the days went by, as if Rose loved better to sit and bathe her aunt's bruises or read novels to her than to float on the stream in Mr. Lawrence's wherry, or to drive behind his ponies over the hill country, and this preference on the part of his sweet-heart in no wise annoyed Mr. Lawrence.

"They are the queerest lovers," said Miss Hughes. "I do believe he was happier before she came."

One day, when Mr. Lawrence had gone up to town on business for a few hours, as Vera was returning from a lonely walk, passing through a little wood, she heard the murmur of voices.

"But why should you hesitate when you love me, dear?" said a deep tone.

"Because Aunt Hitty will never forgive me for letting Mr. Lawrence's fortune go out of the family, she has set her heart upon it." And just then Vera came face to face with Rose Allen in the arms of a strange young man. "A thousand pardons," she said, a little stiffly.

"Let me tell you, let me explain," cried Rose, as Vera hurried away. "You must think I am such a hypocrite, Miss Endicott. Listen. Aunt Hitty never gave me any rest till I accepted Mr. Lawrence, and I don't think he cared much, either. I think she made him believe I was languishing for love of him. Tom—that is, Mr. Crebore—had no money then, neither had I. She forbade him the house. Since then Tom—I mean Mr. Crebore—has speculated or something, and made enough to begin life with, and now he wants me to break with Mr. Lawrence; but it's so hard to tell a lover you have been mistaken, or that you knew all the while you didn't love him, but just was going to marry him for his money, isn't it? You are his friend, Miss Endicott; you have known him for ages; can't you break it to him for me?" pleaded Rose.

"I break it to Mr. Lawrence?" repeated Vera, all the color fading from her face. "How can I? I would be glad to help you, but—but it will break his heart!" Just then a shadow fell between them, and Mr. Lawrence himself laid a gentle hand on Vera's arm. "No, it will not break his heart," he said, aside. "I have heard it all, Rose. I came out to meet you; they told me at the house that you were walking this way. I am glad to know this before it is too late. Rose, I give you leave to be happy with Mr. Crebore. As for me—"

"You are very good," laughed Rose; "but I doubt if you love me any better than I love you, Mr. Lawrence. It was all a mistake from beginning to end."

"But all's well that ends well."

"Didn't you find Miss Rose?" asked Miss Scott, as Vera and Lawrence returned to the veranda together.

"Yes, I found Miss Rose—and lost her too."

"Where did you leave her?"

"I left her in good hands, Miss Scott."

"I though there was something in the wind," averred Miss Scott, when the facts became known. "Mr. Lawrence was so snappish."

"When you jilted me, Vera, I was unhappy," he said, before his departure.

"And now—"

Some Indian Customs.

The Poncas number 580, and there are but six half-breeds in the tribe. They have retained their purity of blood in a remarkable degree, and are, as a consequence, purer in morals than either the Kaws or Osages. They at one time had a number of half and quarter bloods in the tribe, but these have nearly all died out, and none have been born to fill their places. The Poncas are gaining numerically year by year since coming to this reservation six years ago. They were moved from Baxter Springs here at that time, but came originally from Dakota. In the matter of civilization they get on slowly. Few of the men and none of the women can speak English. They have a large brick school-house, two and one-half stories high, with basement, capable of accommodating one hundred scholars, and have an annual enrollment of over seventy. There are no laws compelling school attendance. The children are doing fairly, learning to speak English rapidly, and some of the classes are in the Third Reader. Mathematics come easy to them.

Nearly half the men wear civilized clothing, and all Ponca women wear petticoats instead of leggings. The blanket is never wholly discarded, however, and seems to be nearly indispensable for warmth and for sleeping. Nearly all prefer boots and shoes to moccasins in bad weather. In the matter of farming eighty to ninety families will raise considerable corn this season, averaging, perhaps, six to eight acres to each family. The agent thinks there may be eight hundred acres of corn raised this year by the Poncas. They raise some wheat and potatoes, but are sadly deficient in stock of all kinds. Many families have none of any kind, and very few have teams for farming. The tribe is without religious instruction except a Sunday school. There is no mission here of any kind. The men do what outdoor work is done at all. The Government issues about one-third rations of salt, sugar, beef, soap and flour.

The tribe has 101,894 acres of land and $70,000 trust funds at five per cent. They also have a treaty fund of $8,000 per annum for five years yet, for clothing, etc. They have leased seven thousand acres of land to J. H. Sherburn, the licensed trader here, for five years, for $1,700 per annum. He is to fence it all, and is now engaged in that work. Mr. Sherburn came here five years ago a bankrupt, is now lessee of about two-thirds of the reservation, has a fine stock of goods, and nearly two thousand head of cattle.

In preceding letters mention was made of Kaw and Osage polygamy. But a comparison of these tribes and the Poncas and Otoes is greatly to the credit of the former. The Poncas have a number of polygamists—how many could not be definitely ascertained, not are the instances always known. The practice is open and acknowledged, sanctioned by usage and sufferance, and if it has not many open advocates it certainly has few or no assailants. All acquiesce in it; none attack it. The Otoes are worse. Out of about fifty families ten polygamous ones were named as well known, with the admission that there were probably several others. Probably one-third of all the married men in the tribe have more than one wife.

The interpreter, a fat, lazy hulk, sat in the agency store taking his ease while his wives drew several barrels of water from the well to haul home. He then got in the wagon and one of his wives drove the team. Their marriages rest upon agreement, are usually made up by friends, and the young couple have less to say concerning it than any others of the tribe. Friends of the groom propose to the friends of the bride. The question of price then comes in. Ponies, calico, etc., are given by his friends to hers. If any uncle, cousin, or other near relative opposes the match it is delayed or broken off. Usually a few extra presents softens the objections. A feast follows. Separations have not been common in times past, but two cases have occurred in six weeks in which the husband abandoned his wife and children and married another woman. Unless the tribe council breaks up these practices the Government will soon be compelled to take action.

Their funerals partake of the veriest savagery. A prominent Otoe died a week ago. A large crowd of his male friends staid in the woods all night beating a drum and performing incantations. They came to the house of the deceased next forenoon nearly naked, twenty of them having sticks as large as a cedar pencil stuck through the skin and flesh of their arms in many places, and thus naked, bloody and daubed with paint, escorted the remains to the grave with beating of drums and howling of men.

The body was placed in the grave in a sitting position, the mouth of the grave covered over with logs, dirt piled on these, and a horse killed on top of this. The horse must be the best which can be procured, and it is choked to death on the grave. If the dead man had one or more relapses prolonging his sickness, the horse must be tortured in a similarly slow manner. After the burial comes horse-racing and feasting. All friends of the family are expected to make presents of calico and other articles.

An Otoe scandal of the first water has just occurred. A school-girl was recently married to a man much older than herself against her wishes. She soon after ran away with her former youthful lover. The deserted husband was irate and about to follow on the war-path. A council was called, and many of the friends of the runaway couple sat up with him all night attempting to allay his anger. One of them gave him his finest moccasins and leggings, another a brooch, and others still other presents, till he said his heart felt better; his heart was not so bad as it had been, and he finally said his "heart was all right now," and they might come back. "She was dead." This Otoe custom might be a sensible one in some white communities.—Ponca Cor. St. Louis Democrat.

It regulates the Bowels.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude, cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the surgeon's knife.

It relieves in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venereal Disease and Mineral poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many testimonials, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 32 ounces, or to 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

How Watch Cases are Made.

This process of manufacture was invented by James Boss, who started in business in 1854, and the methods and tools used in making these watch cases are covered by patents. This is the only watch case made under this process. For many years the introduction of these goods was slow, owing to popular prejudice against "plated" goods, but gradually the public learned that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case was not a cheap gold-washed or electro-plated article, but was made of genuine gold plate of standard quality and thickness, and its uniform adherence to the determination to make the best watch case ever put on the market, and the adoption of every improvement suggested, has made the James Boss Gold Watch Case the STANDARD.

In this watch case the parts most subject to wear—the bow, crown, thumb-catches, etc., are made of solid gold.

Send 2 cent stamp to Keystone Watch Case Factories, Philadelphia, Pa., for handsome illustrated pamphlet showing how James Boss' and Keystone Watch Cases are made.

WE DO NOT CLAIM

that HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the field of its usefulness is quite as extensive, and we are as warranted in recommending it for all disorders and derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

Why Suffer with Salt-Rheum?

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt-Rheum on my limbs, for a dozen years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack open, bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (in the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured. I used one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla in all, and have been free from Salt-Rheum and from all itching. Hoping many others may learn the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I am,

Very truly yours,

General News Summary.

Interesting Home and Foreign News.

CONGRESS.

A bill to remunerize several States for interest paid on war loans was reported favorably in the Senate on the 28th. The Mexican pension bill was taken up, the pending question being upon Mr. Logan's motion to strike out that part of the amendment proposed by the Senate Pension Committee limiting pensions to ex-soldiers and ex-sailors who are dependent in whole or in part on their own labor or assistance from others. A motion to lay the amendment on the table was agreed to—yeas 40, nays 20. A clause of the bill as it came from the House repeals that section of the Revised Statutes that prohibits pensions to soldiers who engaged in the rebellion against the United States, but limits the repeal to cases coming under this act. The Senate committee recommended striking out the citation, but the Senate by a vote of 35 yeas to 23 nays laid the amendment on the table. Pending debate on further amendments to the bill the Senate adjourned. In the House the morning hour was dispensed with, and the House went into Committee of the Whole on the legislative bill. Mr. Cobb offered an amendment increasing collection districts from eighty to sixty-three, and increases the force at the pension office. The bill was then read by paragraphs for amendment. Without reaching a conclusion, the committee rose and the House adjourned.

IN the Senate on the 29th ult. Mr. Beck presented a memorial from the members of the Southern Exposition at Louisville, asking an appropriation of $25,000 on account of Government exhibits. The conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill was submitted and agreed to. The District of Columbia appropriation bill was taken up, discussed and passed. The Senate then went into executive session, at the close of which it adjourned until the 2d. In the House, the Speaker announced Messrs. Dorsheimer, Tucker, Reagan, Collins, Eldridge, Bingham, Cannon and Laird a commission on the part of the House to make arrangements for the dedication of the Washington monument. A bill to prohibit patenting unearned land grants was ordered printed and recommended. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the legislative bill. Several amendments were agreed to, after which the committee rose and reported the bill to the House. The previous question was ordered, but without further action the House adjourned until the 31st ult.

CONGRESSIONAL proceedings were unusually dull on the 31st. The Senate was not in session, and the House consumed the time in business of no general interest. A resolution was adopted authorizing the Committee on Indian Affairs to investigate the disbursement of the Cherokee fund and other matters in the Indian Territory, including fencing of lands for stock raising purposes, after which the time was consumed in discussing a bill granting the right of way through the Indian Territory to the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Railroad, which was finally passed. The House bill was passed restoring the law of 1867 in the matter of appeals from Circuit Courts to the United States Supreme Court in habeas corpus cases. Adjourned.

DOMESTIC.

A BROKEN wheel wrecked a coal train on the 28th near West Melton, Pa., on the Shamokin, Sunbury & Lewisburg road, fatally injuring the fireman, Perry Strauss. Twenty cars were destroyed.

THE Red Cross relief boat John V. Throop left Evansville, Ind., on the 28th, on her last trip up the Ohio with supplies, which she will distribute to the upper end of the Ohio river, where the steamer will be discharged, and Miss Barton and assistants take a train for Washington. This will close the active labors of Red Cross during four months in the floods of the Ohio and Mississippi.

THE M. E. General Conference at Philadelphia on the 28th adopted as the sense of the Conference that divorces shall not be granted except for adultery, and any one divorced for such reason, if he be the guilty party, can not be married again by any minister of the church. The conference also adopted a report declaring it to be the policy of the church that no member of any society within the church shall be excluded from public worship in any and every edifice of the denomination, and no student shall be excluded from any school of the church on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

REPORTS made at the annual meeting of the American Congregational Union in Boston on the 28th show the number of churches in Michigan to be 240, Ohio 230, Illinois 250, Iowa 140, Kansas 200, Minnesota 150, Nebraska 100, Dakota 55, Oregon 20, California 100. In 1,200 towns west of the Mississippi River there is no Protestant preaching. The home missionaries occupy that field. In Minnesota there are now eighty churches without a sanctuary and there are 700 regularly organized Congregational Churches in the country that have no meeting houses. Last year $100,000 were raised for the churches. The new West Institution Commission reported thirty-seven schools established, sixty-two teachers and 2,500 scholars. The American Missionary Association reported under their supervision eight colleges, 1,200 schools and 230,000 scholars.

COLONEL J. O. P. BURNSIDE, disbursing clerk of the Postoffice Department at Washington, has been dismissed from office and placed under arrest on the charge of having embezzled $47,000. Of late he had been speculating with Levis, the missing oil broker. It is mentioned as a singular coincidence that Burnside's immediate predecessors, McCartney and Armstrong, were also defaulters.

A FRIGHTFUL accident occurred at Knupp's tunnel on the South Pennsylvania Railroad, in Westmoreland County, Pa., on the 29th ult. While a large force of men were engaged in excavating the tunnel, about 100 feet from the main entrance, a heavy scaffolding gave way, instantly killing nine men and seriously injuring eleven others. The victims were principally Italians.

HEAVY frosts visited portions of Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Northern Pennsylvania and Western New York on the night of the 28th ult., causing great damage to fruit, grain and vegetation.

IT was reported in New York on the 29th ult. that President Eno of the Second National Bank, who lost several millions in Wall Street operations, had eluded the officers who were watching to arrest him, and sailed for England.

A BILL to abolish the contract system of labor in the State prison was defeated in the Massachusetts Senate on the 29th ult. Senator Whittier swore he was offered $1,000 to absent himself when the vote was taken on the water and gas bill.

THE Union Deposit Bank of Greensburg, Pa., owned by David Tintsman and John Walker, has suspended. Liabilities $100,000.

FRANK H. CUSHMAN, second teller of the Merchants National Bank at Providence, R. I., has absconded with $5,000 of the bank's funds.

THE Harmony (Pa.) Savings Bank has closed its doors on account of the failure of the Penn Bank, in which much of its money was tied up.

S. S. HALL was convicted at Christiansburg, Va., on the 30th ult. of the murder of C. A. Bowyer in 1870. He was sentenced to be hanged August 8.

DECORATION DAY was observed throughout the country with more than usual manifestations of interest. Fine weather generally prevailed, and city and hamlet vied with each other to do honor to the Nation's dead. At Annapolis, Md., and Fredericksburg, Va., the Union and Confederate veterans united in the decoration ceremonies.

REPORTS from Eastern Ohio and Western Pennsylvania indicate great damage to early vegetables by frosts on the 29th and 30th ult. In some sections ice formed a quarter of an inch thick. Farmers report corn, wheat, potatoes and tomatoes badly frozen.

AT Albany, N. Y., on the 30th ult. a German woman named Caroline Schreifer, while insane from the loss of a bank book, murdered five of her children, and running with the oldest child, nine years old, threw herself in front of a train on the Central Railroad and was killed. The child had an arm and leg crushed and cannot survive.

DWIGHT WEBBER, town clerk and treasurer of Coventry, Conn., and probate judge of the Coventry district has disappeared leaving a shortage of over $6,000 in his accounts.

A CAVE-IN under the track of the Reading Railroad at Turkey Run, Pa., on the 30th ult. imprisoned seven miners. Twelve of six collieries idle. All traffic on the railroad was suspended. The body of a workman buried had not been recovered.

THE gangway of a tunnel in a colliery at Ashland, Pa., caved in on the 30th, burying George Story, a miner. Fifty others escaped.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM E. DOVE, of Company K, Twelfth Regiment United States Infantry, was drowned while crossing the River at Fort Niagara, New York, on the 29th ult.

HON. PETER KISER, formerly a member of the Indiana Legislature, has applied for a divorce from his wife on the ground of cruelty and neglect. They have been living together forty-two years, Mr. Kiser being in his seventy-eighth year.

THE Belmont coal mines in Northern Alabama, have suspended on account of the Grant & Ward failure. U. S. Grant, Jr., was the principal stockholder.

THE shops of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, near Chicago, were partially burned on the 30th ult.

HEAVY frosts did great damage all over New England on the night of the 29th ult. In the strawberry district around Taunton, Mass., the crop is said to be quite ruined. In Northern New Hampshire several inches of snow fell. Around Norwich ice a quarter of an inch formed and all the crops which can be killed by cold were ruined.

TWO boilers in the saw mill of Wood & Thayer in Montcalm County, Mich., exploded on the 31st ult., instantly killing Wesley Ammon, Augustus Newman and M. Mathews, and fatally injuring Charles Sauers. Three other men were also badly injured. It is reported that the wife of one of the men killed was so crazed by the shock that she cut her throat.

THE well-known banking house of D. W. Middleton & Co., of Washington, suspended on the 31st ult., with liabilities of $500,000, and comparatively small assets. The depositors embrace many army and navy officers and newspaper correspondents. Among the heaviest creditors is Mrs. Hutchinson, widow of the late President of the Alaska Fur and Seal Company, who had about $100,000 in the bank.

THE delegates to the convention of coal miners of the third pool at Monongahela City, Pa., on the 31st ult., decided to strike against the quarter cent's reduction in the mining rate. Fifteen hundred men will be affected.

FOLLOWING is the statement of the New York associated banks for the week ended May 31: Loans decrease, $3,529,000; specie increase, $475,600; legal tenders increase, $2,102,400; deposits decrease, $8,214,000; circulation increase, $56,000; reserve increase, $4,631,500. The banks are $1,977,625 below legal requirements.

A SHORTAGE of $22,000 in the accounts of J. F. Hoyt, cashier of the Butler County Savings Bank at Millerstown, Pa., was discovered on the 31st ult. There will be no criminal proceedings, as Hoyt has turned over all his property, and the firm of Dennison & Hoyt, oil brokers, made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors.

D. C. O. HOWARD, charged with robbing a bank at Monmouth, Ill., was arrested at Waukesha, Wis., on the 31st ult. on a telegram from the Monmouth authorities. He confesses his identity, but is reticent regarding the crime.

THE scale of wages for iron workers was signed at Pittsburgh on the 31st ult., by the conference committee of manufacturers and the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers. The result is regarded with great satisfaction in business circles.

For the seven days ended the 31st the failures reported in the United States were 151, Canada 26, total 177: a decrease of 55.

STATE Superintendent of Public Instruction in New York, Hon. William B. Ruggles, has just rendered a decision that religious exercises "constitute no legitimate part of the public schools of the State of New York."

A FIRE in Paducah, Ky., on the 31st ult., destroyed Riekis' store and the Knights Templar's hall. The falling walls demolished three smaller houses. Loss $50,000.

SNOW fell to the depth of an inch on the 30th ult. from Kane to near Irvington, Pa., along the Pittsburgh & Erie Railway.

THE Garfield Memorial Hospital, recently dedicated at Washington, has received a number of liberal donations in the form of free beds. Among others Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell donates $1,000 for a memorial bed to be known as the Schuyler Johnson Bed. All the bed linen needed for the hospital was contributed by Miss Coleman and Mrs. Willcut, wife of the proprietor of the Oneida Mills, New York; and the Wallingford and Middleton Silver Plate Companies, of Connecticut, contributed silver plated ware sufficient to supply the entire hospital.

THE body of the murderer Johnson, hung at Napoleon, O., on the 29th ult., was stolen from the grave with the coffin on the night following the burial.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

THE Wisconsin Democratic State Convention met at Madison on the 28th and organized by electing L. R. Larson, of Eau Claire, as permanent chairman. Strong resolutions favoring a reduction of tariff duties were adopted. Delegates-at-large to the Chicago Convention: William F. Vilas, James G. Jenkins, E. S. Bragg, J. M. Morrow. The delegates are for Tilden, if he will accept.

THE Kansas Democrats met in State Convention on the 28th. John T. Burris was elected chairman. Resolutions favoring tariff reform and declaring for Tilden and Hendricks were adopted. Governor G. W. Glick, W. C. Perry, T. P. Fenton and Thomas Hudson were chosen delegates-at-large.

SAMUEL M. SHOEMAKER, of Baltimore, ex-Vice President of the Adams Express Company, and one of the pioneers of the express business in this country, died on the 1st, aged sixty-three. He was largely interested in railroads and steamboats all over the country, and owned the largest and most valuable collection of Jersey cattle in the United States. He leaves a fortune estimated at $3,000,000.

FOREIGN.

THERE was a fierce encounter on the 29th ult. between the Kossuth and Government parties near Erlane, Austria. Five persons were killed and many wounded.

THE race for the Derby at Epson Downs on the 28th resulted in a dead heat between St. Gatien and Harvester. Time—2 minutes, 46 1-5 seconds. The race was not run off, but the stakes were divided. This is the first time in the history of the Derby that a dead heat for the first place was recorded.

A LONDON dispatch of the 30th ult. says a serious fire occurred at Phuanpenk, the capital of Cambodia. The whole quarter outside the French concession was destroyed. Among the buildings burned were 105 houses belonging to the King. Three persons perished.

DANIEL T. SULLIVAN and Timothy Harrington, members of Parliament for County Westmeath, have been presented with £700 each from their constituents.

HEAVY frosts were general throughout Canada on the 29th and 30th ult., causing much damage to crops.

THE Earl of Aylesford, the Texas cattle king, had his leg broken in two places while returning from the Derby races. He is said to have been intoxicated.

LONDON was excited on the evening of the 30th ult. by two dynamite explosions, one outside the detective office in Scotland Yard, which blew off the corner of the brick building to the height of thirty feet; the other outside the Junior Carlton Club House in Pall Mall, resulting from a bomb thrown into the basement of the club house at the back of St. James Square. No one was killed though several were injured and property considerably damaged. It is stated that the police have unearthed a large quantity of explosive material in the vicinity of Scotland Yard.

THE Tramway Company's stables at Glasgow burned on the night of the 31st ult. and two hundred horses perished.

THE French Chamber of Deputies, by a vote of 345 to 91, rejected the amendment of Bishop Freppel to the army recruiting bill, exempting from military service young men training for holy orders.

AT Lillie, France, on the 1st the car of a captive balloon, containing twenty persons, fell forty meters. Three of the occupants were killed outright, and the remainder severely injured.

JOHN C. ENO, the absconding ex-President of the Second National Bank, was arrested on the steamship Vancouver on the 31st ult., just as she was leaving Quebec for Liverpool. He refused to be taken to New York voluntarily.

LATER.

THE steamer Wave sank twenty-five miles above Wilmington, Del., on the 1st. The colored cook —— Beebe, Lucy Graham, colored, and Emple Hill, white, were drowned. The accident was caused by the shifting of the cargo while the steamer was rounding.

AT Arkansas City, Ark., on the 2d ex-Sheriff Bankston, recently tried in Memphis for bigamy and discharged, had an affray with a lawyer named Coats, who prosecuted him. Coats was killed and Bankston mortally wounded.

A DISPATCH of the 2d from Guamas, Mexico, says that five States have declared war against President Gonzales on account of the revenue stamp tax. Troops were being concentrated in the interior.

THE Oregon State elections took place on the 2d. Indications point to the election of Herman, Republican, to Congress by 1,500 majority.

AT the blast furnace of the Cleveland (O.) Rolling Mills, on the 2d, Dennis Bryan and Frank Fauta, laborers, met with a terrible accident. Fauta was knocking out the plug of the big crucible, holding fifty tons of molten metal and the red hot mass escaped so quickly as to surround the two men before they had an opportunity to escape. Both were fatally burned.

THE Senate on the 2d passed the House bill authorizing the construction of bridges across the Wisconsin, Chippewa and St. Croix Rivers in Wisconsin. Mr. Sherman presented a memorial from the Cincinnati Industrial Exposition, asking for an appropriation of $25,000 in aid of the exposition. A concurrent resolution of the Louisiana Legislature was presented, expressing the gratitude of that State to the Senate for the passage of the Blair education bill. The House bill fixing the rate of postage on mail matter of the second class when sent by persons other than publishers or news agents, was passed in the same shape it came from the House, except that the newspaper limit of weight for one cent postage was extended to four ounces. Bills were passed: To establish a forest reservation at the head waters of the Missouri River and headwaters of Clark's Fork of the Columbia River; providing for the execution of Article 2 of the supplemental commercial treaty of November 17, 1880, between the United States and China for the repression of the opium trade. Adjourned. In the House Mr. Eldridge introduced a bill fixing the 23d of June as the date of final adjournment. The legislative appropriation bill with the amendments reported by the Committee of the Whole, was taken up. Most of the amendments were agreed to and the bill passed—yeas 138, nays 46. Pending action on a motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill repealing the internal taxes on tobacco, and brandy distilled from fruits, the House adjourned.

ESTATE OF MONAGHAN MINORS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, s. s.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 5th day May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of George A. Monaghan and Clarence C. Monaghan, minors.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Robert B. House, guardian of said minors, praying for license to sell the real estate of said minors, described in said petition, for reasons therein set forth.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 9th day of June next, at ten o'clock, in the forenoon, and that the next-of-kin of said minors, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ESTATE OF ROBERT W. KING.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Friday, the 16th day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Robert W. King, minor.

On reading and filing the petition of Abner Wilson, guardian of said minor, alleging that said minor has now attained to the age of fourteen years, and praying that his resignation (now on file in this court,) may be accepted, that his final account as such late guardian may be allowed, that he may be ordered to pay over the estate in his hands belonging to said minor to his guardian, when appointed, and for his discharge.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 23d day of June next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said minor and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 5, 1884.

A NEW VOLUME.

This week's issue of the HERALD is the first number of the thirty-fifth volume. For thirty-four years it has pursued the even tenor of its way. It began its career on a humble basis as a seven column folio, printed on a Washington hand press, with an office not exceeding one thousand dollars in value. It has grown with Tecumseh's growth and strengthened with Tecumseh's strength, until to-day it represents one of the most complete printing establishments in Southern Michigan. In saying this we utter no word of reflection upon the many other excellent newspapers of Lenawee county. No county in the state, of its size, can boast of better newspapers, and we congratulate ourselves upon the fact that the HERALD is enrolled in so good a journalistic company.

Newspapers, no less than other branches of trade, are governed by the pendulum-like movements of business. When farmers, and traders, and manufacturers prosper, newspapers prosper in the same proportion. When business depression overtakes the general community, newspapers feel the effect. Our experience during the past year has demonstrated that fact. But we have no cause to indulge in despondency or forebodings for the future. The present depression will be short lived. There is no reason to expect a repetition of the hard times which followed the panic of 1873. This season's crops promise an abundant harvest. People in all branches of trade are economizing in their expenses, liquidating their indebtedness as rapidly as possible, planting themselves upon a sound and stable basis, and preparing themselves to profit by the general revival which is sure to come at no distant day. The HERALD is fully prepared to meet whatever issue may come, and is fully equipped to respond to all demands that may arise with the return of prosperity. And we look forward to the thirty-fifth year of our existence feeling confident that it will be one of the most prosperous ones in the HERALD'S history.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

Perhaps before this paper reaches its readers, the contest at Chicago will be decided. From the present outlook, it is impossible for an outside spectator to predict the result with any certainty. Two or three facts can be sifted out of the mass of turmoil in which the convention is now plunged which may throw some light on the situation. Blaine has the most personal strength, and is without doubt the choice of the Republican states. Could he carry New York against Tilden? This is doubtful. The Arthur influence will slaughter Blaine if possible. Is it strong enough to accomplish its purpose? Probably. Hence we conclude that Blaine's nomination is not probable although it is certainly among the possibilities. Arthur's strength lies among the office holders and the Southern delegations. He would be the strongest candidate in New York, but a weak one in Ohio. The Blaine influence will antagonize him to the bitter end and possesses both the disposition and strength to defeat him. Hence Arthur's nomination is hardly possible. John Sherman, when the break comes, will gather in the bulk of Arthur's vote and many of Blaine's supporters. He will run stronger than any other man in Ohio and will have a fighting chance in New York against Tilden. The convention will not venture on any dark horse experiment. Any dark horse would be beaten out of his boots with Tilden at the head of the Democratic ticket. John Sherman is the coming man; that is, if the longest heads of the convention shall control its action.

Fully 500 people were in attendance at the semi-centennial observance of the township of Medina, Monday. The exercises were held at Oak Grove academy, near by the ancient village of Medina. The address of welcome was made by Mr. Orson Green, followed by Dr. Hamilton, of Tecumseh; E. D. Allen, of Morenci; Thos. F. Moore, of Medina, and Rev. Warner, of Frontier, the latter to the manor born, having been ushered into the world 49 years ago in the new settlement. Music and an old fashioned dinner completed the exercises. The celebration was a grand success.—Hudson Gazette.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The Delegates all Present and the Work to be Begun in Earnest To-day.

Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, Chosen to Preside Temporarily Over the Convention—Organization of State Delegations.

LATEST.

CHICAGO, June 3.—The situation in the Presidential canvass is very much simplified. All the delegations are now on the ground, including New York and Pennsylvania, whose coming has been looked forward to with some interest. The negotiations which were carried forward in the interest of the respective candidates yesterday makes it clear that the adherents of the six candidates, namely Arthur, Blaine, Edmunds, Sherman, Logan and Hawley, have made a fair measure of their strength, and deem that the present aspect of the fight warrants them in standing by their men.

The most ardent of the Arthur and Blaine men do not now claim a majority of the convention. The highest figure mentioned for Blaine is 399 and the highest for Arthur about 325, but conservative advocates put the figures for both under three hundred. This is necessary in view of the stand taken by the Edmunds, Logan and Sherman men. The friends of the Vermont Senator are in high feather over the possibility of his nomination and contend that he has developed unexpected strength in all the Northern and Western States, and has even acquired some votes in Missouri. So strong are they in their faith that a caucus of all their adherents was called this morning. It was attended by all Vermont, nearly all the Massachusetts and New Jersey delegation, a portion of New York, including Andrew D. White, Theodore Roosevelt, John T. Gilbert and George William Curtis, and portions of the Rhode Island, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan delegations. The caucus numbers about eighty-five, and the Edmunds people contend that they hold the balance of power and can summon 100 votes, which, if their estimates are correct, and the Sherman and Logan men stand by their colors, the convention will unquestionably result in a deadlock. Logan forces have been instructed to remain by him, and the Ohio men who are for Sherman, numbering somewhat more than one-half the delegation, declare that all overtures which have been made them have been ignored, and that they will certainly remain by him through the numerous ballots in the present belief that the fight as it stands is to any man.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE.

The National Republican Committee resumed its session at noon. Joseph E. Lee appeared as proxy for W. W. Hicks, of Florida. The sub-committee reported through Horace Davis, Chairman, to which was referred the case of the contesting delegation from the First Georgia District. The report declares that the committee considered only the proceeding in the district convention as bearing on the prima facie case of the two parties and did not go into the merits of the split prior to the conventions. They find the proceedings of that convention of an irregular and turbulent character with very conflicting evidence as to its merits but the committee deemed on the whole that a prima facie case was with Alexander S. Wilson and Lawrias Blue and their alternates. Mr. Dexeaux moved as an amendment that the matter be referred to the Committee on Credentials and that no name be placed on the rolls. Lost. Mr. Deveraux then moved as a substitute that the names of Johnson and Green be placed upon the roll. Defeated. The report of the committee was then adopted. Senator Jones reported verbally in the matter of the First Alabama district in favor of Messrs. Slaughter and Trest. The report was adopted without debate. Senator Platt reported in the matter of the contest in the Twenty-second Pennsylvania District, putting upon the rolls Magee and Flynn. Adopted without debate. With respect to the contest in the Twenty-first Pennsylvania, the committee recommended that neither Sayres nor Wentling be placed on the rolls. This would leave Mr. West as the only delegate from this district whose seat was not contested. The committee reported that neither Sayres nor Wentling had been regularly elected. Senator Jones asked if the committee intended to disfranchise the district. Mr. Magee thought that as the Presidential preferences of two of the contestants were the same, both should be admitted and given half a vote each. A vote was taken upon the report of the committee and it was adopted.

Mr. Runnells, of Iowa, in the matter of the Sixth New York District, reported in favor of John J. O'Brien and Matthew H. Brady. The report was adopted without debate. In the matter of the Nineteenth New York the same committee reported in favor of George Campbell and Herman Griggs. Adopted without debate. In the matter of the Fifth Kentucky the committee reported in favor of admitting Silas F. Miller and John Mason Brown. Adopted without debate. The same action was taken in favor of Edward Farley and P. C. Bragg. In the matter of the Second Illinois, Senator Aldrich submitted the majority report in favor of admitting W. S. Powell and W. E. Kent. Mr. Kent, of Maine, submitted a minority report in favor of W. H. Rugger. Mr. Cook, of Illinois, moved as a substitute that the names of Ruger and Piper be inserted instead of names reported by the majority of the committee.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.

Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, has been elected as Temporary Chairman of the Republican National Convention.

There was considerable excitement last night over the selection of Clayton as temporary chairman of the convention. This feeling was confined mostly to the delegates opposed to Blaine, but there were a number of Blaine adherents who express dissatisfaction at the choice of a National committeeman. So intense, indeed, was the feeling upon this subject that a plan is on foot to attempt to defeat Clayton in the convention to-day and elect Hon. B. K. Bruce, colored, Register of the United States Treasury, in his stead. The feeling in some quarters is exceedingly bitter, and that a strong effort will be made to compass Clayton's defeat seems very likely.

A MEMORIAL ADDRESS.

The programme of the Blaine managers for to-day has been mapped out, and the ammunition with which the war will be carried on has been prepared. It consists of a pamphlet or memorial addressed to the National Convention, which memorial will be extensively circulated, 25,000 copies having been stricken off. The circular is as follows:

To the National Republican Convention:

The Republican districts of the State of New York, under the rule of direct popular representation, have declared emphatically for James G. Blaine; and this is their message to the National Republican convention: Blaine can get more votes in the State of New York than any other man, and can carry the State triumphantly. All analysis of the Republican representatives in the National Convention, on the basis of the Presidential vote of 1880, shows that from President Arthur's own State a decided majority of the delegates to the convention are opposed to his nomination; that the overwhelming preponderance of delegates from districts giving Republican majorities is for Blaine; that twelve Republican districts and four Democratic districts are for Blaine; that five other districts send Edmunds or anti-Arthur delegates; while but five Republican districts send delegates for Arthur, the large majority of his support coming from ten Democratic districts; that in the Blaine districts there is an aggregate of 65,718 Republican majorities, against 17,456 Republican majorities in the Arthur districts, with 3,756 Democratic majorities in the Arthur districts.

These facts and figures are conclusive, that in New York as in other States where electoral votes may be given to a Republican candidate for President, the direct Republican expression is in favor of James G. Blaine's nomination; indeed, that he is the accepted leader of the Republican party to a sure victory.

With full confidence that with James G. Blaine as the Republican standard-bearer the State of New York will give him its electoral vote, the undersigned delegates from that State commend the above statement to the favorable consideration of the National Convention.

Chicago, June 2, 1884.

The Ohio delegation at its meeting yesterday afternoon did not enter into the question of candidates, but simply organized and elected a member of each committee without any disagreement or contest. The following was the choice: Chairman, J. B. Foraker, Delegate-at-large; Secretary E. L. Lampson, Nineteenth district, member of Committee on Resolutions, William McKinley, Jr., Delegate-at-Large; member of Committee on Credentials, Mark A. Hanna, Delegate-at-Large; member of Committee on Permanent Organization S. Craighead, Fourth district; member of Committee on Rules and Order of Business, Alphonso Hart, Eleventh district; Vice President, Edwin Cowles, Twenty-first district; Assistant Secretary of the Convention, Clarence Brown, of Toledo. Captain A. L. Conger, of Akron, was elected Ohio member of the National Committee to succeed W. C. Cooper. A. C. Hord, of Cleveland, was offered the secretaryship of the delegation, but declined to serve.

The talk to-day has disclosed the fact that there are a good many delegates here who would be glad to cast their votes for General Sherman. He is often mentioned, and never without an admission from all within hearing that he would make an excellent candidate. It is thought by some that if the emergency arises he would reunite the different factions better than his brother John or any one else who had been named.

The Arthur men are building their hopes on securing the Edmunds vote when the distinguished Vermonter is out of the race, and on the other hand the Vermonter's earnest friends, who think that Arthur is already beaten, are expecting that when the "break-up" comes the friends of Arthur will rally around the Edmunds standard. That Arthur is weaker than he was a week ago is apparent, but this may be on account of lack of leadership. Two or three of his most ardent friends admitted to me that Blaine had much better generals here to handle his forces and direct the movements than had Arthur. Instead of endeavoring to solidify the South for him, his friends have been fishing for delegates in the Northwest, where the fishing was poor. Then they had relied too much on the New York business meeting and on the circular issued by some business men in Chicago, but the Blaine men claimed that a Blaine circular would be signed by men of as high standing, and that if a petition for Blaine were circulated in Chicago it would receive the signatures of two-thirds or three-fourths of the Republicans. The Logan men seem to have done Arthur much damage in the South, by seducing his delegates and weakening him where he was strongest.

There can be no question of Logan's popularity and strength among the Southern delegates, white and colored, and especially the colored. The Logan people are more confident than ever, and believe that if his delegates only stick to him through thick and thin they will draw from both Arthur and Blaine enough votes to land him in the White House. That is their hope and expectation. The time may come when Logan can nominate Blaine, but his friends are determined that his delegates shall vote for him on the last ballot as well as on the first, even if the last ballot nominates somebody else.

Arthur's friends do not admit any indications of a collapse, but the opinion is generally gaining ground that the President's strength has sensibly diminished during the last day or two. Virginia's contesting delegations continue to be a bone of contention. Dezendorf, the leader of the straightout Republicans, arrived yesterday. In regard to their position and intentions he said: "We intend to demand admission to the convention at the hands of the convention itself, on the ground that we are the regularly elected and constituted delegation from our State, and to submit and argue our case before the Committee on Credentials, on whose report the convention will finally take action. We believe we have a good case, and no doubt our claims will be duly considered and finally acknowledged. The action of the National Committee in taking an adverse view does not amount to anything. The committee has really no deciding voice. I suppose its action is simply due to the fact that we made no efforts to have the facts laid before it, while one of the Mahone delegation is a member of the committee, whose influence, no doubt, decided the committee, but we have no doubt that the convention will reverse that decision."

Among other prominent accessories of a good, healthy boom are brass bands, glee clubs, special railway trains and printer's ink. The last is employed in a great variety of ways—portraits, placards, posters, newspapers, pamphlets, addresses, badges, etc. Nor should the faithful chronicler of facts omit to mention the demijohns and boxes of cigars, which like the gates of Gospel grace, "stand open night and day." To any one who may wish to study the rise and growth of the boom, Chicago now presents an inviting field, as it contains a number of them in all the various stages of development.

PRESIDENTIAL FAVORITES.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning the Men Who Stand Closest to the Chief Executive.

Visitors who, from curiosity or business, have called at the White House, must have been impressed by the courteous yet systematic manner with which they were received and escorted through the mansion. The gentlemen whose duty it is to receive all persons coming to the White House are Colonel E. S. Dedmore, Mr. John T. Rickard and Mr. T. F. Pendel, and they have occupied their present positions through the various administrations since and even during the war. Mr. Pendel was President Lincoln's body-guard, saw him to his carriage the fatal night on which he visited Ford's theater, and he now has in his possession the blood-stained coat which Mr. Lincoln wore on that memorial occasion. There is not a public man in America to-day who does not know, and who is not known by, these gentlemen, and the reminiscences of public and social life which they can recount would fill a congressional volume. During the weary yet exciting years of the war; through the more painful days of Grant's administration; while Hayes held the reins of government, and when Garfield was shot, it was these men who stood in the executive mansion, welcoming the advent of each new administration bowing at its departure, and receiving both martyrs through its portals.

During that long, hot and never to be forgotten summer when Prerident Garfield lay between "two worlds," the nation became aware of the deadly malarial influence which hung about the White House. But all through that period these three men never deserted their posts for a single day, although each one was suffering intensely. In conversation with the writer, Colonel Densmore said:

"It is impossible to describe the tortures I have undergone. To be compelled to smile and treat the thousands of visitors who come here daily with courtesy when one is in the greatest agony requires a tremendous effort. All that summer I had terrible headaches, heartburn and a stifling sensation that sometimes took away my breath. My appetite was uncertain and I felt severe pains in the small of my back. I was under the doctor's care with strict instructions not to go out of the house but I remained on duty nevertheless. You would be surprised to know the amount of quinine I took; on some days it was as much as sixteen grains."

"And was Mr. Rickard badly off, too?"

"I should think he was. Why; time and again we have picked him up and laid him on the mantel, here in the vestibule, he was so used up."

"Yes," exclaimed Mr. Rickard, "I was so weak I could not rise after lying down without help, and could only walk with the aid of two canes and then in a stooping position. Oh, we have been in a pretty bad condition here, all of us."

"And yet you are all the embodiment of health," said the writer as he looked at the three bright and vigorous men before him.

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Rickard, "we have not known what sickness was for more than a year."

"Have you some secret way of overcoming malaria and its attendant horrors?"

"I think we have a most certain way," replied Colonel Densmore, "but it is no secret. You see, about two years ago my wife began to grow blind, and I was alarmed at her condition. She finally became so she could not tell whether a person were white or black at a distance of ten feet. One of her lady friends advised her to try a certain treatment that had done wonders for her, and to make a long story short, she did so and was completely cured. This induced me to try the same means for my own restoration and as soon as I found it was doing me good I recommended it to my associates and we have all been cured right here in the stronghold of malaria and kept in perfect health ever since by means of Warner's Safe Cure. Now I am not a believer in medicines in general, but I do not hesitate to say that I am satisfied I should have died of Bright's disease of the kidneys before this had it not been for this wonderful remedy. Indeed, I use it as a household medicine and give it to my children whenever they have any ailments."

"Yes, exclaimed Mr. Pendel, "I use it in my family all the while and found it the most efficient remedy we have ever employed. I know of very many public men who are using it today and they all speak well of it."

"I weigh 160 pounds to-day" said Rickard, "and when my physicians told me over a year ago I could not hope to recover I weighed 122 pounds. Under such influences you cannot wonder that I consider this the best medicine before the American people."

The above statements from these gentlemen need no comments. They are voluntary and outspoken expressions from sources which are the highest in the land. Were there the slightest question regarding their authenticity they would not be make public, but as they furnish some valuable truths for all who are suffering, we unhesitatingly publish them for the good of all.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 5, 1884.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

The Republican politicians are all in Chicago this week.

Go and see the first game on the diamond to-morrow afternoon.

Minor Davidson has been drawn as a juror for the United States Court at Detroit.

School was dismissed last Friday, and both teachers and pupils enjoyed a holiday.

Rev. W. P. Wastell, of Clinton, paid his respects at the HERALD sanctum last Tuesday.

The stores were all closed during the Decoration ceremonies last Friday afternoon.

Regular meeting of Tecumseh lodge F. & A. M. to-morrow evening. Work in third degree.

Claude VanTyne is now the owner of a very fine Columbia bicycle. He is becoming an expert rider.

The interior decorations and exterior painting upon Baker & Hall's store gives a decidedly city air to the place.

The saloon keepers of Adrian paid $50 of the $100 rent which Forepaugh was obliged to put up for the use of Lawrence park.

Most of the stores about the village were gaily attired with bunting last Friday and the national colors were displayed in profusion.

Henry Jones has been the express agent here for twenty-one years and he has never lost a single package through any neglect of his own.

The most beautiful store window on Memorial Day was Gainsley & Co's. The display of red, white and blue silks and satins made an elegant show.

Newberry Satterthwaite owns one of the best steppers in town, and a nobby rig throughout. We had the pleasure of testing the speed of his pony the other day.

A new iron cornice and window caps have been placed on the three stores of Baker & Hall, Geo. Merritt and Wm. Arnold which add greatly to the appearance of the block.

The G. A. R. boys desire to extend their thanks to Mr. E. E. Koch for the free use of lumber used for the Decoration exercises, and to all others who kindly assisted them on that day.

Next Sabbath will be observed as "Children's Day" at the Presbyterian church. Appropriate services will be held in the morning and a Sunday School concert will be given in the evening.

The Ladies' Social of St. Peter's church will meet on next Wednesday evening at the residence of Mrs. S. W. Temple. This will be a "blue" social, and a pleasant time is anticipated.—A general invitation is extended to all.

A special excursion will leave Adrian for Portland, Oregon, and return, on Tuesday, June 17th. Tickets only $132.00 for the round trip and good for thirty days. For further information address, J. H. Blain, Adrian, Mich.

Elijah Wilson, on Saturday last, finished driving the spiles for the big bridge over the Raisin at Palmyra.—He begins work this week on a new bridge over Evans creek near James Hanford's farm in the west part of this township.

Last Friday afternoon, after the Decoration exercises were over, L. F. Wheeler took a group picture of the members of Beers Post. There were nearly fifty members in the group and it is one of the finest pictures of the kind we ever saw. Nearly every face is perfect. The G. A. R. boys will prize it highly.

To whom it may concern:—If the person who sent me a communication through the mail, under date of June 2nd, will substantiate the allegations contained therein, over his own signature, I will take the necessary steps to try and remedy the evil; otherwise I shall do my duty as I understand it, and take no notice of anonymous letters.
JEREMIAH ROOT,
Pres. Village of Tecumseh.

Thos. Adamson arrived in Tecumseh last Friday evening from the Pacific coast. During his trip he traveled quite extensively through California, Oregon, and Washington territory, having been on the route nearly eight months. At Walla Walla, Washington territory, he met Jack Hendry, who was at one time the head miller in Hayden's mill, and who is now running a mill at Walla Walla.—Tom enjoyed his trip very much and is welcomed home by a host of friends.

Children's day is becoming a fixed institution with some of our churches. Next Sunday will be so observed by the Baptist Church and Sunday School in Tecumseh. There is to be a Sunday School Concert in the evening appropriate to this season of seeding. In the morning a short sermon to the children by the Pastor will be followed by addresses by Dr. Geo. Ferguson and Dr. I. S. Hamilton. Members of the Sunday School will occupy the front body seats. Admission free to all.

OOVER THEM OVER.

A GRAND CELEBRATION OF MEMORIAL DAY AT TECUMSEH.

Formal Dedication of the Soldiers' Monument, And Decoration of Graves at the Cemetery.

The Memorial Day Ceremonies at Tecumseh on Friday last were in every respect worthy of the occasion. The Manchester Cornet band came down on the morning train and at eleven o'clock the band with with a delegation of the G. A. R. proceeded to the M. & O. depot and escorted the Eaton Post up to the Lilley House where dinner had been prepared for them. Shortly after dinner teams began to pour into the village from all directions and the streets were soon lined with people.

Promptly at half past one the procession was formed on Chicago street under Chas. A. Slayton, Marshal, and H. H. Keyser, Assistant, in the following order:

Manchester Cornet Band.
Company C, M. S. T.
Drum Corps.
Eaton Post, No. 222, G. A. R.
G. A. R. Colors.
Beers Post, No. 140, G. A. R.
Citizens in Carriages.

The procession moved east to Ottowa street and thence north to Military square where the general exercises of the day were held. The Monument had been beautifully trimmed with floral emblems and a commodious platform had been erected near by. This was reserved for the Officers of the Day, Members of the Common Council, the Choir, the Clergy, Officers of the Monumental Association, and a few of the pioneer residents. Upon arriving at the Monument, the assemblage was called to order by L. P. Tribon, President of the Day, and the following program was then carried out.

Music by the Band.
Invocation by Rev. W. H. Babbitt.
Quartette by Messrs. J. S. Strong and H. C. Conkling, and Mrs. Bidwell and Mrs. Morley.

Hon. J. J. Adam, President of the Monumental Association then formally transferred the monument to the G. A. R. which was accepted by Commander S. P. Hosmer.

This address was mainly a history of the slow progress by which the money was finally raised to pay for the monument erected by permission of the village council on the center of military square.

The first movement towards raising such a fund was commenced about June 17th, 1865, about a month after peace was declared, by starting a Fourth of July dinner, to which the citizens of the six adjoining towns were invited and took more or less part. A statement of the net proceeds of the dinner was afterwards made and published, showing the amount realized to be $264,10.

A great ado was made and talked about the raising of $500 and over by the sale of a large bouquet, sent by a lady in Adrian to be donated to the soldier who had served the longest of any one in the union army. The bouquet was auctioneered off by "Uncle Sim" Davidson to some twenty-six or more individuals at all sums from $25 or 20, 10 or 15, 1 or 2 dollars; but no five dollars of it ever reached any officer of the Monumental Association, or can be found out. In Nov. 1865, $314 was paid over to Webster Anderson, Treasurer of the Association by Geo. W. Ketcham, Ex. Com., and in December same year, $100 was paid in by Tecumseh Lodge, 69, F. & A. M. So that out of over $1200 said to be subscribed by others to the Monument Fund, not over $50 was ever realized and paid over to the Treasurer of the Association, beyond the $264 from the Fourth of July dinner.

From the $414 put into the hands of W. Anderson, Treasurer, he seems to have let it out to the best advantage as shown by the following statement made June 10, 1879:

Int. from Village of Tecumseh,	$237.50
" " G. Curtis & W. Hayden	54,74
" " W. Anderson	95,83
" " U. S. notes	14,21

being the interest received for the thirteen and one half years during which it had laid in Mr. W. Anderson's hands; making with the $414 of principal received by him, the sum of $815,78 for which he holds the receipt of W. C. Fitzsimmons as Treasurer. This was loaned out to Mr. Hayden at 8 per cent. for a while, and afterwards for a time at 6 per cent. Mr. Hayden had paid to Fitzsimmons $129,88 for interest on the money loaned to him. That was left on his Bank book as credited to the Soldier's Monument Fund.

If that interest money paid in by Mr. Hayden had been used, as it should have been, in paying for the monument, there would not have been any necessity for a subscription by Mr. Brewer and others, to make up the amount again to finish the payment for the monument, as follows: H. Brewer, $25,00; John J. Adam, 25,00; W. C. Fitzsimmons, 25,00; Wm. Hayden, 25,00; E. Hause, 10,00, A. Anderson, 10,00; C. A. Wright, 5,00; D. McNair, 5,00; C. A. Slayton, 5,00—$135,00.

The only money now in the hands of the present treasurer is $12,98, being the second dividend on the money left standing to the credit of the Monument Association on the Books of the People's Bank. What furtherdividends may be made from the assets of that bank, or from hundreds of virtually outlawed claims, is not now known and cannot be foretold at present.

Then followed music by the band, prayer by Rev. J. Phelps and the ceremony of dedication by the G. A. R. This ceremony was somewhat extended, but very impressive and appropriate and it was carried out under charge of Commander Hosmer in a beautiful manner.

Rev. G. W. Hudson then gave his address. It was an able effort, and a fitting completion to the exercises of the day. We take pleasure in giving this address to our readers in full.

THE NATION'S DEBT OF GRATITUDE.

MR. PRESIDENT, SOLDIERS OF THE G. A. R., FELLOW CITIZENS, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I think myself happy to be present here to-day, and to have witnessed these impressive ceremonies. I see around me a large concourse assembled to commemorate the deeds of those who laid down their lives in defence of their country. I see before me representatives of all the surrounding towns, men who have contributed of their substance to erect this memorial, and who are here to-day to witness its dedication. I see before me battle scarred veterans who fought and bled in the great army which conquered the rebellion, I cannot be insensible to the honor conferred upon me in being chosen to stand in such a presence.

This, my friends, is a day for devout thanksgiving and gratitude. Wherever the people meet throughout this broad land they meet as citizens of one common country. Wherever they dwell they obey the same laws and respect the same constitution. The same flag floats above them all.

When the dying patriot turns his eyes to behold for the last time the sun in the heavens he does not see that sun shining on the broken fragments of a once glorious union, on states dissevered, discordant, belligerent. On the contrary, he sees that sun beaming down upon a united and happy people, a community of prosperous commonwealths stretching from the Atlantic on the east to the Pacific on the west, and floating over all he beholds the grand old ensign of the Republic with not one stripe erased, nor a single star obscured, flashing out from its ample folds as it floats over sea and land that sentiment dear to every American heart—liberty and union, now and forever, one and inseparable.

But not always has this welcome sight greeted the last gaze of the dying patriot. The time was when traitor hands hauled down that flag in some of these states, ran up another in its stead and declared the union of states dissolved. The time was when the dying patriot closed his eyes and breathed his last, with the old flag obscured by the smoke of a conflict waged for the destruction of the union. To whom are we indebted for the rolling back of the tide of battle and the preservation of the old flag in its pristine splendor? To whom are we indebted to day for the prosperity of this American union?

Doubtless we owe the establishment of this union to the patriots of the American revolution. By their suffering and privation through seven long years of war, by the blood which trickled from their lacerated feet as they marched over the frozen highway, or which was poured like rain on many a hard fought field, they laid the foundation of this Republic sure and strong. We owe much of our prestige on the seas to the brave tars who fought in the war of 1812. It is equally certain that for the growth of our union from thirteen to thirty-eight magnificent states, we are indebted to the hardy pioneers, who, with no capital but their rifles and axes and their own brawny arms, pressed out into trackless forests and brought them under the dominion of civilization. But for the preservation of this union we are indebted to the brave men who rallied around our flag when those who had once fought under its sacred folds were seeking to trail it in the dust. Yes, for the peace and prosperity which we enjoy to-day we are indebted, under God, to the 300,000 men who laid down their lives on southern fields and to those battle scarred veterans who marched home in triumph after the victory was won.

All honor to the statesmen who stood by the ship of state when it was tossed by the fierce winds of rebellion. Great was the service which they rendered to their country. Far be it from me to abate one tithe of a hair from their just meed of praise. Especially will this redeemed nation ever hold sacred the memory of him who was called to take the helm in those troublous times, who fell at the wheel just as the old ship had cleared the breakers and was steaming into the haven of peace. Never can this nation forget the martyred Lincoln. But strong as was Lincoln in his steadfast resolution to support the constitution and preserve the union, strong as were the able counselors whom he gathered around him, they were powerless to stay the onrushing tide of disunion. The air was full of traitorous plots, state after state was withdrawing from the union, traitor hands were hauling down the nation's flag, and traitor bands were taking possession of the forts and arsenals of the government, while they, the sworn defenders of the union, were without armies, without navies, without money and well-nigh without credit. It seemed doubtful at one time whether they would be able to hold even the national capital and carry on the government. And worst of all, many declared and sincerely believed that there was no power under the constitution to bring back the rebellious states.

What was it which first gave courage to our statesmen, and strengthened the hands of our chief magistrate in that trying hour? What was it but the prompt response of the people to the first call for soldiers? How strange seemed that call to arms in a land so long accustomed to the reign of peace! But the old flag had been assailed, and the people felt that it must be defended at whatever cost. Husbands and fathers said, "our country calls, but how can we leave home, who will care for our families?" Wives responded, "obey your country's call, defend your country's flag, die if need, God will care for us!" Mothers gave their sons, and with the spirit of the Spartan mothers of old exhorted them never to turn their backs to the foe. Sisters gave up their brothers and maidens their lovers to become a prey to the disease of the camp and the missiles of the battle field. The echoes of that first call for soldiers had scarcely died away until the ranks were more than full. And still others were clamoring every where to be sent to the front. It was this that made our rulers feel that they had still a country or at least the hope of a country. It was this which inspired them with courage for the gigantic task of conquering the rebellion. The zeal of these first recruits shot the first gleam of light athwart the gloom of the nation's peril.

But the rebellion was not crushed when the ranks of that first call were full. Call followed call in rapid succession, campaign followed campaign, yea, many disasters were mingled with our hardly-won victories. Rank after rank melted away before the deadly missiles of the foe and the almost equally destructive shafts of disease. Every breeze which swept to the north was freighted with deaths of fathers, deaths of husbands, deaths of brothers, deaths of sons and deaths of lovers, until there was scarcely a home in the loyal north over which the wing of the death angel had not cast its shadow, until from all the land there was heard one universal wail of sorrow, like that which went up from the land of Egypt when God smote all the first born of the land from the first born of Pharaoh who sat on the throne down to the first born of the captive in the dungeon. Truly, it did seem that He who scourged Egypt for the oppression of his people, Israel, was scourging us for the oppression of the poor enslaved negro race. Nor was this all. Millions upon millions of treasure were sunk in the vortex of civil strife, excessive burdens of taxation were rolled upon the suffering people. The national debt rose and swelled until it approximated the magnitude of the great burdens of the warring nations of Europe. Never was there a more destructive war. Never did its dread consequences fall more heavily upon a people. The men who were falling at the front were not hirelings sent out to fight our battles for us, but our own loved ones, members of our own households. The treasures which we were spending were not the surplus of a wealthy people, but the hard earnings of the toiling masses.

The fall of '64 came on. For three long years and over the war had raged with varying fortunes. From many hearts the bitter wail was going up to heaven, "How long? O Lord, how long." The soldiers at the front were singing as they sat in their tents and thought of the hot work yet before them:

Many are the hearts that are weary to night,
Waiting for the war to cease,
Many are the loved ones longing for the light,
To see the dawn of peace.

Nor was it sung by the soldiers alone; it was sung amid tears and sighs at home by those who had given up their choicest treasures to become the prey of war, and who were praying for the dawn of peace in order that those who had escaped the harvest of death might return in peace to their homes.

In that dark crisis the presidential election came on. Some did not hesitate to pronounce the war a failure, and counseled the people to vote against the administration which stood pledged to its prosecution. It was an awful crisis. The government was on the rack, the loyal people were bleeding at every pore. How tempting was the suggestion to end the bloody strife, spare the further effusion of blood and treasure, and call home loved ones from the perils of the battle field! "What ought to be done?" was asked by many fathers and brothers whose hearts were as true to the union as the magnetic needle to the pole.

Many knew not what it were best to do. In that dark hour the voice of the soldiers at the front, more than any other argument, turned the tide of discouragement. They knew better than any others the horrors of the strife. Upon them its heaviest burden rested. Had they been actuated by selfish motives they would have sent word to their friends and neighbors at home to vote for peace, that they might lay down their arms and return to their homes. But from all the ranks of the union legions, from the trenches in front of Richmond and Petersburgh, from the trenches in front of Charleston, from the bloody fields around Atlanta, from everywhere, came the stirring words: "No compromise with traitors." "The war must go on." "The union must and shall be preserved." These words fired the hearts of kindred and friends at home. And when election day came an overwhelming majority of the people said, "The war for the union must go on." That verdict of the loyal people echoed in thunder tones throughout the disloyal south and made the confederacy totter to its fall.

I believe that I but voice the sentiment of every patriotic heart when I say, that to the brave boys who were at the front in the fall of '64, more than to any other class of our people, are we indebted for the prosecution of the war to a successful issue. Certainly it was their strong right arm which brought the final victory. This then is the proud record of our brave boys in arms. Their enthusiasm strengthened the hands of our rulers in the dark days of '61. Their unconquerable resolution nerved the hearts of the loyal voters in '64. Their sturdy blows crushed the life out of the slaveholders' rebellion in '65. Said I not truly, therefore that to them we are indebted under God for the preservation of the union?

To-day we are reaping the harvest which those patriotic men so unselfishly sowed, aye, which they watered with their own tears and blood. The dark clouds of war have rolled away, the clash of resounding arms has long since died away. The states which fought so bravely to get out of the union, are now in the union, not as conquered provinces, but as members of the great sisterhood of states, and we are bound together, not by the iron fetters of a military despotism, but by the ties of common interest and nationality. Better still, our people are united and prosperous. We may travel to the most exterior southern border of our great land and we there, find the true hearted, brave American citizen. Those who were lately arrayed against one another in deadly strife now meet and strike hands as fellow citizens and friends. Those who wore the blue go down to the south and are honored and feasted and treated to the best the land affords, by the very men whom they helped to subjugate. Those who wore the gray come north and fare equally well at the hands of their former enemies. The soldiers who fought for the union have their reunions and dedicate their monuments. Those who fought for the south do the same, among themselves. They have sometimes had their reunions and demonstrations decked in their gray, and with their halls draped in the bonny blue flag. But amid it all there is the utmost good feeling. But very few of those who once fought against the union could be induced to-day to take up arms against the stars and stripes. On the 30th of May, in many portions of our country, without doubt, the confederate soldiers will march along side of those who were loyal and true, and they will scatter together the fragrant flowers upon the graves of those who died for the union. Never has the world witnessed such scenes. O, if the spirits of the dead participate in the cares and concerns of this life, then I know that the spirits of those who died for the union, which escaped through the ghastly wounds of civil strife and soared away from earth's conflicts, look down with satisfaction upon these talking of peace between the north and south and feel that they did not die in vain.

Yes, we have a united country, a country from every section of which echoes the song of contentment and the hum of peaceful industry. The bands of our great federal compact bind together willing states, and the burdens of government rest upon willing subjects. But more than this, we have now a free country. Our grand old Declaration of Independence is no longer a beautiful sentiment, but a glorious truth embodied in our national constitution. When the haughty form of the Great Rebellion fell before the sturdy blows and thrusts of liberty loving freemen, the lash of the task master fell powerless to the earth and the shackles fell forever from the limbs of every human being, and for the first time in our history as a nation the heavens bent above and domed a land without a serf, a servant or a slave.

For all these blessings of freedom and peace and good will which we are now enjoying to-day we are indebted to the men who preserved our union, who with courage, with enthusiasm, with devotion never excelled fought the battles of the republic. Never can we forget their noble self-sacrifice. Therefore do the people assemble once a year on this 30th of May with the honored survivors of the union armies, and march with solemn tread to the cemeteries to scatter fragrant flowers upon the graves of our union dead. Therefore do they erect monuments to the memory of these dead.

But now let me not mistake the purpose of this day. We do not carry the flowers to the cemetery with any idea of adding fresh glory to the names of the nation's dead. We might as well think of adding fresh glory to the bright orbs which beam down upon us from the midnight sky. They are far above our praise or our blame. They are the nation's now, forever famous because of what they have done. No! we simply bring these flowers as the free will offering of a grateful people. And how appropriate the simple ceremony, the fragrance of the beautiful flowers beautifully symbolizing the incense of gratitude rising from our hearts in memory of the heroic dead.

Nor do we erect these monuments with the idea that even they can add anything to the glory of the fallen, nor yet with the idea that they are necessary to preserve the memory of the dead.

It was my privilege some years ago to wander through Mt. Auburn cemetery in the suburbs of Boston. As I wandered along the beautiful avenues of that cemetery and noted the costly monuments which mark the precious dust deposited there, I naturally sought the grave of the distinguished Sumner who lies buried there. When I found it, I saw only a simple green mound of earth and a modest slab of marble with the word "Sumner" engraved upon it. I felt at first a sense of disappointment. After having looked upon such costly monuments over the graves of men of less note, it seemed strange. Then I thought with myself, what if there be no monument? Yea what if this grave were unknown and this dust of the great champion of equal rights, buried in the depths of the sea? Would Sumner therefore be forgotten? That name is written upon some of the best pages of our country's history, it is stamped upon the life of this great nation, it shines forth among the loftiest names on our proud temple of fame. What need of a magnificent monument to perpetuate such a name? What monument indeed could do justice to such a name? The simple name is monument enough. That name, as if by magic, presents to the mind of the beholder, a monument grander far than sculptor's chisel ever fashioned, a monument which Sumner fashioned with his own hand.

Even so with the dead whom we honor to-day. No monument can do them justice, much less add lustre to their fame. The simple name "Soldier of the Rebellion" is all the monument they really need to perpetuate their memory. That name, as if by magic, presents a glorious monument which they fashioned with their blows, a race rescued from the thralldom of slavery, a republic rescued from the death throes of disunion. This is a monument which insures them remembrance throughout the ages of the future.

Why then the monuments? To keep fresh our memory of their deeds; to keep alive in our own bosoms the flavor of patriotism. This monument, and the exercises of this Decoration Day are for us and our children to remind us of what others have given for our country, so that when our children ask us about their meaning we can recount to them the noble deeds of the nation's fallen heroes, and thus kindle in the young hearts the flame of patriotic love and devotion to their country.

But are these fragrant flowers and this monument offered only in memory of the dead? By no means. They betoken the gratitude of our people to all who stood in the shock of battle. Soldiers of the rebellion, although your lives have been preserved, you too have lived on the tented field and made the long weary march and stood guard in the silent hours of the night with the stars. You remember to-day the fields of carnage, the ghastly wounds and dying groans of your fallen comrades. Aye, well do you remember, for many of you bear upon you the scars of the awful conflict. You too, left home and friends at your country's call. You too, stood where the battle raged most fiercely. Your empty sleeves and halting gait prove that you laid down your limbs, if not your lives, and poured forth your life's blood, if not your souls, upon the altar of our common country.

Noble battle-scarred company! Your sacrifice was none the less complete because you escaped the deadly missiles of the foe. You are with us only because Heaven decreed you a happier fate than to those on whose graves we drop the flowers to-day.

To you therefore, who still pitch your tents on the broad tented fields of earthly strife, no less than to those who now camp where no martial reveille can ever disturb their peaceful repose—to you no less than to them are due the grateful offerings of a united and prosperous nation. To you no less than to the honored dead are this monument and these fragrant flowers the grateful tribute of a grateful people. Kindly has Heaven smiled upon you indeed, in that it has preserved you from deadly missiles and the shafts of disease, to behold these offerings of a grateful country.

All over our land our soldiers' monuments glitter in the sunlight; all over our land the exercises of this day are calling the people from the busy marts of commerce, and from the scenes of daily toil, to think upon the heroic deeds of the soldier who fought to preserve our union. All over our land mothers are recounting to their children the story of those deeds. Far be the day when these monuments shall crumble. Still further be the day when our people shall forget to assemble and recount the deeds of the brave and drop the fragrant flowers upon their graves.

With such monuments to remind us year by year of the heroic deeds and patriotic devotion of our fathers and brothers, with mothers who shall recount year after year these deeds to their children, we cannot become a degenerate people. Coming generations will catch the inspiration and will stand ready to sacrifice their lives for our country's welfare. Thus the heroic deeds of the past will produce golden harvests of heroism in the generations to come; and thus our heroism and patriotism will keep pace with our national prosperity. The grand old stars and stripes will wave over the teeming millions of coming centuries, from Maine to California and from the lakes to the gulf, with not one stripe erased nor a single star obscured.

Music by the band followed and the benediction was then pronounced by Rev. C. E. Conley. Three cheers were given for the donors to the Monument fund, and three volleys were fired by Company C.

The procession reformed and marched to the cemetery. They halted at the circle and broke ranks, when a squad of the G. A. R. proceeded to different parts of the ground and deposited upon each soldier's grave a beautiful wreath or bouquet of flowers. At the conclusion of this ceremony the military marched back to the village and broke ranks.

The entire program from first to last was carried through without a blemish. The ranks of the G. A. R. Posts and Co. C were full and the boys seemed to have caught the inspiration of the occasion, for they never kept step to the music better. The dedicatory ceremony was grand and beautiful. Rev. Mr. Hudson was "at his best." The choir rendered their quartettes splendidly. The band added new laurels to their reputation. The supply of flowers was ample in quantity and most beautifully designed and arranged.

Beers Post, G. A. R., under whose auspices the celebration was held, have reason to congratulate themselves upon the successful issue of their first observance of Memorial Day.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is most antly effecting the most wonderful cures, where the disappointed demand with which it meets, of things it has done, is the greatest magnet in the age for outward application.

The most intelligent are convinced, and the good sense of all are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Scalds, Tetter, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Sore Throat, Croup, Contracted Cords, Stiff Joints, Neuralgia, Scrofula, and all disorders accompanied with inflammation.

It proves itself the natural remedy in cases of the skin, for it is a perfect healer of all diseases of the skin. By this the disease-producing poison is expelled from the most malignant boils and tumors to every portion of the human frame. It penetrates home, muscle, vein, nerve and bone, is absorbed and made sensible to the soothing and healing influence. Hence it comes readily with life that as well as external disease.

Over 40 Years,

This ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that we have no space here to insert any of the numerous testimonials of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this ointment, to frankly make their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this, we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

Athlophoros

ATHLOPHOROS is a novel word to most people who speak the English language. The Greeks used it centuries ago, meaning by it "THE PRIZE BEARER."

ATHLOPHOROS is the first and only medicine which has carried off the prize as the perfect remedy for Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

Literally, it has been a marvelous success. Thousands who have been crippled with these agonizing diseases have been astonished at the power of this wonderful medicine.

ATHLOPHOROS has entered the arena, engaged the enemy, and in thousands of instances has been victory. In the competition in the arena of disease, it has only to be tried to win the prize of ease by giving immediate relief, and by between its enduring cure, as well to those who have suffered the excruciating agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

ATHLOPHOROS is a novelty, not only in name, but in its elements. It is unlike any preparation yet introduced.

ATHLOPHOROS acts on the liver, kidneys and joints, relieving the pores and acts from the blood, carries them out of the system.

ATHLOPHOROS is put up with consummate skill, and contains nothing that can possibly harm the most delicate constitution.

Now, do you want to suffer on and on? or do you want to be well?

"Athlophoros" WILL Cure You

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he has not it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

Odd, but Even.

It is quite a number of years since this old camel story trotted along the sands of time, so as the circus season is approaching it has been suggested that the Free Press start the ancient animal on its travels again. This is how it happened: Abou Ben Eli McGuffin, being full of years, died, leaving to his three sons his seventeen camels for the simple reason that he could not take them along with him. The will, duly attested, said the eldest was to have one-half, the second one-third, and the youngest one-ninth of the seventeen camels. The boys were a little perplexed at this, as it seemed to involve the cutting up of a camel, and camels were worth three dollars a day on the Sahara that season. But the boys, if not first-class mathematicians, had level heads and did not go to law to prove the old man insane, but went instead to the good old Cadi Hassan O'Donohue, who had taken a medal at mathematics at Ann Arbor.

"Boys," said the good Cadi, reproachfully, "you should not bother me with these little matters. Ask me a harder one."

But seeing they were troubled, the benevolent old man asked the hostler to trot out his own dilapidated camel, which had seen his best days traveling with Barnum as the Sacred Gnu of Persia.

Placing the aged brute with the seventeen camels the boys had brought along, he said:

"There are eighteen camels. I shall now give you half of the eighteen, which is nine. How does that strike you?"

"It hits me where I live," said the eldest, who was slangy, but withal pleased at getting half of eighteen rather than half of seventeen.

"The next boy shall have one-third of eighteen, which is six. Are you there, Moriarity?"

"You bet," said the boy.

"The next will have one-ninth of eighteen, which is two," and so the third youngster collared his two camels. Thus two and six and nine made seventeen, and still was the good Cadi's aged animal left unsheathed. The people marveled, as the Cadi had given each more than the will called for, which is rather unusual in courts of law. And they said one to another: "That's what it is to be good at figures."—Detroit Free Press.

Shinbones Mining Stock.

"War is dis hyar mine?" sez I.

"Right hyar on dis hyar map," sez he, pullin' out a big roll o' papah an' showin' it ter me.

"Now," sez he ter me, sez he, "we am a-goin' ter place dis stock onter de mahket at twenty-five cents a share. But as yo' am a fren' o' my fren' hyar, I'll let yo' hab all yo' can take at ten cents."

Wall, I 'lowed dat he war mighty kind, an' he 'quested me not to mention it. I tole him I nebber guy anything away. I thought I'd better not put de whole treasury in dat one stawk, so I tuk a hundrid shares, makin' ten dollars. Bless yo' haint' dat berry afternoon de stawk went up ter twenty-seven cents. I went ter my fren', an' sez I, "Don't yo' tink I betterah sell out?"

"No, no, shinbones," sez he ter me; "it's a-goin' highah."

Shuah nuff, de nex' day it war up ter thirty cents, an' people war a-buyin' of it like mad. I wanted to sell out agin, but dey sez hole on, an' I kotched a fresh holt and triz right onter it. Nex' day 'twas up ter thirty-three cents, an' I wanted ter sell out agin, but dey say, 'Hole on and yo' git a dollah a share.' Wal, de nex' day I went ober ter de Minin Exchange an' dar I seed a man wot I knowed, an' he sez ter me, "Luk at dat blackboard dar." I looked an' read onter it dat dar war an assessment o' one dollah per share onter my stawk. I went right ober ter my fren's ortis, an' sez I ter he, sez I:

"I want my hundred dollahs."

"Wot yo' talkin' 'bout?" sez he.

"Assessment—dollah a share," sez I, smilin' kinder.

"Luk hyar," sez he, "assessments is war yo' pay us."

"Wot pay yo'? Wot fur?"

"Ter forrard development wuk on de mine. Par's on'y a little hole in de groun' dar now, an' we want ter make it biggah so's we kin git out de gold."

"But I hain't got no hundred dollahs," sez I ter he, sez I: "how's I gwine ter pay yo'?"

"Wal, onder dose cahcumstances, as yo' owe us ninety dollars, we will take back de stawk an' call it square."

"Yes, sah," sez I, handin' him de stawk an' mighty glad ter get rid of it, "but whar does I come in?"

"Yo' don't come in 'tall, yo' go out."

"Go out?"

"Yes, sah, right out'n dat doah;" an' he tuk me by de sho'ldah an' gimme de perlite bounce. An' now yo' know why de Aircicty's got ter bust."—N. Y. Times.

—In a late address, Prof. Wiley gave the result of his investigations to decide the question: "How far north may the sugar industry extend?" He believes that the success of the sorghum sugar industry will not be found so far north as many of his friends had hoped and many of his developers prophesied. It is yet early to give a definite answer but at present he inclines to the opinion that the isothermal lines for September, October and November that pass through Cape May, N. J., should be considered the northern boundaries of successful sugar culture.—N. Y. Post.

—A little over forty years ago Colonel J. J. Warner, of Los Angeles, Cal., made a visit to his old home at Mobile. While there he made a speech, in which he said the next time he came it would be by rail. The remark was copied in the papers, and was everywhere regarded as a joke or the fancy of an enthusiast. On his arrival in New Orleans the other day, without change of cars, he called the attention of his friends to the "alleged joke."—N. O. Times.

HERALD OFFICE.

FOUR POINTS

Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD.
Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS.
WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC.
WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing: use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes to be soaked, rubbing plenty of soap in the worst soiled pieces. Be sure that the soaking water is hot; soak the clothes half an hour; stir them occasionally so that they may get the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them lightly out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil 10 to 20 minutes, rinse well, blue and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boiling by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Fannels and prints should not be boiled, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the wash-board, and being the best disinfectant known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury; the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press water out with the hand; boil 3 to 5 minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press carefully between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron between pieces of old flannel. Soak curtains 10 to 30 minutes and boil 5 to 20 minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, or pin every scallop to carpet over a sheet to dry; no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

Sold by leading wholesale and retail grocers everywhere. Dealers may obtain our goods upon application. ELECTRIC SOAP MANUFACTURING CO., Indianapolis, Ind., and 25-33 South Water St., Chicago, Ill.

CATARRH IN THE HEAD

TRADE MARK

Can positively be cured by using DR. P. HALL'S CATARRH REMEDY. A new compound, entirely different from all other preparations. It is in the form of a fine ointment which is easily applied in the nostrils and ears, and reaches the seat of the disease by absorption. Pleasant to the smell, and most efficient in operation. For Hay Fever, also impaired Hearing, Sight, Smell and Taste, produced by Catarrhal disease, it is a positive cure. The most noted Physicians and prominent Druggists all over the land have given it their endorsement. A Mormon Courtship.

The courtships of the saints are not always romantic affairs. Dr. Sharp, of this city, has four wives, and if he has good luck he will have another before long. During the last few weeks he has had a courtship on hand which has given him great trouble. He employed a girl named Mary White as a servant in one of his families. Mary was a fresh, plump, rosy-cheeked young Mormon. Her father was a saint with two wives. Mary was the daughter of wife No. 1. Wife No. 2 was gay and giddy, and when Dr. Sharp carried Mary back and forth between her father's home and the place of her service, he saw her and bewitched her, as White said. After a while Sharp enticed wife No. 2 away from her husband, and then White got an idea that the Doctor had bewitched him also. Another saint came along who was in the soothsaying business, and he told White that he had something that was good for him, but that it would cost money. The price was agreed upon. White bought the charm, worked it, and the evil spirit of Sharp was exorcised. Just as White was beginning to feel at ease once more, Sharp drove up with Mary and asked permission to make her Mrs. Sharp No. 5. To this the old people objected, for they believed he was possessed of a devil, and they thought he did not support his other wives any too well. When they gave Sharp the reasons for their refusal he was furious, and he took an oath in their presence that he would have Mary.

In the course of time he convinced the old man that it had been ordained from all time that Mary should become his wife; but the old lady said that the doctor had hoodooed her husband once more, and she refused to assent to the union. Then Sharp had a vision or two which he related to Mrs. White. She was still inexorable. Two or three days later he had a revelation that it would be very acceptable to the Lord to have Mary become his wife. It had no effect on her mother. Then Sharp dreamed dreams of mighty import every night, heard tremendous rumblings in the skies, saw a great light, and read many commands written on the fleeting clouds, all to the effect that Mary was his and his only. The old lady's teeth were set tight.

Taking a new tack, the doctor then threatened to summon Mrs. White before the High Council. She told him the Sanhedrim of the saints had no terrors for her. Then he appealed to the Bishop of that ward, and finding him dull of comprehension, he went before the Council with his grievance. Here he found sympathetic listeners. The old Bishop was promptly removed and a new one who believes in marrying off the young women, was appointed. Sharp is on good terms with the new ecclesiastic, and considers himself as good as married already. Mary is now at school at Provo, and Sharp has gone after her. The new Bishop is wrestling with her mother, who now sees the futility of further resistance, and who will in a few days, it is understood, formally consent to the union. In Mormon society this is considered a very romantic courtship. All Mormon love stories begin and end something like the above.—Salt Lake Cor. N. Y. Sun.

The Arbutus.

The arbutus is a flower of Nature's giving. Bred, as it were, from stormy skies and fed from the chill of ice and snow, theirs is nothing of the passionate beauty of the rose or the lily's regal stateliness. No gay coloring of greenhouse skill attracts us in these shy, uncultured children of woods and fields. Theirs is a quite another and different charm. Absolutely pure, as are the glacier flowers of the upper Alps; of colorless waxen white, or tinted with a blushlike pink such as might have graced some Puritan maiden's cheek in by-gone days, this is the typical flower of austere and granite-grounded Massachusetts. Their day is a brief one.

If arbutus is welcomed in town or city, its home is still in the country. Hidden in quiet hollows, among sheltering hills, or on deserted wood roads, where the warm spring sunshine creeps tardily in, unseen of human eyes, it most frequently and gladly grows. Nestling to the warm, earthy-smelling ground it springs from, covered with the sere, brown grasses of a dead winter, it lifts to the sun the smile of its white or pinken clusters in prophecy of the summer. It never intrudes. In these quiet nooks it waits always to be sought. Many a city sportsman, prepared to break the Sabbath laws with carefully chosen rods, is ready to forbear whipping unoffending trout brooks with impossible flies and bend over gray moss and little clusters, mindful, perhaps, of numerous promises to his expectant lady friends. To our novice each step is a discovery and a surprise. Treading gingerly, he stumbles on a low-lying, half-hidden cluster. He stoops to pick it. Mindful of feminine injunctions for "long stems" (which has nearly exterminated the flower in once plentiful spots), he pulls vigorously at the tough little vine. When it is his, he finds it enriched with flower buds he never dreamed of, strung along on this slender thread. He stows his prize, and on for the next. It is a chance if he finds himself alone. School children, boys and girls, for the nonce preternaturally quiet, are diligently working on the same errand as himself. At times he must dodge the enshrouding sun-bonnet of a mature damsel, whose basket somehow fills rapidly, if she picks much or little. Under gray skies, in "the uncertain glory of April days," seldom far from sad solemn woods or the twittering of venturesome birds, in a silence broken only by the sounds of awakening Nature or the shout of an occasional "find" the city's supply of arbutus is picked.—Boston Transcript.

A Maelstrom of Birds.

"Run wife! Go below, or they'll be dashed to pieces!"

The keeper of the Atlantic City Lighthouse was watching the hydraulic floating lamp in the top of the tall tower last night, and just brushed a speck from one of the plate-glass sashes through which the intense rays from the great fixed light that warned off all floating ocean life from destruction were streaming, when, turning his head in answer to a strange flapping and whirring noise, he uttered the exclamation.

"What shall I do?" asked the plucky little woman, who is in the habit of keeping him company during the early part of his vigils.

"Go for the net! Drive them off. Take my overcoat with you and save all you can!"

In the almost white-heat glow of the lamp, outside of whose radiance everything was impenetrable blackness, a spectacle was presented unequaled in any of Dore's grotesque imaginings. Through the light, like motes in a sunbeam and thicker, than mosquitoes, hundreds of dazed and frenzied birds, of various sizes, were circling and gyrating, performing a mad aerial dance around and round the lantern.

Mrs. Wolf came in directly. "I can do nothing with them," she said, "there are thousands and thousands of them." From out the bulging pockets of the overcoat birds began to fly, now dashing at the windows as if to get out again, and the three or four palpitating feathered mites she held in each hand began struggling to get free. They were of many hues, these Southern travelers thus arrested and carried out of their Northward migratory course, although in the fierce splendor of the illuminated arc outside they had all appeared luminous and white. There were robins, flickers, mud-hens, and a few rail-birds, and one poor little pee-wit, perching itself sociably on its rescuer's shoulder, uttered its peculiar note.

"Did you notice that scarlet tanager in the house as you came up?" asked Abraham Wolf, the keeper, of his guest, the scribe. "Well, that gorgeous fellow got here from the West Indies somehow. I picked him up in the net one night during a heavy thunder storm. The net, you see, is on the land side, where all the birds come, and keeps them from spattering their blood on the glass. But the wild ducks, they tear the net to shreds. We have had a few spring birds the last week or two, but this is the first large flock. Our house during the summer is nearly always full of them. We leave them loose and let them go where they want to. One night my wife and I took over 300 birds alive and let them go next morning. Rail-birds, cat-birds, wood-thrush, thistle-birds, and all the soft-billed fly-catchers are the most numerous, but we get almost every sort. I keep a record of their visits for the American Ornithological Society to help throw light on migration. I like to throw light on anything, you know—it's in my line."—Philadelphia Times.

Ducks.

These are easier to raise than chickens, are healthier and will make more of their own living on a farm than chickens.

They lay a large number of eggs, and with the exception of being bad mothers are better on the farm than any other poultry, are more easily kept out of the garden or places where their presence in not desirable. Being voracious eaters they destroy and eat large numbers of bugs that are injurious to growing plants.

It is a mistaken idea that they must have a pond of water for their special benefit. Although such a place may be very pleasant for the ducks, it can not in any sense be deemed a necessity. They generally commence laying in February, and will lay right along. When they are laying they should be confined as they are not particular where they drop ther eggs. If penned every night until eight o'clock in the morning you will have less trouble to secure their eggs. For hatching or setting I prefer hens. A duck rather enjoys running around too much, especially early in the morning when the dew is on, for the health and comfort of young ducks. They must also be protected from spring rains, and this the duck mother does not believe in, as a duck enjoys a good shower next to a pond. When young they must be watched, for if they by any accident get upon their backs they are not able to get upon their feet again without some assistance. They are hearty eaters, and should be fed early and often. Do not neglect them till late in the morning; they should be fed as early as possible. After they start to feather they grow very rapidly, and mature earlier than chickens. They can be picked two or three times during the summer, and on this account are more profitable to raise than chickens, and are really less trouble to raise. They should have plenty of water to drink, placed so that they can have access to it whenever they want it, and if sheltered from the hard spring rains and early dews until they fairly begin to feather they will require very little attention.

For the table they are far nicer than chickens; in fact, a brace of well-fattened ducks roasted nicely and prepared for the table are as good an article to satisfy the hungry man as anything I have tried.—Cor. Western Rural.

Snow-Shoes Worn by Horses.

Last Monday, on the line of snow-shoe travel between Del Norte and Summitville, a feat was performed probably never actually accomplished before in the West, or anywhere. The first heavy snow of the past season that blockaded the road between Baker's Station and Summitville caught a span of horses in Summitville, which could not be brought out through the heavy snow. These horses were the property of Mr. Brockman, a freighter, and remained in the camp until last Monday, when they were started for the outside world on snow-shoes. The shoes were made of wood, two inches thick, eight inches wide and eighteen inches long, and were fastened to the horses' feet by means of wires and straps. The fact that a horse steps almost in the same place with its hind feet that it does with its fore feet seemed to render such an experiment out of the question. The shoes were fastened on, however, and after a few days of practice in Summitville the horses learned the modus operandi of the scheme, and on Monday Mr. Brockman rode one horse out over from 50 to 100 feet of snow, while the second horse pulled a sled loaded with provisions over the same course.—Del Norte Prospector.

Humor in the Stomach.

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhœa and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statements of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

The discovery of ATHLOPHOROS as a specific for Rheumatism and Neuralgia was not an accident, but the result of inquiry into his own case, by a gentleman of wealth, leisure and scientific accomplishment, who had been long a victim of Rheumatism. His own cure proved his theories as to the nature of the disease, and the merits of Athlophoros as a specific for it. Then his friends tried it, and their friends. And so the circle widened, till now Athlophoros is recognized in every state as the surest remedy for Rheumatism and Neuralgia that has ever been discovered.

The 15th annual Convention of Detroit Diocese of the Episcopal Church convenes in Flint June 4.

A lady died recently in one of our large cities who is said to have danced with LaFayette. The great General must have devoted most of his time to the art, as this adds one more to the 50,000 reported to have danced with him. It requires a vivid imagination to believe this, but none at all to believe the assertion that ten tin es that number of ladies have used DeLand's Soda and Salaratus, and always with one result. Success in every particular.

ESTATE OF JOHN HENRY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 4th day of June in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

Present Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of John Henry, late of said county, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of Sophie Henry, the widow of said deceased praying for the allowance and probate of an instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to said petitioner, the executor in said instrument named, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 30th day of June, 1884 at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Cover Your Heads!

One week ago we opened our new Hat and Cap Department, and although we felt sure of the support of the public in our new venture we were not prepared to see our sales for the week fully double our expectations. Everyone should see our celebrated $1 Hat, which is sold by other dealers at $1.50. This Hat we make our specialty. We purchase such large quantities to supply our different stores that we can well afford to sell them at $1, and still have a fair profit. Our $1.50 Stiff Hats in all the latest shapes, other dealers' price $2. Our $2 and $2.50 Hats, from the best makers, and our $3, $3.50, $4 and upwards, are all fine imported English Stiff and Soft Hats. Every line we sell at 50 cents less than elsewhere in the city.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

Circus is our latest Pass word.

Harvey, the magician, left a good impression in the shape of a circulating library, composed of Harper's Franklin Square Collection, and assures good reading to the members, for one-half cent per week.

Whitney's family tent was crowded with the pleased everybody, and another one is coming.

J. D. Sheridan & Co., deem that dull times exact double energy; and accordingly have opened a branch store at Addison this week.

Most of our business men complain that trade is either dull or spasmodic; and farmers say butter is too cheap to be worth the making or eating, yet it takes the usual amount of forethought and work to conduct the first on a narrow guaged track, or procure bread to accompany the other.

More mental anguish is caused by diminutive figures than by decrease of quantity; and people wear poverty-pinned pockets, more because their magnifying glass of inflation has got shivered, than for reasonable reasons.

To a working woman the Panic picture will look gloomy or bright, according to the heart, light she hangs it up in. Some men say we have got to retrench if we expect to escape ruin; produce don't bring anything. That means, their wives can wear last year's hats and the children get along some how, if they wish to lighten the burden that lends the arch too much to manly shoulders. That certainly would leave extra change enough to pay for cigars, and most forms of retrenchment end in smoke. Taken as a class, women of energy don't take kindly to retrenchment because things are cheap. May be its because they don't have leisure to sit on the fence and examine the panic with smoked glass. Butter is as much a necessity at ten cents a pound as at forty, and sugar is sweet whether six cents or twice as much. Neither is a new hat less coveted or becoming because it is only half the price paid last year. True, the price paid for work, or profits of trade are less in figures, but they buy the same quantity. The country is full of goods and produce. To shrink all the comforts of home, and the happiness of a whole summer till it will not fit into the acorn cup of discontent only because commercial values are not written with larger numerals, will never attain popularity enough among women, to convert one from good sense to silly repining.

The average, noted by high figures, may be, and often is as disproportionate as lower rates; but why women should be expected to retrench expenses; because labor, produce, or everything given in exchange for either is cheap, is a puzzle of stinginess not worth fussing with.

RURAL RAISIN.

EDITOR HERALD:

Holloway is the name of a station on the Wabash R. R., and is situated in the township of Raisin, County of Lenawee, State of Michigan.

At certain seasons of the year a considerable amount of stock is shipped from this station, and occasionally a a car load of of wheat. All passenger trains stop when the flag is hung out or when some one wants to get off.

There are about a dozen dwelling houses in Holloway, a store, a blacksmith shop and a foundry. As yet the place contains neither church, school house nor hotel.

This hamlet is at present rather young and diminutive, but its prospects for the future are wonderful.

There is another small place situated at the junction of the M. & O. R.R. with the Ridge Road, called Ridgeway.

This is an old place and in point of population much larger than Holloway, and also possesses greater advantages in the way of schools and churches.

Now these two places, Holloway and Ridgeway, are about four miles apart, and as the houses in both cover only a small area of territory, there is of course between them a space occupied by neither. This space is called Country. Some of the country is in Raisin township and some of it is in Ridgeway township.

Villages or hamlets would thrive but poorly were it not for the country around them, and the future prospects of Holloway and Ridgeway are very much enhanced by their being surrounded by a splendid farming country.

Some time in the far distant future these two small places may become large cities and cover all the fine farms lying between them, but there is yet some country not occupied.

The Raisin Presbyterian church and cemetery are both in the country; they are both known, and the organizations chartered by the above names. Your Ridgeway correspondent talks about the Holloway cemetery, and your Holloway correspondent speaks about the Holloway church as the church at Holloway.

There are many hallowed associations connected with the Raisin Presbyterian church, and the remains of many of the pioneers who made Raisin what it now is, are resting in that pleasant spot called Raisin cemetery. Fifty years ago the church was founded and named. Fifty years ago the ground occupied by the cemetery was set apart for its sacred use.

Render to Holloway the things that belong to Holloway, and to Ridgeway the things that belong to Ridgeway, but please allow some of us who live in East Raisin to worship God in the church of our fathers, the old Presbyterian church, and may we not, after we have served our time here, be "laid at rest" in the Raisin cemetery.

ONSTED ODDS.

Frank Sheeler raised a large barn last Saturday.

William Wimple had a horse injured by being hooked by cattle a few days since.

A new barn yard fence adds much to the appearance of Henry Read's place.

The carpenters finished at Dr. Rosses house last Saturday. The lathers are there at work now.

Houses are in good demand here at present. Wm. Knapp moved into Wm. Onsted's new house on Monday last.

Harris & Evans have moved into their new barn where they will live while building their new house.

The township board of Cambridge township met on the 9th inst. and appointed Dr. J. Vaughan, health officer for the ensuing year.

Children's Day was observed at the church last Sabbath. The church was nicely trimmed and the exercises good. Missionary Concert same evening. Both were well attended.

Our neighbor, C. L. Vaughan of Springville, attended the Republican Convention at Chicago last week. He is reported to have said that he wanted to be on hand when they brought on the dark horses. We are sorry not to have an opportunity to vote for our townsman for President.

TIPTON TATTLE.

Having finished their daily labors on the M. & O. R. R., about thirty of the fence builders have taken the trouble of late to present in person their superabundant compliments to the citizens hereabouts irrespective of age, color, or former condition of servitude, and while they have been short in their evening visits and not particularly uncivil in their outward showings, for many of them were quite orderly and even good looking withal, yet we could but wish that the vocabulary from which they lifted a large share of their verbs, nouns and adjectives might be revised corrected and improved.

The "Children's Day" was well observed by the sunday school at the M. E. church last Sabbath. The sweet profusion of floral decoration and the delicate wreaths of evergreens were exquisitely beautiful, reminding one of Bunyan's delectable mountains and the bowery walks of paradise, and although the day was intensely hot and the house crowded, yet the exercises were exceedingly interesting and decidedly successful. The finest specimens of elocution among young people we have ever met are here.

Alice Seaman, after long and toward the last very severe suffering, died on the 7th inst. of inflammation in the region of the heart. Aged 25 years. The funeral services being held at the house on the 8th, by Elder Whitney, after which her remains were conveyed to the cemetery at Tipton to sleep the years away in dreamless repose.

Mrs. Pitcher lost a valuable and her only cow, last Saturday, which became suddenly ill and fell dead in the street.

Mrs. Isaac Smith has just returned home in good health after having spent spent the winter with her son at Evart.

RIDGEWAY RACKET

The heavy rain which came Monday night was much needed and did much good.

Wm. Riggs has moved to his new house east of the blacksmithing shop. He can now easily be found for business night or day.

Mrs. Laura Cheever has purchased the vacant lot of G. W. Jackson on which she will build a dwelling this summer.

Lewis Priest has returned to this town and will open up business with Purdy Haight. This arrangement ought to give us a first class shoe shop.

On account of the temperance meeting at the Christian church on Friday evening, this week, the church social has been adjourned one week. Rev. J. L. Hudson of Morenci addresses the temperance meeting and a large number from this way desire to attend.

Abe Hanford has been making valuable improvements about his new home—the John Waring place. Those in his road district put him in path master and the result is the turnpiking of the road nearly the whole mile, really more than has been done in several years past.

News of the drowning of Arthur E. Kalder near his home in Hillsdale Co. reached us Monday evening. Mr. Kalder taught the winter term of school here and made many friends especially among the young people. He was instrumental in starting the literary of which he was made president and its success was in a great degree due to his exertion and management. He was a young man of unusual promise and his untimely death seems very sad indeed.

"Just remember what I tell you. James G. Blaine will not be the next president of the United States". Geo. D. Arner. Ridgeway, Mich.

The Union party movement seems destined to take, in this locality, beyond the expectation of its most sanguine adherents. It is certain that the liquor traffic fears political organization, against them, more than any thing else and it is now believed by a great many that the nation will never prohibit the business until it is accomplished through a new party movement.

It may be of interest to some at least to know that G. W. Jackson has discovered a medicine that throws mineral water so far in the shade that it is of very little value compared with it. There is one objection to this new drug however; instead of enabling him to attend prayer meeting as did the mineral water, it is feared he will have to absent himself for a time at least, but his friends are anxiously waiting the result hoping for a complete recovery from the delicate state of health which he is now in.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Ed. Clark was home from Jackson the first of the week.

The citizens and band are making great preparations for the celebration of the 4th.

The telephone connection between this place and Detroit is practically useless: at least it is never in good working order.

Rev. Joseph St. John returned from the Diocesan Convention, which was held at Flint last Wednesday, and reports a very pleasant time.

Alonzo Clark went to Chicago for a few days last Saturday.

Mrs. E. W. Miller returned from her trip in the Northern part of the State last Monday.

Rev. Mr. Fisk of Nashville, Tenn., who was expected to preach in the Baptist Church last Sunday, failed to appear, and the Baptist people held no meeting in their church.

D. Woodward has a new sulky plow that is attracting the attention of farmers. The plow is forward of the driver.

A tile sluce-way has been put in the crossing on the street by the Congregational church.

A delegation of Masons from this town will visit their Milan brethren this Thursday evening.

A colored gentleman by the name of Lee was arrested on our streets Wednesday morning for vagrancy and drunkenness, fined $2.00 and costs by Justice Brown, and advised to make himself scarce. He went.

Once more the small boy gazes with rapture at the pretty pictures on the bill-boards and buildings, and this time the circus will hold forth in this town. Next Monday the date and Donaldson's the circus.

It is rumored that orange blossoms will very soon bloom in this community.

E. R. Smith's house on his farm at the school section, is progressing rapidly. It will be one of the model farm houses of this county when completed.

Married—At the residence of G. W. Wilson in this township, last Thursday, by the Rev. J. M. Kerridge. Miss Jennie Smith of this place and Mr. A. Sigler of Adrian.

Donaldson's circus will Sunday in this town.

Rev. J. W. Payne, who has been sojourning a few days at Morenci, will occupy the Baptist pulpit next Sunday, both morning and evening.

Carl Burton returned from Chicago last Tuesday morning and expects to remain here until Haverley's theater opens in the fall.

Dr. J. W. Burchard has a new safe. The country newspaper reporting business must be improving.

A pleasant time is reported at the Congregational church social held at the residence of Mr. Charles Green last Wednesday night.

Dr. Burchard has on exhibition at his store a very fine general operating case of instruments.

Willard Van Tuyle is in the bank during the absence of Mr. Clark at Chicago.

Dr. Burchard is extensively remodeling his residence.

Rev. J. L. Hudson, formerly of this place, now of Morenci, will preach at the M. E. church next Sunday morning and evening and at Macon in the afternoon.

The executive committee have been trying to secure Rev. C. T. Allen to orate here the 4th.

The delegates from this town to the county democratic convention were J. W. Bradner, R. B. Mills, George Goodrich and Richard Gillespie.

William Silvers returned from Kansas last week. He seems to be quite favorably impressed with that country. He says that vegitation is far in advance of our own state, and that wheat instead of being less, will be more than an average crop. Kansas has already become famed for the quality and quantity of her corn crop and the climate is pleasant and healthful. Mr. Silvers returns from that country fully impressed with the idea that the west and more especially the plains of Kansas, is the place for young and ambitious men.

At a meeting of the citizens with the band last Monday evening the following officers and committees were appointed to make necessary arrangements for the celebration the 4th. President of the day, David Brooks; Marshall, J. B. Hause; Executive Com. Don Palmer, Bell Mills, David Haggart Jr., A. B. Van de Mark, D. H. Davis; Printing, Leb Pomeroy, Chas. Keyser; George Van Tuyle; Music, S. O. VanDeMark, Charley Clark; Grounds, George Haggart; Bell Mills, Will Muir; Amusements, Dr. J. W. Burchard, Will Muir, George Sherwood; Fire Works, D. H. Davis, H. D. Cutting, Will Wood. The committes are all hard at work and intend to make this year's celebration the greatest in attractions ever held here.

Children's day services were held by two churches here in town, the Methodist and Congregational. Both of these churches were most beautifully decorated and filled with ferns and flowers, and two sermons appropriate for the occasion were delivered in the morning. One pretty feature was the presence of 10 or 12 bird cages in each church. The little songsters in the midst of their new surroundings seemed to think themselves in their native paradise, and filled the air with summer song. The evening services were devoted entirely to music.

A special communication of Clinton Lodge No. 175, F. & A. M. will be held Saturday, June 21st. Work in the third degree. Brothers visiting us will have a cordial welcome. By order of W. M. D. KEYES, SEC.

JUNE.

Apple-blossoms in the orchard,
Singing-birds on every tree;
Grass a-growing in the meadows
Just as green as green can be;

Violets in shady places—
Sweetest flowers ever seen!—
Roots of starry dandelions—
"Drops of gold among the green!"

Pale arbutus, fairy wind-flowers,
Innocents in smiling floods;
Cowslips with the hollows,
Columbines among the rocks.

Dripping streams, delicious mosses,
Tassels on the maple-trees,
Drowsy insects humming, humming,
Golden butterflies and bees.

Daffodils in gardens no dews,
Fiery tulips flushed with dew;
Crocus-flowers and through the greenness
Show—peeping out at you!

BURIED ALIVE.

Of all the horrible and appalling calamities that can befall mortal man, we can imagine none more ghastly than that of being buried alive, and well authenticated records have placed beyond a doubt that it has occasionally happened. The case of the lady whose ring, cut from her finger by midnight violators of her tomb, was the means of saving her from a dreadful fate, has been often told. Her son, the eminent Dr L——, born many years after his mother had been buried, was the physician and friend of the family of the writer, one of whose earliest recollections is the hearing the story from the lips of an aged relative, while forming one of a group of small listeners gathered round and hanging with bated breath on the narration. Children love to have the same stories told over and over again in the same words. They like to know what is coming—to watch with thrills of expectation for each detail. And these details, graphically given by one who had them from the very actors in the scene, were weird and vivid. The vault at midnight—the cutting off of the finger—the ghastly terror of the ruffians, when the dead woman sat up in her coffin and blood began to flow—the familiar knock coming to the house-door in the dead of night, heard by terrified maids, who, thinking their mistress's ghost was there, buried their faces, trembling, in their pillows. The bereaved husband lying sleepless in his grief, heard it, too, and started at the sound. "If my dear wife were not gone," he thought, "I should say that was her knock," and when, more faintly it again smote his ear, rising at last and going to the door, he was confronted with the resuscitated woman. All this was listened to with an interest intensified by the fact of its being true.

A curious coincidence respecting this event is that an exactly similar story is recorded in the annals of the family of the Earls of Mount-Edgcumbe. In them we read that the mother of Richard Edgcumbe, created first Baron in 1742, being at the time young and childless, died, apparently, at their seat, Cothele, near Plymouth. She was buried with a valuable ring on her finger, and the cutting this off by violators of the tomb, as in the case of Mrs. L——, restored her to consciousness. Five years afterwards she gave birth to a son.

In the year 1868 a remarkable instance of burying alive occurred at Cambray, in France. M. Marbois, a farmer residing at Sisoy, in that neighborhood, had reared a large family, and acquired by his industry and good conduct wealth and consideration, so that he was chosen churchwarden of his parish, and appointed Deputy-Mayor. He had lived in harmony with his family until the subject of a marriage his eldest son wished to contract became the cause of a quarrel, and brought on fierce disputes between him and his children. Marbois was a man of violent passions, opposition made him frantic; and on one occasion, when the dispute ran higher than usual, he became so infuriated that he rose up and pronounced a fearful malediction upon his family. No sooner had the words passed his lips than his whole frame suddenly collapsed, his face grew livid, his eyes fixed, his limbs stiffened, and he fell to the ground. Medical aid was called in, but all pulsation had ceased. Soon the body became cold, and his death was decidedly pronounced—the cause, a stoppage of the heart's action produced by violent excitement. This occurred on the 13th of January, and on the 16th the interment took place. There had been a severe frost, and the extreme hardness of the ground prevented the grave from being properly dug. It was therefore left shallow, with the intention of deepening it when the thaw should come. By the 23d the ground became sufficiently softened, and men were set to work to raise the body and finish the grave. On lifting the coffin they fancied that they heard a sigh, and on listening attentively they found the sounds of life repeated. Breaking open the coffin, and perceiving that faint actions of pulsation and respiration were going on to a certain extent, the men hurried off with the body to the house of the parish doctor, by whose efforts Marbois was at last restored to consciousness.

When the resuscitated man was able to recall what had taken place, he became overwhelmed with contrition, regarding the fate from which he so narrowly escaped as the deserved punishment of his sin. He sent for the clergyman of Sisoy, whom he entreated to mediate with his children, expressing anxiety to make peace with them and to recall his malediction. The result was a return to mutual understanding and the re-establishment of harmony in the household.

The distinguished physician Sir Henry Marsh used to describe an event which occurred at the beginning of his medical career, many years before he had reached the eminence to which he afterwards attained. He was called in by the family doctor—a country practitioner—to attend upon Colonel H——, struck down suddenly by apoplexy. The fit was a severe one. All efforts to save the sick man proved unavailing; he never rallied, and at the end of a few days, to all appearance breathed his last. On the morning of the funeral the two medical attendants deemed it right, as a last attention, to go and take leave of the remains of their patient before the coffin was screwed down. The family doctor, a jovial florid personage, on whom professional cares sat lightly, had been a friend, and oft-times boon-companion, of the deceased. A bottle of port and glasses stood on a table near the coffin.

"Ah, my poor friend," he said, pouring out a bumper and tossing it off; this was his favorite drink. Rare wine, too. He knew what was good, and never spared it. Many a generous glass we have had together. I'll drink another to his memory," he cried; and another and another followed, until the wine rapidly gulped down, and at so unwonted an hour, began to tell upon the man, and make his eyes glisten and his speech grow thick.

"Why should you not pledge me now for the last time?" exclaimed the excited doctor, while he approached the corpse, and, to Sir Henry's inexpressible disgust at such revolting levity, pressed the glass to the pale lips. The contents went down the Colonel's throat!

Sir Henry stood amazed; his eyes, which he was turning away from the unbecoming spectacle, were riveted on the corpse.

The jovial doctor, sobered in a moment, staggered back. "Can a dead man drink?" he cried.

"Give him more—more!" exclaimed Sir Henry, recovering his presence of mind and seizing the bottle.

A tinge so light that only a medical eye could have detected it, began faintly to suffuse the white face. The doctor tore away the shroud and placed his hand upon the heart. There was no movement, but they lifted the body out of the coffin and proceeded to adopt the measures proper for resuscitation.

Meanwhile, the hearse stood at the door; the funeral guests were assembling outside—carriages arriving, while within, all was commotion and suspense—servants hurrying to and fro fetching hot bricks, stimulants, restoratives, in obedience to the doctors' commands; the latter plying every means skill could devise to keep the flickering spark of life from dying out, and the startled family, half paralyzed by the sudden revulsion, standing around, gathered in anxious, silent groups.

Breathlessly they watched for tidings. For a long time the result seemed doubtful—doubtful whether the hearse before the door, the gaping coffin, the grave-clothes lying scattered about and trampled under foot, all the grim paraphernalia of death, hastily discarded in the first wild moment of hope—might not yet be needed to fulfill their mournful office. But no! Breath, pulsation, consciousness, were slowly returning.

Colonel H—— was given back to his family and home, filling again the place that it was thought would know him no more. And not until five-and-twenty years had passed away after that memorable morning, were his friends summoned—this time to pay him the last tribute.

A young officer returned from China related, apropos of burying alive, the following experience:

"On our passage home," he said, "we had in the transport, besides our own troops, a large draft of French soldiers. Disease soon broke out among the closely packed men, and deaths were of daily occurrence. The French dealt summarily with their dead. As soon as a poor fellow had breathed his last, he was stripped, a twenty-pound shot tied to his heels, and his body thrust through a porthole into the sea. John Bull's prejudices rebelled against such rapid proceedings. When we lost any of our comrades, they were allowed to lie for twelve hours covered with the Union-jack, and the burial service was read over them before they were committed to the deep. One day, a French Sergeant, who had just fallen a victim to the pestilence, was brought up on deck in the sheet in which he had died, to be thrown overboard. The twenty-pound shot had been fastened to his feet and the sheet removed, when, in pushing him through the port-hole, he was caught by a protruding hook or nail at the side, and stuck fast. A few more vigorous thrusts sent the body further through, and in so doing, the flesh was torn by the hook, and blood began to flow. The attention of the bystanders was attracted to this; and, moreover, they fancied that they saw about the corpse other startling symptoms. "The man's alive!" flew from mouth to mouth. In an instant, willing hands were pressing eagerly to the rescue, and before the body could touch the water, it was caught and brought up on deck.

"The French sergeant was one of the soundest men on board the transport-ship when we landed."—Chambers' Journal.

Teaching Economy to Children.

A simple rule which has worked wonders financially, and is in many other respects of value, and worthy of the attention of mothers, is this. When the children come in wild with excitement and with strong desire for some entirely unnecessary thing, which you doubt will afford the expected delight, counsel them to wait a week before deciding upon its purchase. A week is a long period of time; many changes may take place in seven days, and probably will in the minds of your children. This experiment has been thoroughly tested, and grateful children have been heard to exclaim: "How thankful I am, mother, that I didn't spend my money for that. If I hadn't waited a week my money would have all been gone," and in one remarkable instance a boy wanted a toboggan, and waited a week before purchasing it, changed his desire, and at the end of the week wished only for a pair of old-fashioned "bobs;" at the end of another week he had decided not to purchase these, but wait and get a bicycle and a pair of roller skates; and by this method of procedure has saved his money, after having enjoyed mentally the possession of one of these articles after another, though after a somewhat delusive and evasive way, and is just thinking of "saving up" for a rifle. Of course this is an extreme case. It is a rule which might be adopted by some parents also with good effect, and I fancy that a great deal of money would be found in the family treasury if each member were to try this plan for a year.—N. Y. Evening Post.

A Symposium of Fish Stories.

"We were boring at a depth of about three hundred and forty feet on Thursday," said an artesian well-borer," who was working at George Ehret's brewery, "when we struck water. We stopped and put down that 'ar sand-pump to clean out. We hauled her up and emptied her, and one of the boys says, 'Hello! here's a fish!' It was cut up in pieces, but the fins were there and it was fresh. It must have been about a foot long."

"Have you any more fish stories like that?" asked the reporter, looking inquiringly around to each of the men.

"Well, I can beat that," said a good-natured young fellow. "I knowed a man who was borin' an oil well near Bradford, Pa., and, by gum! he drawed up a live fish over a foot long, and it lived a day or two. He was borin' at 400 feet, too."

"Another?"

"Wall, I don't know any fish story," said a powerful young man with bare arms; "but I do know sومthin' purty close to it. I was testin' soil with a lot of fellers about a year and a half ago for the ship canal through Delaware. We were about sixty miles from the coast, and durned if we didn't draw up a pile of oyster shells. They looked just like any ordinary oyster shell, and the inside was white and shiny. They were nearly 200 feet down."

"Is there another?" asked the reporter, as he turned sadly away.

"Hold on a minute," said a bushy-eyed, dust-begrimed old fellow, whose brows had been wrinkled in thought for some minutes, as he raised his head up and assumed a determined air. "I've got one far yer. I was borin' in Florence, Mass., and we had just got through a big, hard rock. We put down the pump just two hundred and twenty-one and a half feet and pulled her out. When we emptied her there were two lizards crawlin' about in the dirt about six inches long. One was black, an' t'other had thirty-eight black and yellow spots. This is a solum' truth. We giv' the lizards to Amherst College, and they've got 'em there yet, preserved in two bottles."

"Can't you beat that?" asked the reporter, turning to the last of the party, a little, gray-bearded man, with small, twinkling eyes.

"Well, I'm an old borer," he answered. "Been borin' nigh on to thirty years, and I reckon I can beat that if anybody kin." The rest of the party grew interested, and looked impatient as the old fellow took out a huge plug of tobacco and gnawed off a generous mouthful. "It was about (spurt) twenty-five years ago. I was borin' (spurt) in Pennsylvany. We had got down to (spurt) almos' one thousand feet, when all of a suddin the drill began to go nice and easy. It was about time to clean out, so we let down the pump and drew her up slowly. She was purty light. Well, she came up, and we took her out keerfully and held her over a trough, and what d'ye think we found in her?"

"O, go on," shouted the others, excitedly.

"Just what we expected. A pile o' dirt and water."—N. Y. Times.

The Crime of Suicide.

Under modern statutes it is no longer customary to bury the body of a felo de se with a stake through it, but it is law that if one be an accessory to a suicide he may be convicted of murder. The law has long been settled in England, and there have been numerous trials under it. One of them in London is of a romantic character, where the prisoner was convicted, but was recommended for a pardon. The prisoner was indicted for the murder of a woman by drowning her. It appeared that the prisoner had lived with the deceased for several months previous to her death; they were in a state of extreme distress, and being unable to pay for their lodgings, they quitted them in the evening of the night on which deceased was drowned, and had no place of shelter. They passed the evening together at the theater, and afterwards went to Westminster bridge to drown themselves in the Thames; they got into a boat, the water where the first boat was moored not being of sufficient depth to drown them. They talked together for some time in the boat into which they had got, the prisoner standing with one foot on the edge of the boat, and the woman leaning upon him. The prisoner found himself in the water; but whether by actual throwing himself in, or by accident, did not appear. He struggled to get back into the boat again, and then found that the woman was gone; he then endeavored to save her, but could not get to her, and she was drowned. In his statement before the magistrate he said that he intended to drown himself but dissuaded the woman from following his example. The Judge told the jury that if they believed the prisoner only intended to drown himself, and not that the woman should die with him, they should acquit the prisoner; but that if both went to the water for the purpose of drowning themselves together, each encouraged the other in the commission of a felonious act, and the survivor was guilty of murder. He also told the jury that, although the indictment charged the prisoner with throwing the deceased into the water, yet if he were present at the time she threw herself in, and consented to her doing it, the act of throwing was to be considered as the act of both, and so the case was reached by the indictment. The jury stated that they were of opinion that both the prisoner and the deceased went to the water for the purpose of drowning themselves, and the prisoner was convicted. But the Judge thought it right to submit the direction to the consideration of the Judges. After considering the case, the Judges were clear that if the deceased threw herself into the water by the encouragement of the prisoner, and because she thought he had set her the example in pursuance of their previous agreement, he was a principal in the second degree, and was guilty of murder; but as it was doubtful whether the deceased did not fall in by accident, it was not murder in either of them, and the prisoner was recommended for a pardon.—Every Other Saturday.

How Watch Cases are Made.

A plate of SOLID GOLD 14 2-10 karats fine is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this plate the various parts of the cases—backs, centers, bezels, etc. are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving, and engine-turning. The composition metal gives it needed strength, stiffness and solidity, while the written guarantee of the manufacturers warranting each case to wear twenty years proves that it contains all the gold that can possibly be needed. This guarantee is given from actual results, as many of these cases have been worn perfectly smooth by years of use without wearing through the gold.

DUBUQUE, IA., Dec. 14, 1883.

I have used one of your James Boss' Gold Watch Cases for seventeen years. I bought it second-hand and knew of its having been used before I got it, but do not know how long. It looks good for ten years longer. Did not suspect it was a filled case until so informed by a jeweler a short time since. I most cheerfully recommend your cases to be all they are represented to be, and more.

SCROFULA.

A remedy that can destroy the germs of scrofula, and when once settled has the power to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of vigor of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove Hoop's SARSAPARILLA to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1878 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in Hoop's SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of Hoop's SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours.

General News Summary.

Interesting Home and Foreign News.

CONGRESS.

THE House on the 4th passed the Oregon central land grant forfeiture bill by a vote of 130 yeas to 26 nays. The Senate amendments to the bill establishing a bureau of labor statistics were nonconcurred in. Mr. Hopkins, from the Conference on Public Buildings, submitted a report on the charges of corruption or collusion in regard to the selection of a site for the public building in Brooklyn, N. Y., that there had not been produced before the committee a scintilla of evidence reflecting in the slightest degree upon the integrity of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Supervising Architect, or any other officer of the Government. The report was recommitted to the Committee on Public Buildings with instructions to reopen the investigation with open doors, giving to the citizens of Brooklyn the right to examine all testimony so far taken and to examine any witnesses who may be subpœnaed—the committee to report within ten days. The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the relief of flood sufferers in Louisiana. A call on the passage of the bill to forfeit the lands granted to the California and Oregon Railroad showing no quorum, the House adjourned. The Senate was not in session.

In the House on the 5th bills were passed authorizing the construction of bridges across the Cumberland River at Nashville, Tenn., and the Missouri River at Leavenworth, Kansas. The California and Oregon land grant bill was taken up and passed—yeas 150, nays 10. A bill releasing the Iron Mountain Railroad Company from the obligations of a land grant railroad was passed, after which the House adjourned. The Senate was not in session.

THE House on the 7th passed the bill forfeiting the unearned Atlantic & Pacific land grants; also bills amending the act to determine the jurisdiction of the United States Circuit Courts and to regulate the removal of cases from State to Federal Courts; authorizing the Academy of Science to receive and hold trust funds for the promotion of science. A resolution was agreed to calling on the Secretary of State for information as to the manner of the expenditure of the money appropriated to defray the expenses of the French and American Claims Commission. A petition from the Grand Army of the Potomac was presented, asking for the establishment of a National Soldiers' Home in some portion of the Gulf States. Mr. Hoblitzell, from the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service, reported adversely the bills to repeal the civil service act; laid on table. The bill repealing the pre-emption and timber laws, and amending the homestead laws was taken up, and after the adoption of one or two unimportant amendments, without further action the House adjourned. The Senate was not in session.

MR. BECK submitted a resolution in the Senate on the 9th directing the Judiciary Committee to report back, with its opinion, thereon, the bill referred to that committee in December, 1883, providing for the general removal of political disabilities. The Senate insisted upon its amendments to the labor statistics bill and Messrs. Aldrich, Blair and Bayard were appointed a committee of conference. Mr. Plumb, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported favorably the bill to give California native per cent. of the proceeds of the sale of public lands in that State. Mr. Vance submitted the views of the minority of the Committee on Privileges and Elections regarding the Danville investigation. The Mexican soldiers' pension bill was taken up. Mr. Hoar's amendment providing for pensions for soldiers who fought in the late war for the suppression of the rebellion," was laid on the table—yeas, 25, nays 6. Several amendments were offered and laid on the table, when further consideration of the bill went over. After executive session the Senate adjourned. In the House bills were introduced and referred to amend the act authorizing the formation of national banking associations; to repeal all internal revenue taxes on tobacco. The House went into committee of the Whole on the River and Harbor bill. Without action the committee rose, and the Speaker appointed Messrs. Forin, O'Neill of Missouri, and James, conferees on the bill to establish a bureau of labor statistics. The Senate bill fixing the term of the United States Circuit and District Courts of the Eastern and Northern districts of Texas, was passed. Adjourned.

GUARDIAN SALE.

BY virtue of a license granted to me as guardian of Bertha D. Stevens and Harry L. Stevens by the probate court for the county of Lenawee, dated the 14th day of April, A. D. 1884, licensing me thereto, notice is hereby given that on the 7th day of June, A. D. 1884, I will sell at public vendue to the highest bidder at the law office of the undersigned in the village of Tecumseh, Michigan, at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon all the undivided one-eighth of those parcels of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, described as follows: House and lot six rods square from out of and upon the southeast corner of block eighty-six of Henry L. Hewitt's addition to the village of Tecumseh, reference being had to the Record of said addition in Register of Deeds office for said county, and that house and lot bounded by beginning in the west line of Evans street one and 13-100 chains north of the north line of Logan street, thence north on the west line of Evans street to the southeast corner of Ex-Change Hotel lot; thence west on the south line of that lot three and 18-100 chains to the J. B. Hoag lot, now Marsh lot; thence south to land formerly James Wheeler's land; thence east on north line of said Wheeler's land to place of beginning. Terms of sale published at and before sale.

Dated April 15th, 1884.

EDWIN R. WOOD, Guardian of said Minors.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

IN the matter of the estate of Silas W. Bass, deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Judge of Probate for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands against the estate of Silas W. Bass, late of Tecumseh, in said county, deceased, hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the office of Charles Barridge, in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Michigan, on the 7th day of June, 1884, and on the 28th day of October, 1884, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days, and that six months from the 28th day of April, 1884, are allowed by the said Judge for the creditors of said estate to present their claims for examination and allowance.

SYLVANUS BURLINGAME,
CHARLES B. PRIDGE,

STATE PIONEERS AT LANSING.

On Wednesday June 4th, the State Pioneer meeting was held in Representatives Hall in the Capitol, the tenth annual assembly. The front of the speaker's desk and platform was trimmed with nearly 100 vases of fine flowers from the City and the Agricultural College. Also wreaths were woven and entwined by fair ladies of artistic skill. At two o'clock P M Hon. C. I. Walker of Detroit called the meeting to order, which was mostly of business reports for the afternoon.

At evening the hall was brilliantly lighted and every seat occupied by the honored friends of the association with the gallery full of cheerful auditors.

THE PEOPLE'S CYCLOPEDIA.

Letters of Recommendation from a few of Tecumseh's Literary men.

From C. M. Woodward, M. D., Tecumseh. "I have examined the People's Cyclopedia carefully and at considerable length, and believe that as a work of reference it has no equal, and is superior as such, for the busy man of business, to more voluminous works; and I can earnestly recommend it as a very valuable work at a low price, to all needing a cyclopedia."

From Wm. H. Babbitt, Pastor Presbyterian church, Tecumseh.—"There is a wonderful amount of useful information of various kinds crowded into the volume of the People's Cyclopedia which I have examined. I do not remember having ever seen a work that contained so much in the same space that was likely to be useful in the office, the study and the home.

If you are in search of knowledge and want it in the most convenient and available form and at the lowest price, don't fail to examine the People's Cyclopedia of Universal Knowledge. We can give no better idea of the great value of this work than by quoting the opinions of some of Michigan's best scholars and educators.

Battle Creek Republican. The M. & O. will put a work train on their road, at once, and proceed to ballast it. They expect to expend $250 per mile this season. There is a rumor afloat, said to come from reliable sources, that the M. & O. railroad is, to put a switch at the head of Devil's lake and run excursion trains to that place. There are two steamboats on the lake, which will run from Beardsell's landing to the latter place to meet the trains, morning and evening.

Where are you going to celebrate?

MISCELLANEOUS.

—A careless farmer near Dublin, Ga., found a rat's nest in the matted hair of his horse's tail. The young rats were nearly half grown.

—It is claimed that the Missouri Botanical Gardens near St. Louis have a complete collection of living specimens of all the plants mentioned in the Bible.

—In illustration of the Scotchman's love of country the Duke of Buccleuch said: "I would rather die in a snow wreath on the braes of Yarrow than on the softest bed on the shores of the Mediterranean."

—A flower has been discovered in South America which is only visible when the wind is blowing. The shrub belongs to the cactus family, and is about three feet high, with a crook at the top, giving it the appearance of a black hickory cane. When the wind blows a number of beautiful flowers protrude from little lumps on the stalk.

Thomas Edmundson, of Harvard, Neb., hearing that his brother was confined in a Buffalo (N. Y.) insane asylum, immediately took the train for that city, to take his brother home. He had hardly made known his errand in the insane asylum office before he became afflicted with his unfortunate brother's malady, and he is now a raving maniac.—Chicago Times.

—The north of Scotland recently came in for the tag end of a shower from Hecla or the other Icelandic crater. Between the Orkneys and the Shetlands ash has fallen so thick that it had to be shoveled off the deck of passing vessels. When Skapta broke out violently some years since the fine dust fell in such quantities over Caithness that it entirely killed the crops.

—The girls with half a chance, and under intelligent guidance, would make as fair intellectual progress as the boys, but it seems to be taken for granted that they have no more intellect than young chickens or kittens, and that it is quite in the fitness of things that they should pose for hours over some millinery plates and be ignorant of nearly everything else under the sun.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

—A Detroit wife of three months' standing asks for a divorce, charging that her husband had won her heart and hand by saying in this that he had told her time and again that he was the owner of a horse and wagon, whereas she has discovered that he only has a wagon, and a very bad one at that. What makes her so mad is that she threw away a chance to marry a newspaper carrier, thinking she would be able to screen the other women in the block by appearing in her own turnout on parade days.—Detroit Post.

—A Berlin newspaper has got hold of a genuine sensation. It says that an enormous hotel is soon to be built at St. Augustine, Fla. It will be three miles long, six miles deep, and seventy-five stories high. Guests will be taken to their rooms by 500 balloons; the tables in the dining-room will be four miles in length, and the waiters who serve the meals will be on horseback. There will be a cuspidor in the office 100 feet in circumference. The German doesn't often try to be funny, but when he does he means business.—Chicago Tribune.

—Except for those who may have wealthy friends living in the interior in a favorable locality, Australia has been practically found to be not a suitable place for invalids. Any one who has made acquaintance with a bush hotel would be slow to recommend it as a residence, even to a man in health, and would certainly advise an invalid to avoid it. The most eminent physician in Melbourne has recently stated that, out of hundreds with weak lungs who had consulted him during a period of twenty-five years, not one of those who had remained on the coast had materially improved.

—New York claims to have more than a thousand women who speculate in stocks, grain, oil, whisky and every other way known to the sterner sex, but brokers, as a rule, refuse their custom. The reasons for this were expressed by a broker thus: "Their risks are small, and if they lose—phe-w-w." "But supposing they make a hit?" "Well, then they grow confidential. They tell you they knew it was coming so. They dreamed of a black cat or the baby cried twice in its sleep, or something like that. They swear by their dreams. If a woman has a certain dream and puts her money on that dream, and then the market goes the wrong way, she has been swindled by the operator."—N. Y. Tribune.

A Very Much Mixed Family.

A class of marriages that may certainly be regarded as among the eccentricities of wedlock are those unions bringing parties into complex family relations. Mr. Howe tells us of a marriage in Cornwall, in 1828, by which the father became brother-in-law to his son; the mother, mother-in-law to her mother, the mother-in law of the son, his sister-in-law; the sister of the mother-in-law, her daughter-in-law; the sister of the daughter-in-law, her mother-in-law; the son of the father, brother-in-law to his mother-in-law, and uncle to his brothers and sisters, the wife of the son, sister-in-law to her father-in-law, and aunt-in-law to her husband; and the offspring of the son and his wife would be grand-children to their uncle and aunt, and cousins of their father. Says Jefferson "When Lord Dundreary has mastered all the difficulties of this perplexing piece of family history, he may throw daylight into the darkness resulting from the intermarriage of the Hawoods and Cashocks of Kent." This family complication was caused thus: One member of the Hawood family had two daughters, one of whom was married to John Cashick, the father, and the other to John Cashick, the son. The elder Cashick had a daughter by his first wife whom Mr. Hawood subsequently married, and this lady could now claim her father as her son, her sister as her daughter, and her brother as her grand child. This occurred in the seventeenth century, and, with the help of several intermarriages since to further complicate matters, there is not one of the descendants of these families to-day who can clearly define his own position with regard to his relatives of the present generation, much less those of one or two generations preceeding him.—London Cor. Cleveland Herald.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—Mr. Staples, a wealthy citizen of Westport, Conn., has given that town a $50,000 free-school building.

—A new building, costing $41,000, is nearly completed for Biddle University, an institution for the education of colored people, in Charlotte, N. C.

—The Lehigh Presbytery calls attention to the fact that its moderator, elected for the ensuing year, Rev. W. R. Templeton, of Reading, is the first colored moderator in Pennsylvania.

—Boston has set a good example to every other city in declaring that women should receive the same wages as men who do the same work in the public schools.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

—The four Philadelphia churches whose members have heretofore been called "Disciples of Christ," resolved at a union meeting held recently to accept the name by which their congregations in other parts of the United States are known—"Christian Churches."

—The English Baptists propose a memorial fund for carrying on Baptist work in Germany, in honor of J. G. Oncken, who, fifty years ago, on April 22, was baptized in the river Elba, opposite Hamburg, and thence began a German reformation against church and state.

—The Sunday-school, as we now know it, is little over one hundred years old. Yet how it has grown! How mighty is the tree, and how widespread are its branches! According to a recent and carefully prepared estimate, the number of children and teachers in the Christian Sunday-school throughout the world is 15,000,000.—N. Y. Examiner.

—Education improves the general judgment and the reasoning powers. The man of intelligence sees the relation of things in a larger and clearer way, and reasons more wisely and safely, both as to the ends to be attained and the means of attaining them. He is, therefore, fuller of resources for his work, whether it is hand-labor or head-work.—Journal of Education.

—The Slater fund of $1,000,000 for educating the colored people of the South has been fortunately invested, and is yielding a handsome income of $60,000, the distribution of which is in the hands of Dr. A. S. Haygood, President of the college at Oxford, Ga. Three thousand dollars have been set aside for educating pupils who were specially bright, and Mr. Slater, the donor, expresses himself as highly pleased with the progress that has been made so far in the work of the fund.—N. Y. Tribune.

—A Washington writer puts the growth of the Baptists among the colored people as follows: "In 1862 colored Baptists had no church property from Mason and Dixon's line to the Gulf; they now have over four thousand churches, worth more than $3,000,000, and paid for. In 1862 there were 250,000 colored Baptist church members, there now are 800,000. In '62 a colored man who could read was a curiosity; in '84 fifteen newspapers are edited and published by colored men educated in these Southern schools."

Sir John Lubbock and His Dog.

Sir John Lubbock, the distinguished physicist, is trying to teach his dog to converse.

It seems from a letter which Sir John sends to the last number of Nature that Van, the dog, is making very satisfactory progress in his studies. He is, indeed, displaying such aptitude for learning that his master intends soon to put him into arithmetic.

The method of instruction adopted is a very simple one. Sir John prints on pieces of cardboard, about ten inches long by three inches broad, such words as "food," "bone," "water," "out," etc. A number of these cards are placed on the floor side by side, so that the dog has several cards to select from, each bearing a different word. Van has now learned to distinguish between those cards, and to regard the bringing of a card as a request.

For instance: "When he is hungry he will bring a 'food' card time after time," says Sir John Lubbock, "until he has had enough, and then he lies down quietly for a nap. Whenever he is thirsty he picks up the "water" card without any suggestion from his master, and brings it with perfect gravity. When he is invited to take a walk he "gladly responds by picking up the 'out' card, and running triumphantly with it before me to the front door." "If through inadvertence he brings a card for something he does not want, when the corresponding object is shown him he seizes the card, takes it back again, and fetches the right one." Sir John therefore concludes, after much observation, that the dog "can not only distinguish between one word and another, but also associate the word and the object."

Van has made this progress in conversation, too, despite many interruptions in the course of the instruction due to his master's frequent absences from home and inability to give more than a little attention to the dog's tuition. As it is, in the opinion of Sir John Lubbock, it seems to be demonstrated that "this method of instruction opens out a means by which dogs and other animals may be enabled to communicate with us more satisfactorily than hitherto."

Sir John Lubbock, indeed, repeats his request that others will co-operate in this work of canine instruction, for, as we have said, he wants to extend the course. "I am now considering," he writes, "the best mode of testing Van in very simple arithmetic." Here, too, in all probability, he will likewise be successful, and we await with interest the reports of Van's progress in learning to cipher.—N. Y. Sun.

The Royalty Question.

Fair Customer—"What! thirty dollars for that baby carriage. "It is outrageous."

Dealer—"Well, you see, madam, this is a patent carriage and we have to pay royalty."

Fair Customer—"Royalty?"

Dealer—"Yes, we have to pay royalty on every carriage."

Fair Customer—"Royalty! How deliciously English it sounds. "I'll take it."—Philadelphia Call.

A THRILLING EPISODE.

A Locomotive Engineer's Instinct—How he Saved a Train and How he Saved Himself.

On one of the darkest and stormiest nights of the recent unusual winter, the express on one of the leading New York railroads was moving westward from Albany. The engine's headlight threw a strong reflection in advance, but the storm was so blinding it was almost impossible to distinguish anything even at a short distance. Under such circumstances instinct necessarily takes the place of sight. All seemed to be going well, when, in an instant, the engineer reversed his engine, applied the air brakes, and came to a full stop. Why he did so he could not tell any more than any of us can account for the dread of coming disaster and death, and to the wondering inquiry of his fireman he simply said: "I feel that something is wrong." Seizing a lantern he swung himself down from his cab and went forward to investigate. Everything appeared to be right, and he was about to return to his engine when his eye caught sight of a peculiar appearance at the joint of the rail next to him. Brushing the accumulated snow away he looked a moment, and then uttered an exclamation of horror. The rails on both sides had been unspiked and would have turned over the instant the engine touched them. What inspired this attempt at train-wrecking is unknown, but it was presumed the confederates of some prisoners who were on the train hoped, in the confusion of an accident, to deliver their friends.

Engineer John Donohoe, of Albany, to whose wonderful instinct was due the salvation of the train, when asked by the writer why he stopped his engine, said:

"I can't tell why. I only know I felt something was wrong."

"Do you have these feelings often when upon the road?" continued the writer.

"No, very seldom, although for the past twenty years I have been in a condition to feel apprehension at almost anything."

"How is that?"

"Why, I have been a victim of one of the worst cases of dyspepsia ever known. I have not been confined to my bed, as like thousands of others, I am compelled to work whether able or not. Indeed, when it first began I had only a loss of appetite, a 'aint 'eeling that would not go away and a bad taste in my mouth, but I finally got those terrible craving and knawing feelings that make life so unbearable and are known as general debility."

"What did you do?"

"I tried physicians until I became discouraged. I gave eight different ones fair tests, but none of them benefited me. I then tried proprietary medicines, but they failed, likewise. It looked pretty dark for me so far as any more peace or enjoyment in this world were concerned and I became terribly discouraged."

"You certainly do not look that way now."

"Oh, no, indeed, I am in perfect health now," was the reply "and I propose to continue so. My nervousness is entirely gone: I can sleep nights; the aching numbness has disappeared; the pale, sickly appearance has given place to the color of health, and I have readily put on flesh. This is what has been accomplished by means of Warner's Tippecanoe. If I can be cured after a chronic illness of nearly a quarter of a century I believe all suffering in a similar manner can be restored by using the same great remedy."

Such is the testimony of a man who could detect and remove unseen danger on the road but could not remove the dangers from within his own system until brought face to face with the great preparation above-named which did so much for him and can do as much for all those who require it.

AN EASY PLACE.

A lad once stepped into our office in search of a situation. He was asked:

"Are you not now employed?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then why do you wish to change?"

"O, I want an easier place."

We had not a place for him. No one wants a boy or a man who is seeking an easy place; yet just here is the difficulty with thousands. They want easy work, and are afraid of earning more than their wages.

They have strength enough to be out late nights, to indulge in vices and habits which debilitate them; they have strength enough to waste on wine and beer or tobacco, all of which leave them weaker than before; they have strength enough to run and leap and wrestle, but they think they have not the strength to do hard work.

Will the boys let us advise them? Go in for the hard places; bend yourselves to the task of showing how much you can do. Make yourself serviceable to your employer, at whatever cost of your own personal ease; and if you do this he will soon find that he cannot spare you, and when you have learned how to do work you may be set to teach others, and so, when the easy places are to be had they will be yours. Life is toilsome at best to most of us, but the easy places are at the end, not at the beginning, of life's course. They are to be won, not accepted; and a man who is bound to have an easy place now may as well understand that the grave is about the only easy place within the reach of lazy people.—The Little Christian.

The managers of the Lake Shore road have decided to uniform the employees of the road who come in contact with the public. This will include operators, train men, ticket and freight agents, switch and yard men, etc. The order has not yet been issued, but is expected soon. The road will employ a firm to make all the suits, and they will all be distributed at once. All other large roads thro' the country will also uniform their men.

Round trip tourist's tickets to Traverse City, Petoskey, Mackinac Island, Mackinaw City, Sault St. Marie, Marquette and Duluth via the Michigan & Ohio Railroad, are now on sale at the Depot Ticket office at this station, where full particulars may be obtained as to rates, routes &c.

H. U. MATTHEWS, AGENT.

Rev. J. Atkinson, D. D., late pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Adrian, has been transferred to the Newark Conference and takes charge of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Jersey City. The church in Adrian is without a pastor at present, and is looking to Bishop Ninde for a supply for the remainder of the conference year.

Mr. Fuller, the telegraph operator on the M. & O. at this station, has been transferred to Jerome. Mr. M. D. Stearns, the general train dispatcher of the road, is now located here and will remain for several weeks. This arrangement makes Tecumseh the most important station on the line of the road between Toledo and Allegan.

The sixth annual opening at Beardsell's Landing will take place on Wednesday, June 18th. The steamer will be run free, and there will be good music for dancing, afternoon and evening. Mr. Geo. B. Beardsell has again assumed the management of the landing, and proposes to open the season by making a gala day of the sixth annual opening.

A. W. Slayton has sold his one half interest in his Furniture Store to J. S. Kinney and has bought in return his one half interest in their fruit farm at Muskegon. Mr. Slayton is still secretary of the Michigan Flooring and Handle Manufacturing Co. This with his wholesale Lumber and Hay business makes him as much business as most men have to see to.

The Evening Express of East Saginaw has been merged into the Morning Courier, and will no longer be published as a separate sheet. Geo. N. Stacy, who controlled an interest in the Express, takes the place of business manager in the Courier establishment, and transfers his interest in the Express to the former paper. The Courier is the leading newspaper of the Saginaw Valley, and his new field of labor will be much broader than the old one. Success to him.

Mr. A. M. Bly, formerly of Detroit, has taken up his residence in Tecumseh, moving into the J. E. Hall house on Oneida street, opposite Chas. Burridge's. Mr. Bly is a practical piano tuner and repairer, and is fully prepared by long experience to give satisfaction. Pianos, organs and all kinds of musical instruments cleaned and tuned. Mr. Bly has his repair rooms in G. P. Sparks' Music House, with whom all orders can be left. He invites people to call at Mr. Sparks' store and look over his references. There is a good field here for Mr. Bly to occupy, and we believe he will fill it with satisfaction to the musical public and with profit to himself.

Following close upon Decoration Day comes Children's Day. This year we notice that the Presbyterian and Baptist churches are to join with the Methodists in celebrating this day with appropriate services. We rejoice that in all these great denominations the children are to be remembered. The children are the hope of the churches and of our country. We cannot afford to ignore them. If we wish them to be interested in us and our work whether in church or state, we must interest ourselves in them. This children's day, therefore, is a step in the right direction. In our village the Presbyterians and Baptists observed the day at the regular time, June 8; the Methodists are going to wait until June 22.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 12, 1884.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Many of our people will celebrate the coming Fourth in Monroe.

Another circus June 17th. The greatest twenty-five cent show on earth.

Toledo, Jackson, Monroe and Clinton invite your company on the coming Fourth of July.

Mrs. Hattie Parker and two daughters, of Kane, Ills., are visiting G. S. Spafford and friends.

Strawberries are ripe in this vicinity, and it is said that we are to be blessed with a large yield.

C. K. Spafford, formerly of Tecumseh, and now at work in the Ypsilantian, gave us a call on Tuesday.

The Marsden Boot & Shoe stock is being closed out. Consult the first page of this week's paper for particulars.

The nicest looking cornice in the village is the one recently erected by Will. Arnold, Geo. Merritt and Baker & Hall.

Fred H. Burlingame has been spending a few days at his home in this village. He returned to Dundee this afternoon.

A goodly number of the masonic fraternity of this village go to Milan this afternoon to visit their brethren in that place.

John R. Clark lectures this evening in Buffalo, N. Y., which is the eighteenth time he has appeared in that city this season.

There will be a lemonade social at Macon Grange Hall on Friday, the 20th inst., at 7 o'clock P. M. A good time is expected. Every one is invited.

Do not fail to see the Donaldson circus which is to be here in Tecumseh next Tuesday. It is pronounced by those who have seen it to be the best circus traveling.

The Republicans of Tecumseh will hold a ratification meeting next Saturday evening. Speakers from abroad will be present and they anticipate having a rousing meeting.

H. W. Stevens is buying wool again this season. He has opened an office in his warehouse near the Lake Shore depot, where he will receive wool and pay the highest market price therefor.

The Lake Shore road will sell round trip tickets to the Democratic Convention at Detroit for one and one-third fare, good going June 17th and 18th, and good returning on June 19th.

Dr. E. Hause has secured the sale of several of the choicest lots of land near his Florida home in Sorrento Fla. Parties thinking of locating in Florida will do well to consult him before purchasing.

Detroit Evening News: The Tecumseh Herald has reached its 35th volume, and there are very few papers in Michigan that can beat it for spirit, enterprise, news or typographical excellence.

The corner stone of the new court house will be laid on Saturday the 28th inst. Adrian is preparing to make a gala day of it, which will take the place of the usual Fourth of July celebration.

The annual meeting of the Michigan Press Association will be held at Bay City on Tuesday, June 24th. The session will last two days and at its close a free excursion will be given to St. Ignace and Marquette.

The Ladies Aid Society will give a Strawberry and Ice Cream Festival, Thursday Eve. June 19th, at the parlors of Presbyterian church. Refreshments served from 7 to 9. Price of tickets 25cts. All are invited.

County Clerk Hunter has placed on our table the Proceedings of the Board of Supervisor's for the past year. In addition to the regular proceedings it contains a complete list of all township and county officers and census enumerators.

Will Eccles is selling Ice Cream made from pure cream at the same price which other dealers charge for an inferior article. His prices are, $1,25 per gallon, 35 cents per quart, 20 cents per pint. When you buy of Will you are sure to get the best made.

The fifth number of The Social Reformer appears this week. It is fully equal to its predecessors in excellence and is meeting with deserved success. It cultivates a field which has hitherto lain fallow, a field which should be thoroughly and permanently cultivated.

John A. Heck returned from his trip to Ireland last Tuesday night.—He had a fine trip both ways. He was sick three days on the outward run, but escaped with only one day on the return voyage. The trip will prove beneficial to the firm in more ways than one.

Charles Blanchard arrived in town last Friday and remained over the Sabbath. He has lately obtained a position on the Toledo Sunday Democrat, and it is to be hoped that his duties will occasionally draw him to this vicinity. His old Tecumseh acquaintance will be glad to see him at any time.

All indebted to the late firm of W. & S. W. Anderson please call and settle as we are anxious to close our books.

W. & S. W. ANDERSON & CO.

The Detroit Free Press signalized its removal into its new building by issuing a mammoth thirty-six page edition last Sunday, the largest single edition of a newspaper ever printed in Michigan. The old Free Press still leads the van in Michigan journalism, and with its enlarged facilities in the new building it will still further increase its power and prosperity.

A card from Dr. H. W. Catlin reveals the fact that he is now located at 51 Monroe street, Grand Rapids, Mich., and is prepared to practice his profession. Dr. Catlin has received a thorough medical training and since he began practice, he has enjoyed unusual success for a young practioner. While we regret to have him leave Tecumseh, we cheerfully commend him to the people of Grand Rapids and feel confident that he will soon take a leading position in the medical fraternity of that city.

The Spring term of Dist. No. 10, Franklin, taught by Inez Baker, closed June 6th. Following is the report for the term: Length of term, 10 weeks; No. of scholars enrolled, 23; average attendance of scholars, 21; total days attendance, 1008; average, 43¾. Not absent during the term: Addie Lambkins, Bertha Lambkins, Horace Lambkins, Anna Williamson, Charley Williamson, Glenn Jackson, Rezin Welch, Freddie Welch. Neither absent nor tardy, Anna Williamson, Charley Williamson, Glenn Jackson.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK.

The program for commencement week has not been entirely arranged as yet, but the following is a general outline of the exercises.

Sunday evening, June 22d.—Annual sermon by Rev. C. E. Conley at the Baptist church.

Wednesday evening, June 25th.—Promotion Exercises at the Opera House.

Thursday evening, June 26.—Graduating exercises at the Opera House.

Friday June 27th.—Alumni Reunion. The Ex. Com. of the Alumni will meet some time this week to arrange a definite program. It is probable that the Library Association will get up the supper.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Tecumseh Base Ball Club Ready for Business. The First Game of the Season.

The Tecumseh Base Ball Club is now fully organized and in readiness for the summer campaign. Last week a game was arranged with the Battle Creek club to come off on our grounds, on Friday afternoon, but owing to some unforeseen occurrence the latter club could not come at that time and at the eleventh hour, an arrangement was made with the Adrian College nine to meet our boys that afternoon. The club came over by private conveyance and about three o'clock the game was called with a fair crowd of spectators in attendance. The college nine is a very good one and deserved better success. Our boys were in excellent trim for playing and came out victorious by a score of 28 to 2. We have not space to give a detailed account of each inning and content ourselves with the general score, as follows:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	R	E
Tecumseh	8	2	4	3	6	2	3	28	4
Adrian	1	0	0	0	1	0	0	2	14

We hope the College nine will favor us with another visit before the close of the season.

FLASHES BY C. T. LINE.

Ben Dove lost a fine colt last week.

Philip Penticost is at work on the addition to A. M. Welch's house.

Brant Roberts has commenced tearing down a part of his brick house preparatory to building this fall.

J. F. N. Bowen has the finest ten acres of corn in this section; it was planted in fall plowing.

Two errors crept in our last week's news. N. S. Satterthwaite should have read J. N. Satterthwaite, and Mrs. B. J. Steller should have been Mrs. B. J. Wells.

Elijah Wilson built the bridge across the county ditch in the west part of the town instead of across the creek. Commissioner Bowen built the one over Evan's creek.

While some Republicans are pleased with the nomination of Blaine others say I am for Butler now, and more Democrats think Ben did not steel the spoons after all.

Martin Wheelan intends to rent his farm and move his family to Florida to live, as his health is much better there than here.

W. B. Keyser's farm is credited with raising the most oats of any farm in Clinton township last season, being 1085 bushels by machine measure or about 1300 bushels by weight.

Ray Bennett Smith, a little boy 21 months old, who lived with his grandmother Mrs. Elmira McCollum, was buried last Sunday. Rev. G. W. Hudson delivered the discourse and the M. E. choir assisted in the ceremonies.

William Waldron has a new windmill. It was put up by L. M. Waldron who is agent for the I. X. L. mill.

C. E. Sawyer of the M. & O. road and W. H. Arthur of the Marshall Statesman were in town Tuesday afternoon and paid their respects at the HERALD Office. Mr. Sawyer is stationed at Marshall, where he has charge of the work on the M. & O. shops.

The Raisin Valley Seminary commencement occurs this year on June 20th. There are five gradutes—four boys and one girl. Dr. Erastus Test, formerly Principal of the Seminary will be present and deliver the address. He specially desires to see all of the students that can conveniently be present, who were pupils of his, while at the Seminary. Arrangements have been made to run a wagon from the Seminary to Tecumseh on Mondays and Saturdays of each alternate week. This will be done at the beginning of next Fall Term and will be kept up during the year for the accommodation of those pupils wishing to go home by way of Tecumseh.

Bay City Tribune, May 7.—Geo. W. Donaldson's Great United Shows organized in Bay City for a tour of Michigan and the southern states, gave its first performance yesterday at the corner of Van Buren and First streets, both entertainments being largely attended. The circus is in every respect first-class, and better by far than many that have shown in this section under the management of more noted showmen. The only thing against the performance is that there is too much of it for the money, and how the proprietors can afford to present the show they do for 25 cents is what the public cannot understand. There are many novel and difficult feats performed by the company that cannot be dwelt upon here. The tumbling, trapeze performing, juggling, slack-wire and contortion acts are some of the best ever shown here. Neil Smith's wonderful troupe of trained dogs are a circus in themselves. Mr. Donaldson has surely secured a company of artists that are bound to fill the tent to the utmost capacity wherever it is pitched. Last evening there was only standing room left, and very little of that.

A VISIT TO THE CAPITOL.

LANSING, MICH., June 6, 1884.

EDITOR OF HERALD.—Having occasion to go to Lansing for another purpose recently, I thought I would make it an excuse for writing a letter to you.

It will hardly be necessary for me to say anything about the country between Tecumseh and Jackson, or between the latter place and Lansing, for nearly every one has been over the road. I will however say that after leaving the immediate vicinity of Tecumseh I did not see a half dozen desirable farms between that place and Lansing. It is especially poor between the latter place and Jackson. This description is confined however to the view as seen from the railroad.

The scene changes however when you reach Lansing. There is no better land, that I have seen, than in the Grand River valley in the vicinity of the Capital.

While at Lansing I attended the annual meeting of that venerable body, The State Pioneer Society, which was honored by such men as Judge Cooley of the Supreme Court, Alpheus Flech, Hon. B. L. Baxter and F. A. Dewey, who was elected president for the ensuing year, and many more from all parts of the State. I cannot give you a further report of their doings but will just say they were very fine indeed.

I began with the purpose of saying something about the Grand Capitol Building, the crown of the State of Michigan which cost fifteen hundred thousand, and looks so solid and firm on its foundation as if it might last to the end of all things. It is built entirely of stone hewn and polished, and the joints where they unite are so chiseled that it makes them quite ornamental. The stone are left of their natural color, a beautiful drab, but as uniform as if they had been painted. It consists of a main building (standing right in the road as you may say on a hill, not a high hill either, right in the center of Michigan Avenue, which is not less than six rods wide, and two wings, and each side is a front making four front enterances. The main building is six stories, including basement cellar. The style is not gothic. The view of Lansing from the dome is very fine indeed. Its position in the center of the avenue makes it a prominent object in all parts of the city and from the vicinity of the Agricultural College three miles away. The avenue, when it reaches the capitol grounds, which consists of about 12 acres, mostly lawn, turns to the right and left, and so passes around them, and is bordered by ornamental trees, mostly maple, and some basswood which grows very freely here. The stories above the first are reached by a lift or hydraulic elevator. Twelve persons can ascend on it at once. I intended to say something more about the interior but find that I don't know enough. I will just say that I feel proud of Michigan since I have seen the capitol.

Yours Respectfully,

J. F. TEMPLE.

A HAPPY PARTY.

TECUMSEH, June 4, 1884.

EDITOR HERALD:—Allow me a little space in your columns to describe briefly a party given May 30th by Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Dewey, of Cambridge, in honor of a few of their young friends in Tecumseh. The day was one appropriate to the occasion; the cool breeze somewhat relieved the heat of the sun which would have otherwise been disagreeable. At 11:30 A. M. the party assembled at the M. & O. depot, and honored by the presence of the band, which the village authorities permitted to accompany us as far as the depot. Shortly after 12 M. we were comfortably seated in the cars, riding rapidly westward, and in 29 minutes, by our Waltham, the brakes grafted for Onsted. But before going any further it will be proper to state that the band did not make its appearance at the depot for our special benefit but more on account of the G. A. R. expected from Britton. Our conveyance at Cambridge did not quite meet the train, and we proceeded to inspect the new station. On looking around we met our old friend Walter Raymond, who we were pleased to learn was station agent at that place. He looks as though the business agreed with him and we are confident the company will find in him a competent and trustworthy agent.—By this time a wagon and four horse team were waiting at the platform.—We managed to crowd twenty persons, including baggage, into a common wagon-box and started over hills and valleys, around lakes, and thro' mud-holes, for the residence of A. F. Dewey. Mr. D.'s farm is near a small body of water, known as Dewey's lake, about two miles south and west of the Junction. His residence, recently built, is by far the finest we saw during our stay in Cambridge.—The house is supplied with all the modern conveniences and any one desirious of a good house would do well to pattern after this.

After a short rest, a part of which time was occupied in removing the dust from our clothing, we partook of an excellent dinner with a relish characteristic of Tecumsehites when away from home. Mrs. Dewey is a first-class culinary artist and her efforts to supply our wants in that direction were highly appreciated. After dinner, which was served at 3 P. M., the time was passed in walking, and boating. About an hour before sun set several who call themselves singers found a comfortable seat in a shady place near the house, and made "music in the air." A few of their Cambridge friends were invited in and the evening was passed very pleasantly. At ten o'clock those who were to stop with F. A. and J. Dewey, took their departure. At 12 o'clock we will venture to say that all had retired; but we do not say all was quiet, for it was only until the "Big hours of morning" that we found "Rest for the weary soul."

The next day was as fair as could be desired, though rather warm. The morning was occupied in various ways. Some went to the Junction, others strolled about the premises, while two of the young ladies, amateur equestrians, seemed to derive great pleasure in walking two of Mr. D's. horses up and down the road. The program for the day was to visit Prospect Hill, which is only two miles from Mr. D's. Our four horse team being in readiness together with two spring wagons, we turned our faces toward the hill. Here we found a nice grove, though not very well taken care of, on the summit of the hill which is surrounded lower down by an immense peach orchard. On the highest point of the hill is a tower supplied with a telescope by the aid of which a good view of the surrounding country may be had. Brooklyn is seen very plainly, and Jackson can be seen, though not distinctly.

After dinner we again loaded ourselves into the wagon and made for the station, where we arrived in good time to "brush up" and "dust off" before train time.

In all it was the party of the season and one which will not soon be forgotten. All unite in saying they never saw a more pleasant gathering and never enjoyed a better visit. We cannot thank Mr. D's people too highly for our enjoyment while there. We were promised a similar party on next May 30th., and that the time may pass pleasantly and profitably away and see the same happy and appreciative company there again is the wish of

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

Rev. B. F. Rapp, pastor of the Church of Christ, East Ridgeway, will baptize a number of candidates, converts of last winter's revival, Sunday, June 15th., at 2:30 P. M., in Raisin river close by the bridge near the Globe Mills, Tecumseh, Mich. Should there be others wishing to go forward in this very solemn and impressive ordinance at that time, they will have opportunity.

Rev. A. B. Wood, pastor of the M. E. church in Manchester has had an attack of congestion of the brain. He is wholly incapacitated for work. He cannot remember the names of his most intimate friends. But his friends hope that rest will restore him to his usual mental vigor.

"FOX'S BOOK OF MARTYRS" contains many frightful stories of most agonizing suffering. But nothing, either in story or picture, can be more distressful than the sharp, severe, shooting pains daily and nightly endured by those who are martyrs to that most terrible torment, Neuralgia. To get rid of this martyrdom is the first business of all who suffer.

ATHLOPHOROS regenerates painful nerves, and drives out the horrors of Neuralgia.

ATHLOPHOROS gives health to Rheumatic sufferers, when the most skillful physicians have not been able to heal.

ATHLOPHOROS operates on the blood, purifies and vitalizes it, and dislodges the germ that causes Rheumatism, removes it from the system.

ATHLOPHOROS is pronounced by all who have tried it to be an irrepressible specific for these obstinate and painful diseases.

Read the testimony of one of the sufferers. David Little, Sumner, Benner Co., Iowa, writes:

"I am past 77 years of age, have had the Rheumatism three years and eight months, lost one third of my weight, could not walk, but shuffled along on crutches, could not sleep, nerves shattered, no strength in my hands, wrists, knees or feet. But thanks be to God for your great discovery. The relief came at once, I took it one Sunday morning, felt it all over me, and kept on with it. Monday morning I got up and dressed myself, and walked out into the kitchen without the aid of crutch or cane, and wished them all a happy New Year. I feel well, sight and hearing as sharp as ever, can write without spectacles, and my appetite is keen. Would say to the afflicted, place the hands of every sufferer from this terrible disease."

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price, one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he has not it do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

ZOA-PHORA

Is a Sovereign Remedy for all Complaints peculiar to

WOMEN.

MISHAWAKA, Ind., Dec. 1, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zo-a-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years; but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laced it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. MRS. C. G.

SPRINGVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I cannot find words to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine has wrought. Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. Jean Sutter.

No. 8 Wall St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasms, pain in my head and general nervous prostration. Yesterday I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora. He gave it to me according to your directions, and in less than ten minutes I had complete relief. I am so all from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, for use of Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

—Kate Sadborn says "no two women are alike, but the men can be made up in bundles."

—United States Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, is the father of eleven children. —Chicago Journal.

—Henry W. Miller, of Worcester, Mass., has, as apprentice and proprietor, occupied his place of business as tin and hardware dealer for seventy years. —Boston Herald.

—Mrs. Polly McCleaster, who recently died in Carlisle, Pa., at the age of eighty, was a lineal descendant of Molly Pitcher, of Revolutionary fame. —Pittsburgh Gazette.

—Edward King writes from Paris that it is said there a sculptor in Rome is making a statue of Jefferson Davis, forty feet high. It is to be placed on a platform in a palmetto grove in Davis's native State.

—The Queen of Hanover has enough Christian names to start a dictionary. The full list is Alexandrina Maria Wilhelmina Catherina Charlotte Theresa Henrietta Louisa Pauline Elizabeth Frederica Georgina, although some of them may have got away.

Mr. George William Curtis has written Mayor Martin, of Boston, declining to accept the generous sum appropriated as compensation for delivering the eulogy on Wendell Phillips, and saying that in selecting him for the duty the city of Boston conferred on him the greatest honor of his life. —N. Y. Post.

—Benjamin Wallace, a New York soap merchant, worth five hundred thousand dollars, was arrested as a vagrant on the beach of Jamaica bay recently. He has given away half his fortune in his insanity; several car conductors were given fifty dollar checks for seats. He gave promissory notes for large amounts to a dozen different people. —N. Y. Star.

—David Langdon, of East Rockaway, L. I., is ninety years of age, and says he was never tired but once in his life, and that was in 1812, when on military duty. He was stationed at Sag Harbor, and when the forces disbanded he walked home, a distance of ninety-one miles, without stopping. He has never applied for a pension. —N. Y. Star.

—The members of the Mexican Congress wear faultless suits of black. A great many of them also wear white neckties and white gloves, so that the House looks like a full dress party. A recent visitor in Mexico says that almost all of the members are of middle age, with black eyes and black hair. Hardly a gray-haired or bald-headed man could be discovered among them.

—Mrs. Margaret Crocker, of San Francisco, the widow of Judge E. B. Crocker, and a woman of great sympathy and benevolence, has completed and handed over to the trustees an admirably equipped and appointed home for aged gentlewomen at Sacramento. The house and endowments cost $100,000, and Mrs. Crocker intends to add other buildings in the future. —San Francisco Call.

"A LITTLE NONSENSE."

—A penny paper is to be started here to fill a long felt want. Why these wants are made of felt, no one knows, except it prevents their getting warped. Whoof!—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

—Mrs. Pinaphor thinks telegraphy ought to be much cheaper than postage because the former can perform a job in five minutes which requires the mails from one to six days to accomplish.—Norristown Herald.

—A little boy sat on the floor playing. Suddenly he set up a howl. "Henry, what is the matter?" asked his mother. "The cat scratched me." "Why, the cat is not here. When did she scratch you?" "Yesterday." "Well, why are you crying now?" "Cause I forgot it then."—Arkansaw Traveller.

"May I trouble you to tell me what time it is?" said a trim old lady at St. Nicholas table d'hote not long ago to her vis-a-vis. "Certainly," said the gentleman addressed, taking out his watch; "it is just seven o'clock." "Thank you," she said; "that's my pill time." A [illegible] was taken and there. Ex.

—"Mamma," said a little boy, "this paper says that the latest styles of slippers are trimmed with swan's down." "Yes, dear," replied mamma, "and what of it?" "Oh, nothing," said the little boy, "only if you want to be in style you had better get a pair. There ain't any swan's down on your old ones."—Philadelphia Call.

—"What has become of our wonderful crimson sunsets, I wonder?" said Tom. "Why," replied Laura, thoughtfully looking up from the Bazar, "I suppose they have all gone out of style. Everything is very quiet and elegant this spring. I knew those winter sunsets were too high-colored to last long. They might do for the evening," she said presently, in a reflective mood, "but they were too loud for the street." And, bending over the description of a new walking suit, she did not see Tom fallen from his chair, staring wildly at her and painfully gasping for breath. —N. Y. Sunday Courier.

The Only Thing He Was Fit For.

"John," said a father to his son, "you have disappointed me greatly. I have given you every opportunity to learn something, but it has been just money thrown away. You are the stupidest young man I ever saw. You know nothing."

"It is true, father," said John with a sigh.

"I never see you with a book in your hand," pursued the father; "you never take up a newspaper; you know nothing of current events. You don't take after your mother or me, for we both got good natural intelligence. What you're going to do for a living is a puzzle to me. There isn't a single earthly thing you can turn your hand to."

"But I'm not altogether an imbecile, father. I can count up to a hundred."

"I know it, and that's what vexes me."

"Why?"

"Why, don't you see, if you didn't know that much you would make an excellent juryman for criminal trials, but your knowing that much entirely disqualifies you. It's a sad case."

—Kansas sends her murderers to State's prison one year before she hangs them. —Chicago Herald.

ELECTRIC LIGHT SOAP

FOUR POINTS

Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD. Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS. WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC. WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing; use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes to soak, rubbing plenty of soap in the most soiled parts. Be sure that the [illegible] the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them lightly out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil 10 to 20 minutes, rinse well, blue and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boiling by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Flannels and prints should not be boiled, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the wash-board, and being the best disinfectant known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury; the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press water out with the hand; boil 5 to 8 minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press dry between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron between pieces of old flannel. Lace curtains, to 10 to 20 minutes and boil 5 to 20 minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, or pin every scallop to care, or over a sheet to dry; no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

Sold by leading wholesale and retail grocers everywhere. Dealers may obtain our goods upon application. ELECTRIC SOAP MANUFACTURING CO., Indianapolis, Ind., and 26-28 South Water St., Chicago, Ill.

Fashion Notes.

Among the prettiest of summer garments are the braided gauze jackets lined with silk. They are very short on the side and deeply fringed with chenille mingled with jet tassels and crescents: the sleeves come only to the elbow and the front is a mass of fruit and foliage embroidery, the leaves done in frayed silk, the fruit in beads.

A high waist, with a pointed opening both in the front and back, and an apology for a sleeve, is to be that most in favor for evening wear this summer.

The proper bows for white dresses embroidered in colors have many loops, and contain all the colors of the embroidery. A recently imported French costume had ornaments of this sort made of blue, olive, red and pale yellow ribbons. The embroidery, which was almost a foot deep, was on the two foulard flounces and on the drapery of the short polonaise. An embroidered chemisette, and ruffles of fine silk lace on the edges of the flounces and draperies completed the list of the accessories of one of the prettiest dresses seen this year.

The pretty waistcoats of white corded silk which are worn with black and dark silk frocks are called Beau Brummels. They have wide pocket flaps, with buttons, and are very pretty, but the significance of the name is not clearly apparent.

Fawn-colored parasols, trimmed with lace, fastened here and there by large yellow pearls, and having a frilling of lace set on the lining half-way between the center and the brim, are liked for carriage use in London.

Box plaitings of corded muslins are sewed under the belts of many of the new skirts. The muslin begins at the side seams, and the first two plaits are only folded under for half their width, but at the back they are very full. This arrangement has the merit of not being easily displaced, and is very light.

A very pretty design for a polonaise has each of the two front pieces of the waist about half a yard wide and laid in folds at the center. At the belt these cross, and the upper one curves gracefully and loses itself in the folds. Worth recently alleviated the sorrows of a mourning customer by making her a gown of gray and black satin and black velvet. The skirt had panels of the first material worked with interlaced rings in dull steel beads and bright steel spangles, typical of different depths of affliction: the front was trimmed with bands of lace embroidered in spangles, and a row of satin bows extending down its center. The train was of black satin with a central breadth of velvet and a lining of gray satin, and the waist was of black satin with steel embroidered waistcoat.

A novel use of ribbon not to be despised by any girl who knows that she can afford to wear clothes a little unlike her neighbors, is to knot two strands on the right shoulder, fasten them again on the left side below the waist and knot them there: then take them off, sew lace all along the lower edge, making all the trimming which either waist or skirt needs. This is used on the seaside suits in which red and blue are combined, and the ribbon is usually of the two colors.

Those who like the pretty curves of the zouave jacket, but do not care to wear two waists, imitate them by lace headed with velvet set down the front of a plain basque. A pretty ornament of jet, velvet or ribbon is set at the end of this trimming.

The velvet and embroidered silk chemisettes are only intended for street and carriage dresses, and simulate a rich gown worn beneath the outer dress; but for the house the chemisette should always be of a lighter, thinner material than the gown itself, suggesting that it is part of an underdress.

The way of sewing on laces differs each season. This year they are gathered, then sewed on the wrong side, turned and caught down at intervals, making a puff. Spanish laces for collaraettes are sometimes laid in flat plaits spreading at the outer edge.

Four corded squares resting upon a frill are now thought to be the prettiest finish for the back of a basque. The fronts are sometimes cut in leaf points edged with a lace frill.—Boston Budget.

Every Person a Lunatic Now and Then.

The fact that a druggist of this city has ended a human life by putting up wrong medicine awakens much indignation. He says many customers were in the store; he was in a hurry; he put up morphine instead of some similar drug. The inquiry arises whether a clerk is able to fill an order only when he has no customers in the shop? How empty must a shop be in order to secure safety? Must the street in front of the drug-store also be empty? What if a fire-engine goes by? What if a dog-fight occurs while the druggist is reaching for quinine? Is he justified in taking down strychnia? What if his mother-in-law has come to visit him?

Such questions come up and properly; but there is another side to the fact of erring druggists, and that is, that most persons are crazy part of the time. The exceptions are rare. Each one is now and then a fool of the most complete order and species. All the laws and penalties in the world will not avail to make a druggist or anybody else have his full senses through all his life. Crazy moments or seconds will come. A wise man will step backwards off a porch into a mud-puddle, a great philosopher will hunt for the specks that are on his hand or on his forehead, a hunter will sometimes shoot himself or his dog, a barber will often forget his job and slice off a piece of a chin or an ear or the nose. A girl at work at Marshall Field's had been feeding a great cloth-knife for ten years. Last week she watched the knife come down slowly on her hand. Too late she woke out of her stupor with one hand gone. For a few seconds her mind had failed and she sat by her machine a temporary lunatic and had watched the knife approach her own hand.

The man recently murdered on North Clark street in Chicago, saw the enemy come up, with murder on his face, saw him draw a revolver, and, instead of making a lightning spring at the man, he stood bewildered and thus fell dead. His reason left him in the second of his greatest need.

One of the distinguished professors in one of our colleges was teaching near a canal. Walking along one evening in summer he walked as deliberately into the canal as he had been walking along the path a second before. He was brought to his senses by the water and mud and the absurdity of the situation. He had on a new suit of clothes and a new silk hat, but though the damage was thus great he still laughs over the adventure.

Our mail-collectors find in the iron boxes along the streets all sorts of papers and articles which have been put in by some hand from whose motions the mind has become detached for a second. A glove, a pair of spectacles, a deed, a mortgage, a theater-ticket goes in and on goes the person holding on to the regular letter which have been deposited. This is called absent-mindedness, but that is a brief lunacy. A lunatic is a person whose mind is habitually out of balance.

Nothing is more common than for a mind of the highest order to become lost on the cars or on a steamer and to feel for hours that for some reason the train or the boat is going the wrong way. It is one of the most unpleasant feelings that can befall a traveler. A good night's rest may, perhaps, restore the mental rectitude and composure. When one is lost in the woods all the objects of nature seem false. The sun is felt to be wrong, the streams to be unfamiliar. Instances are on record of the inability of a mind thus lost to recognize its own home when it had come to its very gates.

If thus it is the custom of the human mind to become deranged will there not always be instances in which a druggist of the widest knowledge and of the most careful habits shall take down the wrong bottle and deliberately mix a dose of death? The particulars of this recent case are not yet known and there may be a special criminality in the case, but the fact remains that we are all liable to make a blunder that will deeply injure some one, or we are liable to be deeply injured by the wandering mind of the nearest and best friend. Mothers have given the wrong medicine to their children and have caused death in their dreadful anxiety to save life. A physician in this State recently mixed a vial of powerful medicine, and while talking to a friend his infant child reached the medicine, drank it, and died.

Thus wonderful as the human mind is it is not infinite. It has frail moments. The wonder is that so many minds of the millions perform so well their duties. When a train runs from Chicago to New York the passengers are dependent upon the mental balance of quite a mult tude of men. Flagmen, switchmen, telegraphers, engineers, trackmen, bridgemen strung along for a thousand miles, must forget nothing. The mind of each and all must sit upon its noble throne all the hours of the twenty-four and all the days of the year. When we remember that these express-trains will often run for years without meeting with ruin from some bewildered mind we must conclude that, although not infinite, the mind of man is an amazing piece of workmanship. Some will die by its blunders or absence, but the millions will live and sleep sweetly under its faithful and loving care.—Prof. Swing.

Basques, Sleeves, Etc.

An attempt to introduce high English darts in the front of dress waists has not been successful here, as the small drooping bust made by low corsets and low darts is more becoming to the slight figures of American women. Many new basques are simply pointed waists, fully whaleboned in back and front, to rest upon the full upper draperies. In regular basques French modistes choose very simple models, and for thin summer fabrics they now omit the position plaiting at the back, using instead four small squares, one square being cut in the end of each of the forms of the back—the two middle forms and the form next these on each side: the squares are corded around, and may be edged with a lace or a satin or a silk frill, which pushes out between the squares in a very pretty way. Three frills of lace or of satin across the middle back forms are a pretty trimming when these forms are elongated in a square basque. The sides of basques are very short indeed, and one stylish way is to cut the fronts in four leaf points, edging them and the short sides with a narrow lace frill, or with narrow drooping satin balls, or else cut beads in one or two rows are laid on the edge, and looped to form tassels between the leaf points. Lace is also used around the entire basque, hanging below it in a very scant ruffle, or else set about its edge with the scallops extending just below. The lace frills for trimming, especially the beaded laces, now head themselves, or at least dispense with all heading by being sewed on their wrong side (after they are gathered), then being turned over, either up or down, as the case may be, and caught at intervals, giving a slightly puffed effect; two rows done in this way are very becoming when standing around the neck of a dress and a single falling row trims sleeves tastefully.

The coat sleeve is preferred to all others, and is high on the shoulders, but not as full there as it was worn last season. Scarf drapery, plain turned-up cuffs of lace or velvet, and the puff that imitates undersleeves, made either of lace or of silk, are the trimmings most used on dressy sleeves, while for similar woolens many rows of soutache are put on quite straight around the close wrist, or else to imitate a square cuff. For the front of the basque a fancy prevails for following the curving outlines of a Zouave jacket with drooping lace, headed by a velvet band, and ending in a rosette or ribbon bow. When this is not done, the shirred front of the dress goods is used in vest shape, or there is a vest set in, or else the dress is cut away in V shape of in a Pompadour square, and there is a chemisette set which may be of the dress material or of lace fully gathered, or it may be of plain embroidery or velvet. There is usually a revers of some kind outlining this guimpe or chemisette, and this extends back to the shoulder seam, and sometimes crosses back of the standing collar.—Harper's Bazar.

—The papers are publishing the fact that a brass band gave a concert for the benefit of the flood sufferers, but before the band had finished the first tune the sufferers jumped right back into the water.—Bismarck Tribune.

A GOOD INVESEMENT.—One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat any thing; passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the window and I got a bottle. After she had taken it a week she had a rousing appetite, and did everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"My wife suffered from Rheumatism for months. She tried a number of medicines but received little or no benefit. She commenced taking Athlophoros three days ago, and I can safely say she has already received more benefit from it than from all the medicines she had taken before." J. Stephens, Hazel Green, Grant Co., Wis. The universal verdict as to Athlophoros is that it cures where other remedies fail. What an amount of money might be saved if sufferers would go directly for this recognized specific.

WRONG HOME INFLUENCES.

Christian people generally and many people who are not professedly christian, wish their children to learn to reverence sacred things. They wish them to love the Sunday School and the services of the church. They are pleased when they find them willing, yea, anxious, to attend the house of God every Sunday.

But many people who are thus anxious about their children, spend a large part of their time at home, criticising, and finding fault with the church and all connected with it. They do not get along well with their brethren and sisters, and at every family gathering they give them an overhauling, dwelling upon, and magnifying their short-comings. They criticise their minister. His sermons are too long or too short, too plain or too aesthetic. His voice is too rough or too low. He does not visit the family as often as it is thought he might, and then he is "lazy" or "neglectful." It is a fact that in many homes, and those called christian too, the children listen to [illegible] week out. The church, the minister, and all connected with them are represented in the most unfavorable light. Seldom do these children hear a word of commendation for any one connected with christian work. And yet parents wonder that their children do not wish to go to church and to Sunday School. They seem surprised that they have to drive them to attend, if they go at all. But it is not strange. It would be strange if it were otherwise. They learn to hate the church; they seek to shun all connection with it. Parents, you may have your grievances, but do not dwell upon them always in your homes. Do not be always finding fault with the church and the minister before your children, unless you wish to drive them from the church and make skeptics of them. Bear your wrongs for the sake of your children, and speak well of those connected with religious work as far as it is possible for you to do so. Look more on the bright side of things, be more charitable and you will not find so much to critise.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Tuesday forenoon a delegation of over a score of ladies with dinner baskets in hand was seen wending their way through our streets. The report spread about town that it was a company of the Salvation Army who had invaded Dundee to storm the fortifications of sin. To ascertain the mission of the visitors a representative of the Reporter followed the procession to the residence of Dr. J. B. Haynes, and ascertained that it was a party of ladies who had come from Tecumseh for a surprise visit to Dr. and Mrs. Haynes, to see the sights about Dundee and to have a good time. The party consisted of Mrs. Wm. Ide, Mrs. Ford, Mrs. E. R. Crossman, Mrs. Frank Crossman, Mrs. Albaugh, Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. Heck, Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Cambell, Mrs. Dr. Catlin, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Carrie Potter, Mrs. Geo. Heesen, Mrs. Jno. Heesen, Mrs. J. Neeley, Mrs. Woodward, Mrs. Spaulding, Mrs. Haight, Mrs. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton. Each bringing a supply of edibles a picnic dinner was indulged in at the residence.

During the afternoon the party visited the tent meeting and strolled about town, under the guidance of H. A. Stewart. The advent of the ladies upon the streets again circulated the report of "Salvation Army," and many sinners thereat were filled with fear and trembling.

The ladies returned to Tecumseh upon the 6:02 p. m. train, highly pleased with their visit and elated over the impression they had caused among many regarding the visit. The supply of edibles not being exhausted, and knowing editor's fondness for good things and that their limited means will not permit of their purchase, the ladies arranged a package and sent it to the editor of the Reporter with their compliments. The package sent makes us wonder whether the articles were samples of regular Tecumseh diet, and if so we wish we were a resident thereof.—Dundee Reporter.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The June number opens with a beautiful colored picture, artistic in design and finish, entitled "A Morning Call." The contents embrace valuable articles—historical biographical, scientific, natural history, etc.—contributed by E. V. Smalley, H. D. Woolfe, Duyckinck, Noel Ruthven, Elsom and other popular authors. Etta W. Pierce continues her great serial, "A Dark Deed," and there are a variety of short stories, sketches, adventures and poems of great merit and exceedingly interesting. Indeed the 128 quarto pages are brilliant with literary and artistic attractions; the illustrations number over one hundred! This remarkable magazine is furnished for 25 cents a number, or $2.50 a year, postpaid. Address MRS. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

OUR YOUNG WOMEN.

Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby in Dio Lewis' Monthly: A primal defect in our social life is the notion that girls have nothing to do. Boys are brought up to some employment, but girls to none, except where pecuniary want compels them. The family that is "well off" has busy boys and idle girls. The young man, after eating his breakfast, starts out to his daily occupation, and returns at the close of the day. The young woman, after eating her breakfast (usually at a late hour), saunters about in quest of amusement. Novels, gossip, shopping, for unnecessary trifles, dressing in three or four different costumes, formal visiting, drawing (if able), and lounging are the elements of the young woman's day. In the evening, by the way of recreation (?) she goes to the theater or ball. This unequal discipline of the sexes is the basis of innumerable evils. It makes the girl careless and selfish; it turns her mind to personal adornment and other frivolous matters as the great concern of life; it takes away the sense of responsibility and produces feebleness and disease in her physical constitution. It also prevents her from asserting her true dignity in the eyes of man; for the life of utility is alone dignified. Women thus brought up in indolence are looked upon by men very much as were the women of the old dark times of the world, as mere playthings, expensive toys, not as counsellors and friends. Marriage in such circumstances belongs to a low, sensual plane and the girl is prepared neither in body nor mind for serious responsibilities and lofty duties which marriage implies. Her training, moreover, or lack of training, has made it necessary for a long purse to apply for her. Economy, helpfulness, cooperation, these are not coming to the new household from this vain source. Dress, drives, entertainments, these will form the staple demands on the young husband. Accordingly in city life, where this class of young women is chiefly found; a young man is greatly to his hurt often kept from marrying by reason of its costomliness, whereas society should be so ordered that marriage would help the larder and not beggar it. We want simplicity of life, frugality, modesty, industry, and system. If we could introduce these virtues in our higher society we should diminish the despair, envy, jealousy, dissipation and suicides of the single, and the bickerings, wretchedness, and divorces of the married. Let our girls have as regular daily duties as our boys. Let idleness be forbidden them. Let recreation be indeed recreation, at proper times, and in proper quantities. Let us open our numerous avenues of female industry, and let every woman be clothed with the dignity of a useful life. Can such a reformation be brought about? My dear madam, begin it yourself. Rule your household on this principle. Have the courage to defy fashion where it opposes. Be a bold leader in this reform, and you will soon see a host of followers glad to escape from the old folly.

Cover Your Heads!

One week ago we opened our new Hat and Cap Department, and although we felt sure of the support of the public in our new venture we were not prepared to see our sales for the week fully double our expectations. Everyone should see our celebrated $1 Hat, which is sold by other dealers at $1.50. This Hat we make our specialty. We purchase such large quantities to supply our different stores that we can well afford to sell them at $1, and still have a fair profit. Our $1.50 Stiff Hats in all the latest shapes other dealers price $2. Our $2 and $2.50 Hats from the best makers, and our $3, $3.50, $4 and upwards are all fine imported English Stiff and Soft Hats. Every line we sell at 50 cents less than elsewhere in the city.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

TIPTON TATTLE.

Something rather unusual is now taking place in this vicinity in the important matter of wells. A few days since Messrs. Cook, Beeby, and Carr, each owning and living on a farm a little more than a mile from Tipton bored for water on their respective lands, when each obtained a furious flow equal to the greatest capacity of a six inch pipe. Simultaneously with these borings a very serious shrinkage was observed in many of the adjacent wells some of which, though more than a mile distant, are said to have fallen six or seven feet in water depth while others have run nearly dry. It is reported however that efforts have been made to lessen the copiousness of these flooding streams, but as yet, we learn they have refused to abate and rush on not stopping even to ask the right of way. Hence the farmers round about begin to inquire after the outcome with a little show of interest.

The Congregational people propose to initiate the observance of children's day in their church next sabbath when an interesting occasion is confidently looked for. Though this people have no stated Pastor, yet they regularly hold religious services and Sunday School every sabbath and are always found to have excellent music under the able leadership of Prof. Alexander.

John Conlin, the enterprising store keeper, in response to a 36 feet bore is now greeted with an ample sparkling stream of water, clear as crystal, and pure apparently as the sunbeam at the very door of his business establishment, and he has thus made a very desirable addition to the inevitable corners.

Mrs. Simmons is having a new roof placed over her tenant house located on church street south.

The fifteen minutes sermons at the M. E. Church Sabbath evenings seem to stand approved.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

A new sidewalk stretched across the Brook, from the corner of railroad street to Sanford grange, is the last innovation on mudpuddles. It is edged with a stout precaution where water is deepest, and unless some method is devised for widening our streets the guide rail would be a convenience; not amiss if applied the whole length of them.

There has been no ratification meeting as yet for the new candidates on account of the cold wave, but a late evening wedding has produced a satisfaction that makes amends for the hope deferred. John Kline has been talking to his girl amid difficulties for several weeks, but Friday evening he captured her on the street, invoked the aid of Square Griswold to make her Mrs. Kline, and he took her home for a present to his mother. Its said the lady is pleased with the gift, and the defeated party console themselves with. They did what they could, while the boys burn incense at the expense of the winner.

ONSTED ODDS.

Several men were here last week repairing the water tank of the M. & O. R. R. which had become somewhat damaged by the settling of the piers.

John Onsted expects to commence building a grain elevator in a few days.

Two sisters of Mr. Robert Wooden who have been visiting friends here returned to their home in New York Tuesday.

B. Ellis and wife of Milan have been spending a few days among their friends in this vicinity.

O. L. Short and daughter returned Saturday from the western part of the state, where they had been for a week or two.

While the Rev. Mr. Dennett was driving to the depot last Friday his horse became frightened at the cars and he was capsized and had a narrow escape from being hurt. No serious damage was done.

Last Thursday a large number of friends and relatives gathered at the residence of John Lee to have a good old fashioned visit. Among the number were three brothers and two sisters of Mr. Lee. Mr. and Mrs. Lee were presented with a handsome photograph album.

The mail route from Onsted to Brooklyn has changed hands. Wm. Smith of Springville is the present proprietor. The stage now leaves Springville at eleven o'clock, comes to Onsted, leaves here after the 12:15 train, and goes to Brooklyn, and from there back to Springville.

There is much excitement in this vicinity, at present, caused by an attempt being made to get a station on the M. & O. two miles east of the present station of Cambridge. Your Springville correspondent stated, two weeks ago, that Springville was jubilant over the prospect. We cannot see why it should be thus, as the difference in the distance from Springville would not exceed twenty rods.

EAST RIDGEWAY.

Children's Day, celebrated by the Sunday School connected with the Church of Christ, East Ridgeway, Michigan, on the 2d Sunday in the present month, (June), was a pronounced success, both in the forenoon and evening. The weather all day and evening was all that could be wished for. The church was very gorgeously and tastefully decorated with mottoes, pictures, evergreens and flowers. The congregations were overflowing, and their behavior commendable. The children acquited themselves most grandly in the work severally assigned them. The singers and the birds, (there were eight of the latter), discoursed very sweet music. The hymns and sunday school songs selected were admirably adapted to the occasion, and were well sung by the choir, not only as to time and melody in the tunes, but in distinct enunciation of the words, without which singing is to say the least, very materially marred. From the very strict attention given throughout the entire services, by the hosts of persons present, we take it for granted the people were well entertained and can but believe, that with the arrangement for the day, the decoration of the church not excepted, and with the celebration entire, of Children's Day, God was well pleased, to whom be all the glory, through Jesus Christ, his Son, our Savior. The money gathered for the Children's Mission Work, upon the occasion, amounted to twenty-two dollars. May God bless this monied offering to the enlargement of the borders of our favored religion and the salvation of precious souls. God Bless the Children, and save them from the direful curse of intemperance.

B. F. RAPP, Pastor.

ADDISON ATOMS.

Having occasion to take a short business trip to Addison we boarded the evening train on the M. & O., Tuesday evening, and after a pleasant ride of forty minutes alighted on the long platform at the Addison depot, arriving there just at dark. We passed the night at the M. & O. House, which is the west side hotel, kept by W. H. Terpenning. This house has undergone extensive repairs during the past six months, is well kept, and seems to gather in most of the traveling public. Addison itself is booming right along since the new road was opened. Fred Curtis has opened a banking office which is well patronized, and supplies, to the satisfaction of all, a want which has long been felt in that community. Mr. A. E. Marvin has just moved into town with the material for a newspaper and will issue the first number of the Addison Courier next week.

The telephone line has been extended from Hudson to this place, so that Addison now has connection with the outside world by rail, by telegraph and by telephone. Geo. M. Lewis is putting a new front on his store on the corner west of the M. & O. house, which will make it one of the best looking establishments in the village. Powers & Son are doing a good business, and the Smiths—Smith the merchant and Smith the miller—are both doing a thriving trade. Fred Smiley is well pleased with his experience thus far in the hardware line. I. N. Hathaway is head over heels in farming as usual, and O. B. Bowen is pushing the harness trade notwithstanding his adventure with a burglar on the night of our visit. A. J. Kempton is the happiest man in town, or was when we saw him yesterday forenoon, as his wife had just presented him with a nine pound girl.

Addison was considerably stirred up yesterday morning upon learning that a gang of burglars had paid their respects to several establishments the night before. The thieves made quite an extensive raid but got very little booty except a span of horses and carriage. They broke into Bowen's building, obtained $2.00 in money from his pants pocket and left the pants on the steps of Lewis's store across the river. From Lewis's they obtained a box of cigars and some change from the money drawer.—Smith's house was broken into and two pies taken. A large sledge hammer was taken from the blacksmith shop, the handle of which was sawed off and that with a kit of small tools was found near the bank.

It is surmised that the burglars had designs on the bank safe or the safe in Smith's store, but for some reason were scared away and made no attempt in that direction. A carriage belonging to John Terpenning, and a span of horses and harness belonging to Wallace Wilcox were stolen. Mr. Wilcox arose about five o'clock and at once discovered his loss, and by six o'clock the other depredations were ascertained. A telephone message was sent to Sheriff Bidwell, and officers were started forthwith in pursuit of the burglars, but at last accounts no clue had been found to the thieves or the stolen property.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Alonzo Clark has returned from Chicago.

Mrs. Wilson of Canon Nevada is visiting friends in town.

Chas. Bradley and wife from Battle Creek are visiting Mrs. John Hause.

Geo. McAllister writes from southern Kansas that corn is three feet high.

Miss Lina Jones had a sister visiting her the past week.

Cards are out for the wedding of Norman Watson of Bridgewater and Miss Ellen Wimple of Tecumseh Thursday of this week.

Elsworth Arnold is home from Ohio to attend the wedding of his sister to Mr. John Flick.

The Methodist society hold their first social in the new parsonage Wednesday P. M. of this week.

Dr. Reaves moved to Ann Arbor this week.

Wm. Kishpaugh is home from Ann Arbor to spend the summer vacation.

Mrs. Wilson who owns a farm between here and Tecumseh, is home, and will spend the summer with friends in this vicinity.

Some of the Clinton Masons visited the Manchester lodge Monday eve.

Mrs. Bostedor, of Eaton Rapids, is visiting friends in town.

Calista Brown is visiting in Jackson

The Episcopal society have made arrangements to keep open a restaurant over B. O. Randall & Co's store the 4th.

Mrs. Barton Lazelle, of Jonesville, is visiting her brother, Slade Lazelle, of Bridgewater.

The Baptist social this week, was held at Mr. Watson's, in Bridgewater Wednesday P. M.

Fifty loads of wool were delivered in town last Saturday.

Wm. Bartlett started with a carlord of sheep to his son's in Newago Co., on Tuesday last.

David Woodward is selling hay tedders for forty-two dollars this year.

The Clinton strawberry men are not a little excited over large berries this year. Some very large ones have been on exhibition during the last week at Dr. Burchard's drug store. Delos Cutting brought in a basket that only took thirty berries to make a quart. Ten berries measured over four and one-half inches in circumference and one measured five and five-eights in circumference and weighed three hundred and sixty grains. Then Geo. Gibson presented a quart, which consisted of only twenty-four berries, but were not fully ripe, the largest of which weighed four hundred and sixty grains. Jos. Kies also presented a ripe berry that tipped the scales at three hundred and eighty-seven grains. Mr. Gibson thought he would give his competitors no reason to complain, because his berries were green, so he brought another quart consisting of twenty-eight berries, the largest measuring seven and one half inches in circumference and weighing four hundred and sixty grains. Mr. Gibson is No. 1 so far.

Donaldson's Circus visited this place Monday last and was well patronized. Although some of the company are unable to perform their parts at present and consequently some of the best acts have to be omitted. The show is a creditable one and above the average of circus performances. Mr. Smith's exhibition of trained dogs is probably the best in the country. Mr. Donaldson the proprietor is suffering from malarial fever being confined to his bed at the Lancaster House.

LAYING THE CORNER STONE.

The Programme so far as arranged by the Committee in Charge.

The exercises attending the laying of the corner stone of the new court house will take place on Saturday, June 28th, 1884, at two o'clock p. m., at the court house grounds in the city of Adrian.

The officers of the day are as follows:

President—Hon. John K. Boies, Hudson.

Vice Presidents—First ward, A. H. Wood; Second ward, Jno. A. Mitchell, Third ward, W. S. Wilcox, Adrian, Samuel Tingley; Blissfield, A. D. Gilmore; Cambridge, Samuel Morey; Clinton, Alonzo Clark; Deerfield, Jas. Manning; Dover, H. N. Sword; Fairfield, Cornelius Quick; Franklin, Albert Camburn; Hudson, H. C. Hall; Macon, Geo. Howell; Madison, Geo. L. Crane; Medina, Edwin Haff; Ogden, Benj. Hicks; Palmyra, Geo. Humphrey; Raisin, Alexander Richards; Ridgeway, F. V. Hoagland; Risa, Adam Oreher; Rollin, Jno. U. Harkness; Rome, H. M. Hopkins; Seneca, Casper Rorick; Tecumseh, Wm. Hayden; Woodstock, Manson Carpenter.

Marshal—Charles Bidwell.

Orator—Hon. Thos. M. Cooley, of Ann Arbor.

The exercises in addition to the address by the orator of the day will consist of music and short addresses hereafter to be determined upon. It is hoped that all societies and organizations in the county and the public generally will take part in the exercises and join in the procession on the grounds and an invitation is hereby extended to all such societies, organizations, and to all citizens of the county, to participate in the same. No special invitations will be sent to any one.

All societies and organizations who will participate are requested to send in notice of their intention to Charles Bidwell, marshal, on or before the 27th instant.

It is desirable that the articles to be deposited in the corner stone illustrate, as far as possible, the history of the county and its several townships. Accordingly each township and all societies and organizations having matters of interest prepared are invited to send the same to T. M. Hunter, Adrian, Mich., on or before the 27th day of June. Each of the Newspapers of the county is requested to furnish a copy of its publication for the week ending the 28th of June, 1884, to Mr. Hunter for deposit in the stone.

Dated June 18, 1884.

FLORIDA FOR SETTLERS.

The fact that more than 2,000 homesteads have been taken in Florida the past year, is a suggestive item, and is one for the intending settler to make note of, as, at this rapid rate government land will soon all be taken, or at least all that is worth having.

In many portions of the State land that was bought of the government at $1.25 per acre only a year ago, has been already sold at $25; the lucky settler being fortunate enough to locate near the line of a railroad since completed, and opening a market to the North.

It is as a rule, a perfect safe investment to buy any high price pine land in Florida, at the government price; it certainly never will go down, and the portion of the United States that will produce semi tropical fruits and winter vegetables is so limited, that land which will produce them must soon become exceedingly valuable. The fortunes being rolled up by those who settled a few years ago, are well calculated to start the most visionary ideas in underbalanced minds. No one should come to Florida or any other Southern or Western State without first soberly counting the cost. It is a pitiful sight to see poor families with small children arrive in Florida without means or any but the most indefinite idea of what they are to do for a living. It is true, some of this class have achieved success, it would seem, by sheer good luck; but it is against all ideas of common sense to expect more than total or partial failure and suffering, more or less disastrous, according to the pluck, tact and skill of the emigrant. Florida, while being a State full of undeveloped industry, yet needs the same brains, money and skill that her Northern sisters have required to make them so prosperous. It is true that settlers in the extreme sunny south will not have the hardships and suffering incident to emigrating to the Western prairies, with their cyclones and blizzards; neither will unskilled labor bring the returns in Florida that may be secured in Dakota. These, in short are some of those who may reasonably expect to succeed, and vice versa:

THOSE WHO MAY EXPECT TO SUCCEED IN FLORIDA.

First—Those who have a few hundreds or thousands laid up in ready cash, to bridge over the hungry gap between the arrival in a strange country with new ways, and marketing crops or learning the entirely new methods of business.

Second—Those who have a trade, like carpentering, and are willing to work at it while waiting for the grove or garden to bring forth. Shoemakers, tailors, tin and blacksmiths and store keepers are perhaps nowhere better paid.

Third—Those who thrive best in, and enjoy warm weather, and those with a hereditary tendency to pulmonary diseases; those already far advanced had better stay away.

Fourth—Those fond of horticultural outdoor pursuits, and who would be glad to exchange the snow bound North for a climate and soil that will permit them to labor at their vocation the year round.

Fifth—Those who can easily adapt themselves to greatly changed ideas of life and living. Those with a tendency to seeing the dark side, or grumblers, had better keep away.

THOSE BETTER OFF AT HOME.

First—Those enjoying a fair salary, who have not been able to lay by anything.

Second—Those who only have taste or skill as clerks, book-keepers, etc., of which class there is always a surplus.

Third—Those who enjoy the best health and spirits in cool weather; and those who will grumble at a climate whose coldest is at least forty degrees warmer (in winter) than they have been accustomed to.

Fourth—Those expecting to get an easy living by opening saloons, etc. For such persons, Florida is the worst possible place; license high, and local option. Public opinion is greatly against such business.

HANDLING THE DEAD.

Forty-Five Years' Experience With Dead Bodies—How Handling the Dead Affects Those in the Business—Old-Time Funerals.

"Hard-hearted? Why, just the contrary. It makes a man tender-hearted. I believe if you'd get the veriest desperado to become an undertaker's assistant he'd be a kind and gentle man in six months. I've been forty-five years in the business and I've never known a man in it who wasn't a kind, good-hearted fellow."

This was said to a reporter by one of the oldest undertakers in the city.

"How do you account for it?" asked the reporter.

"I suppose it's being so constantly in the presence of death. Why, a man would be a brute who could handle many dead bodies without being softened not only in his feelings but in his manner. Some people think our assistants, when they are preparing a body for burial, roll and toss it about like a log of wood. That's a great mistake. They handle it as tenderly as if it were a newly-born baby. A lady once asked me if it were true that our people sometimes dressed a body so carelessly that they stuck pins through the flesh. Now that's ridiculous. I never knew of such a case in all my experience."

"The washing and dressing of a body is always left to the undertaker. I suppose?"

"Nearly always. Sometimes, when a female dies, some aunt or other female relative prefers to do the dressing. When it is left to us we of course consult the family as to the style of dress they desire. We have girls employed here to make burial robes and dresses and they are generally busy. A young lady, who was about to be married, died a short time ago, and as her wedding dress was nearly ready they buried her in that. As a rule we dress a young female in white and middle-aged and old ones in black. Males are dressed in black.

"How do you keep the body in good condition until the time for the funeral? Isn't it necessary to do something to preserve the normal appearance of the features and prevent mortification from setting in?"

"Oh, yes; there are two ways of doing that. One is embalming, and the other is putting the body on ice. Embalming, you know, is done by injecting a fluid into the arteries. An incision is made in the arm and an artery taken up and cut. One end is then bound and the fluid injected into the other. How long will it preserve the body? That I can't say. The makers of the fluid claim that it will preserve it for years in a perfectly natural condition. I've never had an opportunity of testing it—I only know what they say about it. No, I don't know what the fluid is. The manufacturers keep that a secret."

"Is the embalming process expensive?"

"Oh, no; it costs about the same as keeping the body on ice, but some people object to it because it is necessary to make an incision in the arm. Only about twenty-five per cent. of the bodies are embalmed."

"How do you keep a body on ice?"

"Well, we don't keep it actually on the ice; the ice surrounds it and reduces the temperature so low that the body freezes, so to speak. The ice, however, is never in contact with the body. But sometimes, do what we will, dark spots will appear on a body where blood has settled and congealed. Some member of a family has often said to me, on seeing these discolorations, that mortification was beginning, but I have rarely failed to remove them by bathing them in warm water and rubbing them with my hand. That warms the congealed blood and it assumes its natural color or leaves the spot. Not long ago a lady delayed the funeral services of her husband, although the minister and friends were present, until the family physician could be brought to see if he were not really alive. She had noticed a pinkish color on one ear and cheek and couldn't be persuaded that he was dead, notwithstanding the fact that his body had been frozen on ice for three days."

"I have heard that in New York the undertakers, at the request of the family, often paint the faces of the dead to give them a life-like appearance. Is that ever done here?"

"Never to my knowledge. We sometimes have to touch up the discolored spots with a preparation we have, but I could never be persuaded to paint a dead person's face."

"Did you ever know of a person's being buried alive?"

"Never, and I doubt if such a thing ever happened. I've heard of a body's being taken up from the grave and found turned over in the coffin, but I can readily understand how the water that sometimes gets into graves would gradually fill the coffin and float the body out of its proper position. How could a man come to life all smothered up in a grave? It's impossible. I'll tell you what happened to me once, however. I was called in to attend to the body of a man who had died of Asiatic cholera. My assistant and I had washed the body and were preparing to put it on ice, when I noticed both hands—we had crossed them on the chest—move gently down alongside the body, just as if the man had got tired of having them in one position and wanted to change. I was a trifle startled, but I crossed the hands on the breast again more securely, thinking, perhaps, they had fallen over of their own weight. Presently they went back again to the side of the body in such a natural way that I made up my mind the man was not dead. This about two hours after his apparent death. The family were very anxious to have the body put on ice at once, but I invented some excuse for delaying it, said nothing about what I had seen and went after the doctor as fast as I could. He told me that the movement of the hands was a mere muscular action, which proved conclusively that the man had died of Asiatic cholera, contraction of the muscles nearly always occurring after death from that cause. I remember having seen then the body of a young lady who died of cholera, and one of her feet was bent under so that the toes nearly touched the heel."

"There have doubtless been great changes in funeral arrangements and attendants since you began your forty five years' experience?"

"Great changes? I should say so. I remember the time when it was customary among the best families here to provide for the dead a very plain, wedge-shaped mahogany coffin, lined with common cambric muslin. A bundle of shavings was put in under the muslin as a pillow for the head. To show you the difference between then and now, I made a cedar-wood casket a few days ago for a wealthy gentleman to be buried in that cost three hundred dollars. It was elegantly finished, lined with the finest satin and covered with black silk velvet that cost twelve dollars a yard."

"I suppose a man could be decently buried forty years ago for a hundred dollars."

"Seventy-five dollars was considered then a pretty big sum, and that was to cover all the expenses. Now one hundred and fifty dollars is about the average price, but some funerals cost five hundred dollars. In the old days nearly everybody was buried in a churchyard, or some other small burying ground within the city, and the coffin was frequently carried on men's shoulders instead of in a hearse. Very few carriages were used and there were no large cemeteries. Do you know, there are about three hundred burying places in and about Philadelphia? Since the opening of the large cemeteries the smaller grounds are seldom used, but they are all well filled with the graves of people who died in the old times."

"Are metal coffins or caskets much used now?"

"No; the hardwood casket has almost entirely superseded them. That is generally covered with cloth or velvet, though sometimes the hard wood finish is preferred. It has straight sides and is much more slightly than the old wedge-shaped coffin. A great improvement in the outer case has lately been made and is now coming into use. It is a rectangular box made of a material that is not only waterproof but imperishable. The base of the material is said to be a kind of lava, the very stuff the Egyptians used on the cloths they wrapped about the mummies. That's said to be a fact."

"I've heard a good deal about old ladies who attend funerals regularly for the sake of the ride to the cemetery and back; do they keep up the practice?"

"Oh, no; we've got rid of them. They spoiled their own game by coming too often. As soon as we got to know their faces we left them out of the carriages. An old driver told me once that he had the same old lady in his carriage six times in one week, and every time she insisted on being driven to her home after the burial. Another old lady was overlooked and put by mistake in a carriage with some of the family of the deceased, and on the way to the cemetery she asked if it was a lady or gentleman that was dead."

"One more question, please. Is Philadelphia the only city where they bow the shutters with black ribbon for a certain time after a death in the family?"

"Yes, I believe it is; but it is not done here as generally now as it used to be. It was the fashion some time ago to bow them for a year. I think one or two weeks is the present limit. It is an old custom that is falling out of use. Good day. Remember me when you need an undertaker."

"Ah, you are very kind. Many thanks."—Philadelphia Times.

The Baboon and the Ostrich.

The baboon was on good terms with all the animals of the neighborhood, but took a great dislike to some ostriches which wandered about and often came close to him, not apparently that they were necessarily unbeloved by apes, but because they did some very evil services unintentionally. He liked to get on a wall under a quantity of straw, which protected him from the sun, and there he dozed away. Now the ostrich has a very bad habit of trying to swallow or peck at everything; nothing comes amiss so that it can be swallowed, and they one and all are constantly poking here and poking there for most curious tid-bits. This was the case with the ostriches in the baboon's neighborhood, and it now and then happened that as they were on the search for a novelty they noticed his fine, stout tail hanging from the top of the wall. Of course the first ostrich which was near gave it a good peck with his strong beak, and doubtless a good pull also. This was a most uncalled-for liberty, and not only woke up the sleeper and hurt him, but also offended his dignity. He awoke full of rage, and before the ostrich could give a second peck at the gristly morsel the furious baboon rushed from under the straw, seized his enemy by the neck, and cuffed his head most soundly. He hated ostriches ever after.—Cassell's Illustrated Natural History.

—A plowman in Penn Yan, N. Y., recently unearthed 138 counterfeit American half dollars which had been placed under a stump. The coins were of copper, and were dated 1838.—Buffalo Express.

How to Handle Bees.

Some people get into a fury of excitement whenever they see a bee or hear its hum, though it be only intent on gathering a little honey from the nearest flower. They shout and wallop about them with hands or handkerchiefs, as if they were being attacked by an enemy. Such are just the people who generally get stung. Let the bee alone, even though it is buzzing close to your face. In all likelihood it is only satisfied by curiosity. Make a fuss about it, strike it, or get it entangled in your clothes or hair, and blame yourself if you feel its sting. When engaged in collecting honey or pollen from the flowers, no amount of teasing will cause it to sting unless you hurt or entangle it. Even when a swarm fills the air you may safely walk about in the midst of it, only let your motions be slow and deliberate. Should they alight on your hands or face, never mind; they will soon fly again; they are only resting. In such a case go slowly aside, and give yourself a gentle shake or two, but refrain from brushing or beating at the bees. Avoid, however, standing in the line of the flight of bees going from or returning to their hives. At such times they have such an impetus that before they are aware of your presence they get entangled in your hair, and are apt to resent your obtrusiveness. So much for one's passive behavior. Let us now suppose ourselves engaged in necessary action. First let us learn these principles:

1. Bees never attack when their stomachs are filled with honey or other liquid sweet. This is their normal condition when swarming, and therefore they are then harmless, as also when returning laden to their hives.

2. Neither do they attack when thoroughly frightened. We frighten bees by blowing smoke among them, or by rapping rather violently on their hives.

3. When bees are alarmed in a hive by smoke or concussion, their first impulse is to fill their honey bags from their combs.

4. Bees in a hive that is constantly being rapped against will in a few minutes rush bodily out from among their combs into an empty skep or box set over them.

Suppose now we wish to get all the bees out of a common straw hive. We provide the needful empty skep and four wood or iron pins, six or seven inches long, a roll of burning rags, unless we possess a modern bellows, smoker or tobacco pipe, and a stool or empty pail, on which to steady the hive while operating. We now approach the hive, blow three or four whiffs of smoke into the entrance to drive in any loiterers, gently raise the edge from the floor board, and repeat the smoking. Without the least jar, now lift the hive boldly up, and gently turn the mouth upward. If the bees show any sign of being ill-natured, give them a puff occasionally. Set the crown of the hive on to the stool or pail, and see that it is steady, and having the side where the bees are thickest raised an inch or two, now fix the empty skep over the other by sticking two of the pins into the lower hive, about an inch or two below the highest part of its edge, so as to support the edge of the empty skep. The other pins, sharpened at both ends, are placed as supports between the skeps. They will thus touch each other at one side, the other being open so as to give a full view.

Now commence rapping, gently at first, but gradually with more force, against the sides of the lower hive. In a few seconds the bees will commence to run as if for life to the upper hive. Among them may be seen the queen if a sharp lookout be kept. The great art here is in keeping the bees in one continuous steady stream. Once they take a stand it is not so easy to dislodge them. Five to ten minutes should suffice to finish the operation if the room be warm. The driven bees may now be shaken about or tumbled from one hive to another without the slightest risk of stings.

If the weather be cold, or the operation to be performed at a season when there is no unsealed honey in the hive, a little warm syrup should be sprinkled on the bees before commencing to drive.

In our modern hives we use less ceremony in dislodging the bees. After a whiff of smoke we simply lift the frames of comb one at a time, give them a shake in front of the hive or skep we want to get the bees into, and in a minute whisk off the few that remain with a feather.

In getting bees into a hive we either pour them down in front of it, directing their course to its entrance with a feather, or shake them at once on the top of the frames, and cover instantly with a cloth.

To secure a swarm that has issued and clustered on a tree or bush, we advise, if possible, to cut the branch off after all are settled. If this be done gently, the bees can then be carried to the stand they are to occupy, laid down at the door of their new hive, and directed with a feather, as before; otherwise we hold an inverted skep below the cluster, give the branch one sharp rap, cover the skep, into which the bees will fall, with a cloth, and carry it to its future abode.

To make a simple examination of a colony in a bar frame hive, the quilt is removed, a puff or two of smoke given, and the frames are lifted one at a time, with as little jar as possible. Both sides can be examined; the queen seen and captured if desired, and the entire secrets of the hive discovered without hurting a bee or receiving a sting.—Dublin (Ireland) Farmers' Gazette.

A Logician.

"How is it," said a citizen, meeting an acquaintance, "that you manage to wear such good clothes? If you would not expend so much money on dress, you might be able to repay that sum of money you borrowed from me."

"It is evident that you do not understand the situation," the acquaintance replied. "If I did not dress well I could not borrow money. I bought these clothes with the money I borrowed from you. I am out of business, you know, and if I don't keep myself in presentable shape, why, I'd come out at the contracted end of the wind instrument."—Arkansaw Traveler.

How Watch Cases are Made.

It is a fact not generally known that the James Boss' Gold Watch Cases really contain more pure gold than many "solid" gold cases. The demand for these watch cases has led to the manufacture of a very poor grade of solid gold watch cases—low in quality, and deficient in quantity. These cases are made from 4½ to 10 karats, and a 5 or 6 karat case is often sold for 12 or 14 karats. It is NOT economy to buy a watch case so poor in quality that it will soon lose its color, or one so soft that it will lose its shape and fail to shut tight, thus letting in dust and damaging the works, or one so thin that a slight blow will break the crystal, and perhaps the movement. It IS economy to buy a James Boss' Gold Watch Case, in which NONE of these things ever occur. This watch case is not an experiment—it has been made nearly thirty years.

HAZLETON, PA., Oct. 24, 1883.

I sold two James Boss' Gold Watch Cases thirty years ago, when they first came out, and they are in good condition yet. One of them is carried by a carpenter, Mr L. W. Drake, of Hazleton, and only shows the wear in one or two places; the other by Mr. Bowman, of Cunningham, Pa.; and I can produce one or both of these cases at any time.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is designed to meet the wants of a large portion of our people who are either too poor to employ a physician, or are too far removed to easily call one, and a still larger class who are not sick enough to require medical advice, and yet are out of sorts and need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies so it will do its duty willingly. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot, like

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy.

My friend, you need not take our word. Ask your neighbor, who has just taken one bottle. He will tell you that "It is the best dollar I ever invested."

LEBANON, N. H., Feb. 19, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Dear Sirs—Although greatly prejudiced against patent medicines in general, I was induced, from the excellent reports I had heard of your Sarsaparilla, to try a bottle, last December, for dyspepsia and general prostration, and I have received very gratifying results from its use. I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,

General News Summary.

Interesting Home and Foreign News.

CONGRESS.

MR. VOORHEES offered a resolution in the Senate on the 11th calling on the Secretary for the Interior for information concerning the supplies of beef to Indians laid over for one week. Consideration of the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill was then resumed. After a long debate on the item appropriating $250,000 to cover the necessary expenses attendant upon the execution of the neutrality act, without reaching a conclusion the Senate adjourned. After passing the Senate bill extending the time to commence laying the Atlantic cable, the House went into Committee of the Whole on the River and Harbor bill, consideration of which occupied the day. The appropriation portion of the bill being concluded, the committee rose and the House adjourned.

THE Senate on the 12th passed the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill—yeas 38, nays 2; an addition of $800,000 is made to the bill as reported from the House. The Mexican Pension bill was taken up and debated at length, but without reaching a conclusion on the bill. The Senate went into executive session and when the doors were re-opened, adjourned. The House, in Committee of the Whole, resumed consideration of the River and Harbor bill. After the adoption of several amendments the committee rose and reported the bill to the House, when Mr. Oates moved to strike out the Hennepin Canal clause; agreed to. The bill was then passed—yeas 156, nays 104. The Speaker appointed Messrs. Follett, Hutchins and Cannon conferees for the District of Columbia Appropriation bill. Mr. Eaton called up the Senate bill regulating the electoral count, with the amendment proposed by the House Committee on State Presidential Laws as a substitute. Pending debate on the bill the House adjourned.

THE Senate on the 13th passed the House bill providing for the payment of "Fourth of July" claims. The Chair appointed as conferees on the part of the Senate on the Consular and Diplomatic bill, Messrs. Allen, Hale and Beck; and on the Pension bill, Messrs. Logan, Dawes and Call. The bill to require the payment of $35,555 to the State of Georgia on account of moneys expended by that State for the common defense in 1777, was discussed at length, but without action. The Senate adjourned until the 16th. In the House the Senate amendments to the Consular and Diplomatic and Pension Appropriation bills were non-concurred in. Mr. Townsend submitted a conference report on the Postoffice Appropriation bill, giving the items upon which no agreement had been reached. On motion of Mr. Hoar, the House receded from its disagreement to the amendment increasing from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 the appropriation for the pay of letter carriers—yeas 115, nays 53—so the Senate amendment was concurred in. The House then insisted on its disagreement to the other amendments, and took a recess until evening, when seventy-six pension bills were passed. Adjourned.

THE House on the 14th resumed consideration of the amendments in dispute between the two Houses upon the Postoffice Appropriation bill, the pending amendment being that incorporated by the Senate appropriating $185,000 for special mail facilities on trunk lines. Finally, on motion of Mr. Horr, the House receded from its disagreement to the amendment and agreed to the same with an amendment increasing the appropriation to $250,000. The House refused to concur in the remaining amendment increasing from $4,000,000 to $4,300,000 the appropriation for railway postoffice clerks. This completed the consideration of the bill, and Pacific Railroad business was taken up. Pending discussion of a bill requiring the Pacific Railroad companies to pay the cost of conveying, surveying, and selecting of lands granted to and earned by those companies, the House adjourned. The Senate was not in session.

DOMESTIC.

THE Washington Star claims that recent disclosures show that the failure of the banking house of Middleton & Co. is not only the most disgraceful but the most disastrous one on record. Property left for safe keeping, good margins on stocks, charity funds, all of the deposits, and in fact everything, has been swept away and used by this firm until it is doubtful if it pays a cent or even a mill on the dollar. It is shown that they have been given bonds to make purchases which they have simply passed to their own credit and spent. Efforts are being made to have them indicted for obtaining money under false pretences.

AN attachment has been granted against the property of John C. Eno, the absconding President of the Second National Bank of New York, in a suit brought by the bank to recover $3,185,000, which amount, it is alleged, Eno misappropriated.

AT Williams & Hamilton's sale of short horn cattle at Lexington, Ky., on the 13th, fifty-three head brought an average of $589.

JAMES D. FISH, ex-President of the Marine National Bank of New York, has been indicted by the United States Grand Jury for violation of the banking laws.

THE annual banquet of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Club was held at the residence of Colonel Duffy in Lancaster on the 12th. Among those present were Senators Edmunds, Pendleton, Bayard, J. Donald Cameron, Angus Cameron, Samuel J. Randall, General Simon Cameron, Charles A. Dana, George W. Childs, and the Judges of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

THE project of holding at St. Louis a reunion of both American and Mexican veterans of the war of 1846 and 1847 is cordially endorsed by General Diaz and other prominent Mexicans, as the best opportunity to seal the friendship between the republics. General Diaz says the Mexican Government will aid the project in every way.

THE House Public Lands Committee has agreed to report favorably the bill requiring the General Government to pay the State of California, for school purposes, five per cent. of the net proceeds of all public lands sold within her boundaries since the State's admission. The amount proposed for payment is estimated at $1,000,000.

THE International Sunday School Convention closed its labors at Louisville on the 13th. The following Executive Committee was appointed for the coming year: James F. Funplar, Alabama; O. T. Flint, Arkansas; H. C. Sigler, California; George T. Hays, Colorado; N. H. Hall, Connecticut; E. G. Wheeler, Dakota; J. B. Night, District of Columbia; C. C. McLean, Florida; J. C. Courtney, Georgia; B. F. Jacobs, Illinois; J. S. Morrow, Indian Territory; W. H. Levering, Indiana; S. W. Cole, Iowa; T. B. Sweet, Kansas; A. I. Hobbs, Kentucky; T. W. Flynn, Louisiana; B. T. Snow, Maine; J. B. Thippes, Maryland; Smith Baker, Massachusetts; E. K. Warren, Michigan; Henry Plant, Minnesota; J. B. Streator, Mississippi; W. T. Paxton, Missouri; L. L. Wood, Montana; J. B. Hartwell, Nebraska; John T. Sane, New Hampshire; William Harris, New Jersey; W. A. Duncan, New York; E. A. Ebert, North Carolina; Robert Cowden, Ohio; C. T. Hetsler, Oregon; E. S. Wagoner, Pennsylvania; A. B. McCrillis, Rhode Island; J. W. Lupton, Tennessee; Ira H. Evans, Texas; J. H. Babbitt, Vermont; W. A. Crawford, Virginia; Dexter Horton, Washington Territory. The committee elected officers for 1884-7 as follows: Chairman, D. F. Jacobs, Chicago; Treasurer, L. A. Bigelow, New York; Secretary, James D. Phipps, Baltimore; Finance Committee, L. A. Bigelow, New York, E. S. Wagoner, Pennsylvania, James Phipps, Baltimore. The convention adjourned to meet at a time and place to be appointed by the Executive Committee.

COLONEL NELSON PLATO, Collector of Customs for the Corpus Christi (Texas) district has been placed under arrest charged with being a defaulter to the Government in the sum of $1,770.

THE challenge of Peter H. Conley for a five mile race for $1,000 a side has been accepted by Teemer of Pittsburgh, who names July 4, at Oak Point.

JUDGE EDGERTON granted a motion made to quash the indictment against Governor Ordway in connection with the Dakota Capital removal, on the ground that the Grand Jury has no jurisdiction over the alleged offense of an executive, so far as his official acts are concerned.

THE treaty which has been under consideration in the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, providing for an international copyright and patent system, and which has already been ratified and promulgated by twenty-four governments, was reported adversely by the committee to the Senate, and after a brief discussion was rejected.

DURING a heavy wind storm at Carthage, Missouri, on the 14th the family of Mr. Brunk fled to the cellar for safety, leaving a son, Oliver, aged seventeen, sick in bed, and when they returned after the storm had passed they found him dead from fright.

CURRAN WINSLOW, a twelve-year-old boy, died at Clinton, Ill., on the 15th from the effects of a threatened chastisement by his parents for some small misdemeanor.

THE trial of Attorney T. C. Campbell for the alleged attempted bribery of a juror in the case of William Berner, just before the Cincinnati riot, closed on the 14th with a disagreement of the jury, which stood five for acquittal to seven for conviction.

FOLLOWING is the statement of the New York associated banks for the week ended June 14: Loans decrease, $6,725,300; specie increase, $2,409,800; legal tenders increase, $2,592,300; deposits decrease, $2,211,600; circulation decrease, $31,000,100; reserve increase, $5,645,000. The banks held $6,984,500 in excess of legal requirements.

THE Lehigh Valley Railroad has purchased 50,000 acres of coal land in Clearfield County, Pennsylvania, for $1,000,000 cash.

A FIRE at St. Paul on the 14th destroyed eight frame houses and a number of sheds on Seventh Street. Loss about $20,000; insured.

THE Omaha (Nebraska) Grand Jury on the 14th indicted Mayor Chase and City Marshal Guthrie for alleged bribery and perjury. It is charged the two officials have been levying a tribute upon the gamblers and prostitutes and received money from contracts. The evidence against them is said to have been given mainly by the gamblers, who claim to have paid and handled the corruption fund.

WILLIAM DANIELS and Cornelius Davis and wife were arrested at Flint, Mich., by the United States Marshal and taken to Detroit on the 14th for examination for counterfeiting. Daniels is believed to be John Rhienehart, the notorious Pennsylvania counterfeiter, under an assumed name. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to a fine of $500 and to imprisonment for ten years. On the premises of the Davis family were found moulds, melting ladles and a large quantity of raw material and counterfeit half dollars. Davis and his wife were held for further examination, in bonds of $3,000 each.

LATEST returns to the Illinois Department of Agriculture give a more discouraging outlook for the growing crops than one month ago. In the central and southern divisions there is much complaint of the appearance of a large amount of chess. In the northern division there is prospect for 94 per cent. of an average crop; in the central division 77, and the southern 64. In average seasons over one-half the winter wheat crop of the State is produced in the southern division and a partial failure of over one-third of the average yield per acre will greatly reduce the crops of the State.

BY the explosion of a boiler used at an oil well in Butler, Pa., on the 15th the engineer, Richard Walker, was killed, and his son, standing near by, received fatal injuries.

THE necessary papers to secure the extradition of John C. Eno, the defaulting President of the Second National Bank of New York, were made out at Washington on the 14th and the officials left with them for Canada. The State Department formally notified the British Minister that requisition had been made for the surrender of Eno.

AN approximate statement of the officers of the West Virginia Bank at Charleston made by the assignees on the 14th, shows the liabilities of the bank to be about $125,000, nominal assets about $160,000. The assignees feel confident that a large part of the indebtedness of the bank will be paid.

AT Montrose, Pa., on the 14th, William H. Cooper, a wealthy banker, was shot three times by Joseph Drinker who then attempted suicide by poison. It was thought both would recover, though Cooper's condition was critical.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

THE Episcopal Convention in session at Reading, Pa., has elected Rev. D. N. S. Rulison, of Cleveland, O., assistant bishop of the Central Diocese of Pennsylvania.

WILLIAM G. MORGAN, defaulting agent of the New York banking firm of Putnam & Earle, was on the 11th sentenced to three years in the Connecticut penitentiary.

COLONEL MORROW whose name figured prominently in the Swaim case in connection with duplicate pay accounts, is to be court-martialed.

A TARIFF Reform League was formed at New York on the 11th with W. B. Anderson, of Rochester University, president. The vice presidents include Henry Ward Beecher, George William Curtis and ex-Governor Robinson. The league is to hold an annual convention. Addresses were made by David A. Wells, General Devins, Thomas G. Shearman and others.

GENERAL CHARLES H. GROSVENOR, of Athens, has been nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Fourteenth Ohio district.

MRS. MCSWEENEY, wife of John McSweeney, Ohio's great criminal lawyer and orator, died at her home in Wooster on the 11th.

CALHOUN BENHAM, a prominent lawyer of San Francisco, died on the 12th. In the famous duel between Judge David Terry and Senator Broderick, Benham acted as Terry's second.

HON. HEISTER CLYMER, died suddenly of paralysis at Reading, Pa., on the 12th aged fifty-seven years. The deceased served in the Pennsylvania State Senate six years, was Democratic candidate for Governor against Geary in 1866, and served in Congress from Berks District from 1873 to 1881.

THE degree of Doctor of Philosophy was conferred upon Mrs. Elizabeth Boynton Herbert, of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, and Sarah Amelia Scull, of Washington, D. C., author of a text book on Greek mythology, by the Wesleyan Female College at Cincinnati, of which they are graduates. A class of eleven graduated.

STEPS are being taken at Cincinnati to organize a Thurman club with a view of attending the Chicago convention in a body to urge his claims for the nomination.

WILLIAM SEXTON, the billiard player, was seriously injured at New York on the 15th by being thrown from a buggy. His left arm was broken in two places and his head badly bruised.

THE Ohio Republican State Central Committee have elected the following Executive Committee: Chairman, J. F. Ogleves; Secretary, J. R. Brown; Treasurer, G. W. Sinks; Charles Foster, J. B. Foraker, M. A. Hanna, C. C. Waddell, S. L. Johnson, James Poindexter, T. Ewing Miller.

FOREIGN.

REPORTS have reached Cairo that the rebels had massacred Hussein Pasha, the Khalifa, commander at Berber, and all his family, besides the garrison, which was faithful to the Khedive, and European traders who remained there.

IT is said that the English sergeants at Suakim have resigned owing to the cowardice of the Egyptian officers and men.

BLACKSMITHS and furriers in Austria recently struck for twelve hours a day and rest on Sunday, and $2.81 per week. At present they work fourteen hours, half day Sunday, for thirty-six cents a day.

IN the English House of Commons on the 12th Woodall's amendment to the franchise bill, in favor of female suffrage, was rejected by a vote of 271 to 135.

NEWS reached London on the 12th that a water spout occurred in Akulsig, Russian Turkestan, on June 2. The river was overflowed, seventy houses destroyed and forty persons drowned.

Two insane men, named Napoleon Voisine and Elsia Joly, recently escaped from the Quebec asylum, and their bodies were found drowned on Beauport Beach.

A FIRE at Winnipeg, Manitoba, on the 12th destroyed a block of buildings valued at $100,000.

THE banking houses of Baring Bros. & Glyn and Mills, Currie & Co., of London, have issued £5,000,000 of the new Canadian 3½ per cent. loan. The minimum price is 91.

RICHARD HOWARD and three companions, names unknown, were drowned in Toronto Bay on the 13th.

A LONDON dispatch of the 15th states that an Arab at Korosko, who claims to be the sole survivor of the Berber garrison, says he was present when the rebels attacked Berber, May 23d. The garrison defended the town two hours, but the rebels forced their way into the city, where they immediately massacred 1,500 men of the garrison and 2,000 of the male population. The women and children were spared. The story is believed by Major Kitchener and the son of Hussein, Pasha Khalifi, Governor of Berber. The fall of Berber is officially credited at Wady Halfa.

SEVEN men were executed on the 14th at Jarez, Spain, for the Blackhand Socialist outrages. Five others were committed to imprisonment for life.

AT London, Ontario, on the 14th four members of the Salvation Army were fined ten dollars each or ten days in jail for beating drums, etc., on the streets. They appeal.

THEBAW, King of Burmah, poisoned the Queen and her mother, and then married the Queen's sister.

IT is reported that El Mahdi is marching toward Dongola with 35,000 troops, and hopes to capture the town before the feast of Ramadan, June 25.

LATER.

WHILE workmen were engaged in sinking a well for a new pumping engine at the Wheeling (W. Va.) city water works on the 16th, the excavation having reached a depth of fifty-two feet, quicksand was noticed oozing into the well beneath the wooden wall. The contractor ordered all men from the well, and all reached terra firma in safety, when the pressure on the wooden shell collapsed it and the earth caved in for a space of twenty-five feet on each side of the well, carrying the hoisting derrick, engine and two men to a depth of forty feet. One man, John Smith, a carpenter, aged forty, of Wellsville, O., was buried beneath the mass. Patrick Scullen, a miner, of East Liverpool, was dangerously crushed, but was gotten out alive.

NEW ZEALAND advices by the steamer Zealander, which arrived at San Francisco on the 17th, says that the British iron ship Syria, from Calcutta to Fiji, having aboard 480 coolies, ran on the Nasali reef and seventy coolies were drowned. All the crew but three are missing.

M. G. NORTON, of Winona, Minn., elected at Chicago as a member of the National Republican Committee for Minnesota, has sent his resignation to the State Central Committee. It is thought the committee will appoint Ex-Governor Davis.

WHILE witnessing a balloon ascension at Bordeaux, France, on the 15th, George W. Roosevelt, United States Consul, was shot by a French soldier, who then escaped. The bullet passed through Roosevelt's hat, contused his head and knocked him over. It is supposed the soldier mistook the Consul for an officer in civilian's dress against whom he had a grudge.

ADVICES from Greenland received in London, on the 16th state that the brig Eleria had been crushed in the ice and ten of the crew were drowned.

A BILL was reported favorably in the Senate on the 16th increasing the appropriation for public buildings in Erie, Pa., from $150,000 to $300,000. Mr. Plumb reported the Army Appropriation bill; it appropriates $25,000 more than the House bill. The report of the conference committee upon the Postoffice Appropriation bill was taken up, and the Senate concurred in the House amendment increasing the amount appropriated for "special facilities on trunk lines" from $180,000 to $250,000; but the three remaining Senate amendments to the bill were insisted upon. Consideration of the Utah bill was then resumed. After debate, without action, the Senate went into executive session and soon adjourned. In the House bills were introduced and referred: By Mr. Follett, granting 160 acres of the public domain to every honorably discharged Union soldier and sailor of the late war; by Mr. Belford, for the erection of a Union and Confederate Soldiers' Home at Denver. Mr. Lowry, from the Committee on Elections, submitted a report on the contested election case of Campbell vs. Morey, declaring the contestant entitled to the seat; laid over. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Deficiency Appropriation bill. An amendment was adopted, appropriating the following sums for refunding State expenses incurred in raising volunteers: Ohio, $90,246; New York, $54,946; Michigan, $12,345; Massachusetts, $28,639. Adjourned.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 19, 1884.

The Democratic opportunity has arrived. Will the leaders prove themselves equal to the occasion? Time will show.

The prevailing sentiment seems to be that the Democrats have the game in their own hands. Will they possess wisdom enough to hold it?

Blaine and Logan will run a red-fire, sky-rocket campaign, but can they get the necessary votes? This question can be best answered after the election.

The letter of declination of Samuel J. Tilden will stand at the head of the political literature of this campaign. It is safe to say that no letter of acceptance will compare with it.

The Republicans, in their Chicago platform, adopted the plan of trying to please everybody. The result is, they pleased nobody and are likely to lose the election in the bargain.

The Blaine & Logan ticket seems to take differently in different sections of the country. In most of the Western states the ticket will run well. It is weak in New York and New England.

It looks more and more like Benj. F. Butler. Butler's nomination would bring into the Democratic camp half a million of allies. Could he hold a united Democratic support? There's the rub.

The duty of the Democracy is plain. They must nominate a ticket which will command the confidence of thinking, reasoning men in all parties, above all a clean, honest ticket, or go down in defeat.

The Republican hope of success now rests almost wholly upon the Democratic capacity for blundering. This has been a safe reliance in many a past campaign, and may serve them another good turn.

The reception of the Chicago ticket justifies the prophecy made in the HERALD two weeks ago. John Sherman would have been equally as strong in Ohio, and would have led a united Republican party in New York.

Here are half a dozen good Democratic tickets: Cleveland & Hoadley, Cleveland & McDonald, Cleveland & Palmer, Butler & Carlisle, Thurman & Slocum, Butler & Palmer. The last one named is not the least, by any means.

The nomination of Blaine and Logan has relegated the tariff issue into the shades of obscurity. The issue of honest government and administrative reform becomes the paramount one. If the Democracy are wise they will accept the challenge on Blaine's own ground.

Can the Democratic leaders unite the various elements which are hostile to Blaine & Logan on one platform and one ticket? That is the problem for the July convention to solve. The prize to be won is a grand one, and deserves a united and harmonious effort by the best men in the party.

People who flatter themselves that Blaine & Logan can be easily beaten, show little knowledge of practical politics. They will take command of their forces in person, recruits will be welcomed from every possible source, stragglers will be brought in, the commissary department will be kept well supplied and every inch of ground will be hotly contested. They can be beaten, but it will be no holiday task to do it.

Whatever people may think of Tilden's physical condition, his letter of withdrawal shows that his brain has not lost its cunning. It is a masterpiece of political management and a grand literary composition. Jefferson, Jackson, Tilden. Tilden completes the trio. These three will go down in history as the apostles of the Democracy.

Gov. Cleveland's nomination would gather in the independent Republicans of New York. Ben Butler's would draw the Anti-monopolists and Greenbackers. Can a ticket be formed which would harmonize both these elements and unite the straight Democratic vote? To the accomplishment of this task the Democratic leaders should earnestly, unitedly and practically address themselves.

BURIED IN QUICKSAND.

Two Workmen Carried Forty Feet Into the Earth by an Immense Cave-In.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 17.—A shocking and fatal calamity of a unique character occurred here yesterday. Workmen were engaged in sinking a well for a new pumping engine at the city waterworks, and the excavation had reached the requisite depth of fifty-two feet, had been carefully guarded with a curbing of oak plank, and the walling with brick was about to commence, when the quicksand was noticed coming into the well beneath the wooden wall. The contractor ordered all men from the well and all reached terra firma in safety, when the pressure on the wooden shell collapsed it and the earth caved in for a space of twenty-five feet on each side of the well, itself twenty-eight feet across, and carrying the hoisting derrick, engine and two men to a depth of forty feet. One man, John Smith, a carpenter, aged forty, of Wellsville, O., was buried beneath the mass and has not been extricated yet. Patrick Scullen, a miner of East Liverpool, was dangerously crushed, but was gotten out alive.

A large force of men have been working constantly for five hours to recover Smith's body, but the treacherous quicksand caves in as fast as dug out. The situation is dangerous, and a heavy rain would destroy the entire waterworks and much adjacent property. Nobody is to blame, the character of the foundation being unknown. Smith leaves a wife and four children.

Fatal Powder Explosion.

AKRON, O., June 17.—A powder magazine just northeast of this city, owned by Paige Brothers, hardware dealers, exploded with a terrific report at five o'clock yesterday afternoon. A number of boys were playing around it, and one touched a match to a cake of wet powder lying outside. The flash at once communicated to the powder inside through a hole in the corner of the magazine, and a tremendous explosion occurred. Perry Peck, aged nine, was burned to a crisp, his legs being consumed and little left but the charred trunk. Cliff Booth and "Butch" Teeple, aged about twelve, were horribly burned on the arms and side, but not fatally. The clothing of three others took fire and they were blown violently some distance, but succeeded in putting out the fire and were little burned. The magazine contained seventy kegs of damp powder and was about to be abandoned. The building was demolished. The report was heard nearly a mile.

Clifford, the Rendville Lyncher, Makes His Escape from Jail.

NEW LEXINGTON, O., June 17.—The discovery was made some time this forenoon that Jim Clifford, who was in jail for lynching Richard Hickey, had made his escape. Isaac Rhinehart, the jailer, was soon after found at his home intoxicated, stupid, sick, and had probably been drugged. His wife states that he came home late in the night in a delirious condition. Hannagan, Blakely and the two Farrons, who are in jail for the assault upon McDevitt, say that about two o'clock in the night two or three men came to the jail, unlocked the doors, let Clifford out, and then locked them again. The jailer is not in a condition to tell anything at present, but when he recovers may be able to make important disclosures. Clifford was to have had his trial at the present term.

Pittsburgh Oil Certificates.

PITTSBURGH, June 17.—At a meeting of the directors of the Petroleum Exchange yesterday morning, a resolution was adopted that hereafter no vouchers shall be accepted for oil to be delivered or received from any bank not a member of the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association. The action was brought about by a bank last Saturday refusing a check for $60,000 drawn on another bank not a member of the Clearing House Association and demanding cash or a check on a Clearing House bank.

Fatal Ending of a Honeymoon.

FORT SCOTT, Kas., June 17.—Steve Anderson, colored, a fireman in the mills at East Fort Scott, a man of good reputation and recently married, quarreled with his wife Sunday over plans for a proposed fishing party. The woman shut him out of the house. He requested her to open the door, and when she complied shot her three times in the breast with a pistol. He then shot himself in the head and died instantly. The woman died a few minutes later.

Indicted for Accepting Bribes.

OMAHA, June 17.—The Grand Jury yesterday indicted Mayor Chase and City Marshal Guthrie for alleged bribery and perjury. It is charged the two officials have been levying a tribute upon the gamblers and prostitutes and received money from contracts. The evidence against them is said to have been given mainly by the gamblers, who claim to have paid and handled the corruption fund.

Coal Miner's Strike Began.

MONONGAHELA CITY, Pa., June 17.—The general strike of the river coal miners, ordered for yesterday, indicates a lack of unanimity. Work is suspended in several mines but a majority are still in operation. There is no enthusiasm among the miners and one man seems to be waiting on another to take the initiative. Miner officials claim all will be out in four days, while the operators characterize the strike as a failure.

Ore Mines Idle.

EASTON, Pa., June 17.—Depression in the iron trade has caused a falling off in orders for ore from the mines in Williams Township, Northampton County, which supply the Glendon iron furnace. The mines of Sampson, Merworth, Bennett and others shut down. A large number of men are out of employment. Hahn's mines and several others had orders reduced from eighty-five to ten tons a week.

Base Ball.

CLEVELAND, June 17.—The Clevelands defeated the Detroits yesterday by a score of 2 to 0.

Boston—New Yorks, 1; Bostons, 6.
Buffalo—Chicagos, 9; Buffalos, 20.
Providence—Philadelphias, 1; Providence, 13.

The American Navy.

ANNAPOLIS, June 17.—The frigates Constellation and Dale left yesterday, the former on a cruise with cadets of the Atlantic coast, the latter to go to Hampton Roads to repair her hull, which has been found so rotten that it will not hold the rudder and on inspection the bow was found in the same condition.

A Team Struck by an Engine.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., June 16.—George Harris was driving in a buggy with two companions across a railroad track yesterday evening, when a switch engine struck the party, throwing them fifty feet. Harris will die, and the others were badly injured.

POSTAGE REDUCTION.

The Law Reducing the Postage on Newspapers Goes Into Effect.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The new rate of newspaper postage meets with universal approval and the officials of the Postoffice Department believe the reduction which has been brought about without any noise will be even more appreciated when the fact becomes generally known. Almost any eight-page paper, by the old rate, would require two cents postage and, the annoyance to business men, and the public generally to affix sufficient stamps and yet not lose too large a sum by overpayment, has been very great. A newspaper, when the postage was not fully prepaid, invariably found its way into the postoffice waste basket and knowing this fact the sender of a newspaper which he was especially anxious should reach its destination always had to prefix sufficient postage stamps to insure its delivery. It was not like a letter which is sent so long as one rate of postage is paid. The newspaper must be prepaid in full or it does not go. Under the new rates almost any newspaper including a good-sized supplement, may be sent for one rate. The next reform most called for is the reduction of the limit of weight on letters from half an ounce for one rate to an ounce. While the bulk of the letters carried in the mails average less than half an ounce each, now and then one is encountered that weighs more than that limit, and an extra charge is collected, which with the time consumed and labor required in affixing "due" stamps, etc., does not yield enough revenue to make it profitable to the department, and it would be to the advantage of all concerned were the limit extended.

The following is the law enacted by Congress regarding postage on second-class mail matter, which went into effect yesterday:

"Be it enacted, etc., that the rate of postage on newspapers and periodical publications of the second class when sent by others than the publisher or news agent, shall be one cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, and shall be fully prepaid by postage stamps affixed to said matter." Approved June 9, 1884.

This act in effect reduces the postage on transient newspapers one-half. The law heretofore exacted one cent for each two ounces or fractional part thereof. The new rate allows a paper or periodical not exceeding four ounces to be transmitted any distance through the mails for one cent.

The Presbyterians.

TORONTO, Ont., June 16.—The Presbyterian General Assembly committee appointed to co-operate with the committee of other branches of the Christian Church with a view to imparting religious instruction in public schools, met Saturday. An overture on party politics was discussed. A motion was passed urging on ministers and members of the church the duty of fostering a more judicial, patriotic and charitable feeling regarding all matters affecting the policies and government of the country. Addresses to the Queen and Governor General were adopted. A resolution praying Parliament to make seduction under promise of marriage and mock marriages criminal offenses was adopted, as also a memorial to the Government praying for legislation against Sabbath desecration by railway companies and the transmission of mails.

A Defective Boiler Explodes, Instantly Killing the Engineer.

BUTLER, Pa., June 16.—A boiler used for pumping the Balridge oil well No. 13 exploded Sunday morning with a terrific report, hurling pieces of the boiler in every direction, demolishing the boiler and engine house, and horribly mangling the engineer, Richard Walker, causing his death in a few hours. His son, who was near his father, was thrown fifteen feet, receiving fatal injuries. A small frame building near by, occupied by Walker, was partially demolished, and his daughter slightly hurt. The cause of the explosion is not known.

The National Rifles Defeated.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 16.—The competitive drill at Lake Minnetonka on Saturday between the National Rifles, of Washington, and company D, National Guards, of St. Paul, resulted in a victory for the St. Paul company. When the St. Paul men returned they were welcomed by a small army of admirers, who were all armed with new brooms, and the broom brigade escorted the victorious company to their armory. The drill occupied forty minutes for each company.

A Protest From Cuba.

HAVANA, June 16.—A number of planters, merchants and others, in Matanzas, sent a dispatch to their representive in the Cortes, instructing him to inform the Madrid Government that they have learned with displeasure of the mere abolition of discriminating duties, and they protest earnestly against a resolution which does not decree the free export of sugar, free trade with Spain and a liberal treaty with the United States.

Work of the Vigilants.

DEADWOOD, D. T., June 16.—Alexander Fiddler, a young man of many aliases, was found near Sturgis, this county, Saturday, hanging to a limb. He and two companions robbed an emigrant family en route to the hills recently, and he is supposed to have met his fate at the hands of vigilants. He bore a bad name and had been several times convicted of crime.

A Destructive Wind Storm.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 16.—A destructive wind-storm swept through the Royer Valley between ten and eleven o'clock Saturday night. Houses and barns in Crawford County and at Woodbine were wrecked. The crops sustained considerable damage.

At Woonsocket, Dakota.

WOONSOCKET, Dakota, June 16.—A fire here Saturday morning, burned one entire block to the ground. The total loss will amount to about $20,000. It is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

A Contested Seat in Congress.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Mr. Lowry, from the Committee on Elections, submitted a report on the contested election case of Campbell vs. Morey, declaring the contestee entitled to his seat. Laid over.

Drink and the Knife.

CINCINNATI, June 17.—During a drunken row a Bromley, Ky., opposite this city, Sunday, "Red" Merris was fatally stabbed by Jake Free and John Buttner.

Furniture Factory Burned.

TELL CITY, Ind., June 17.—A fire Sunday night burned the Tell City furniture factory. Loss $60,000; insured for $12,000.

HER SECRET TROUBLES.

The Unknown Trials Which a Woman Endured Without Complaint—Why they Vanished.

Near the close of one of the most trying of the few hot days of the present year a pale, careworn woman might have been seen at the window of her dwelling apparently in a condition of complete exhaustion. Her efforts to meet the accumulated duties of her household had been great but unsuccessful, while the care of a sick child, whose wails could even then be heard, was added to her otherwise overwhelming troubles. Nature had done much for her and in her youthful days she had been not only beautiful but the possessor of health such as is seldom seen. But home and family duties and the depressing cares which too often accompany them had proven greater than her splendid strength and she felt at that moment not only that life was a burden but death would be a grand relief. This is no unusual experience. It is, in fact, a most common every day occurance, and a great prayer is constantly ascending from thousands of homes for deliverance from the deadly power which is enslaving so many wives mothers and daughters. And yet these duties of life must be met. No woman can afford to turn aside from the proper care of her home and the ones who are committed to her care, although in doing these duties she may sacrifice her health, possibly life itself. The experience of one who successfully overcame such trials and yet retained health and all the blessings it brings is thus told by Rev. William Watson, Presiding Elder of the Methodist-Episcopal church, residing at Watertown, N. Y. He said:

"My wife became completely run down through overwork and care of a sick member of our household, and I entertained serious apprehensions as to her future. She was languid, pale, utterly exhausted, without appetite, and in a complete state of physical decline. And yet she did not, could not neglect her duties. I have seen her about the house, trying courageously to care for the ones she loved when I could tell, from the lines upon her face how much she was suffering. At times she would rally for a day or two and then fall back into the state of nervous exhaustion she felt before. Her head pained her frequently, her body was becoming bowed by pain and all hope or enjoyment in life seemed departed. What to do we could not tell. I resolved, however, to bring back her life and vitality if possible and to this end began to treat her myself. To my great relief her system has been toned up, her strength restored, her health completely recovered and wholly by the use of Warner's Tippecanoe, which I regard as the greatest tonic, invigorator and stomach remedy that has ever been discovered. I was led to use it the more readily as I had tested the health-restoring properties of Warner's Safe Cure in my own person and I therefore knew that any remedy Mr. Warner might produce would be a valuable one. I have since recommended both Warner's Tippecanoe and Warner's Safe Cure to many of my friends and I know several Doctors of Divinity as well as numerous laymen who are using both with great benefit."

If all the overworked and duty driven women of America could know of the experience above described, and act upon the same, there can be little doubt that much of the pain, and most of the depressing influences of life might be avoided. Such truths are too valuable to remain unknown.

Mrs. A. E. Ure has closed her business in Tecumseh for the season.

On Wednesday morning one of Elder Price's heifers was struck by lightning and instantly killed on his farm in Ridgeway.

C. O. Miller was not as badly hurt in the runaway as was expected; any way he is selling more New Homes than ever. One day last week he started out with "Collers Palace of Music" loaded with sewing machines and sold them all in one neighborhood. Below are the names that purchased the load: James Clarkson, Mrs. John Clarkson, Mrs. Asel Russell, Mrs. Geo. Mead, Mrs. Sidney Howe, Mrs. Geo. Squire, and Mrs. Dudley Macham.

Saline Observer: A little over two months ago a cow belonging to Alfred Miller of this Village, gave birth to an exceedingly small and weak calf, and on Monday last delivered herself of another one, or the second calf within about two months. Both calves are living and doing well. Calf No. 1 is said to have been no larger than a good sized lamb, and was so weak it had to be held in one's lap and fed, but is as stout and frisky now as any. Mr. Miller says he now has four cows and six calves, another cow having lately produced twins.

Married on the 12th inst. at the residence of Mrs. Susan Clark in Ridgeway, mother of the bride, Mr. Frank P. Clarkson of Macon and Miss Nellie Clark of Ridgeway, by Rev. W. M. Campbell. The large company present on the occasion was entertained right royally by Mrs. Clark and her accomplished daughters. After a most delightful social hour, and the presentation by the friends of good-will offerings, many of which were rich, useful and beautiful, the happy couple started on their wedding tour for Macinac, via Wabash R. R., and the elegant steamer "City of Cleveland."

P. T. Barnum says he expects to make a million dollars the coming season. A committee of merchants recently called upon him and asked him to reduce his business experience to writing for the benefit of posterity. Mr. Barnum agreed to do so and it will be printed in book form. One thing, however, he said he would tell them: "You do not, any of you, advertise enough. You ought to invest in printers' ink every day. You are asleep and want your business to run itself. The man who for a year resides in a community and leads a reputable life, even though he be of moderate ability, will grow in the confidence and esteem of his fellows. On the same principle a newspaper advertisement becomes familiar in the eyes of the reader and its presence in the column of a newspaper inspires confidence in the stability of the advertiser."

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to those of our neighbors and friends who have so kindly assisted us during the sickness of our daughter. Their kindness shall never be forgotten.

JAMES GLASGOW.
MARY GLASGOW.

A CARD.

For downright cheek and impudence the card of A. M. Bly, in last week's HERALD is unsurpassed. I wish it distinctly understood that he is not tuning pianos for me, and that he has no business connection with me whatever. He invites you to call at my Music Store and look over his references. Please do so.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 19, 1884.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Parties visit the lakes now daily.

Did any one remark that it was hot?

Laverne Ide was at home over Sunday last.

The outlook is good for a big strawberry crop.

This is the weather when corn grows most rapidly.

No meeting of the Council last Monday evening.

Tecumseh does not celebrate on the fourth proximo.

Next Sunday, June 22, will be the longest day in the year.

John Gilchrist is home again from the northern part of the state.

Geo. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo, visited the old Newberg farm last week.

There was a goodly crowd on our streets Tuesday to see the circus procession.

Clinton is preparing for the biggest celebration of the 4th of July ever held there.

C. D. Bills and his horse "Hunter" are having a successful trip in the Ohio circuit.

Farmers are expressing themselves very much satisfied with the outlook for abundant crops.

David Van Tyne has lately re-painted his Brownville home, greatly adding to the beauty thereof.

Fred Wood is still on the war path. He says that Tecumseh will show a population of less than 10,000.

The choice of F. A. Dewey, of Cambridge, as President of the State Pioneer Society, was a good selection.

A. W. Slayton and Dr. Stewart went to Detroit on Tuesday and will remain there a few days on business.

Misses Emma and Maggie Smith went to Monroe last Monday and will remain there until after the Fourth.

Frank Snedicor was home from Dundee on Monday and Tuesday.—Frank likes Dundee and the Dundee girls like Frank.

Over sixteen thousand bushels of wheat have been shipped from Onsted station on the M. & O. road since the opening of the road.

Lavern Wheeler has again placed us under obligation for a landscape view of the Lake Shore Depot.—He has a few copies on hand for sale.

A novelty in the baking trade is a loaf of bread that does not require cutting after it is baked. It is shaped like Vienna bread, and so made as to form layers or slices of uniform thickness, which by pulling gently are detached, thus avoiding the use of the knife.

Donaldson's circus which exhibited in this village on Tuesday last, although a 25ct. show gave by far a better entertainment than many of the "greatest on earth" establishments which do so much blowing. If they come to Tecumseh again they will receive a good patronage.

Lavern Wheeler has added two more landscape views to his list. One is entitled "Road Agents in the Black Hills," a view on the bluff near Blood's bridge. The other is an instantaneous view of the Baptismal services at the River Raisin last Sunday, which shows perfectly the immense crowd on the banks. The two views ought to sell.

Hillsdale wanted to celebrate this year. The saloon men were willing to contribute if the celebration would be held on the third of July; but the temperance people wouldn't go a cent on that day, but would have shelled out for a demonstration on the 4th, but the saloons would compel them to go it alone. Consequently the patriotic people of Hillsdale will not celebrate.

Toledo Evening Post.—Mr. Hayden of the Globe mills in Tecumseh, Michigan, on a visit to Ireland not long ago, to look after his flour shipments to that island, was surprised at seeing many Irishmen's pants stamped with the brand of his mills. On closer inspection he found that the patrons of his flour on emptying the duck bags made them into trowsers and other garments. The economy of the Irish free traders should not be overlooked by the American protectionists when studying the advantages of the two antagonistic systems.

Judge S. C. LeBaron departed this life yesterday afternoon, at the advanced age of 76 years. The deceased had been in feeble health for several years, and on Thursday of last week he had a fall which fractured his leg at the hip joint. Owing to the serious character of the break and the feebleness of the patient, it was found impossible to set the limb, and he has been in a critical condition since, until yesterday afternoon, when death put an end to his sufferings. The Judge was one of Tecumseh's pioneer residents, and for many years was one of our prominent business men. The funeral will be attended to-morrow afternoon at 5 o'clock at the Presbyterian church. A fitting obituary notice will appear next week.

The Adrian High School closes this week.

The Deerfield Union School closed last week.

The prospects are favorable for a big apple crop this year.

The wheat crop is looking remarkably well through this section.

The Commencement exercises at the University will be held next week.

Do you note the change of style in wearing the hair? It is "banged" behind instead of before. The girls are tired of Sarah Brum and are trying Sarah Belnap.

Prof. Hammond will retain his position as superintendent of the Tecumseh schools for another year. It is probable that most of the other teachers will also remain.

Morenci will celebrate the glorious fou 1. They advertise an old-fashioned celebration, but how they can do so when the law compels saloons to close they do not explain.

The M. & O. road is now selling excursion tickets to Devil's lake and return when parties of ten or more take the same train. The rate for the round trip from Tecumseh is only 60 cents.

Dr. Samuel Catlin was absent from home two days last week in attendance upon the session of the State Medical Society at Grand Rapids.—The society held a large and enthusiastic convention.

Rev. J. L. Hudson, Editor of the Union Light, gave us a call last Saturday. We are glad to learn that the Light is shedding its rays quite numerously about the county, and is building up a good subscription list.

Many people were in town Saturnay, the fine weather bringing them out. Trade, however, wasn't especially heavy; nor will it acquire its old time activity till the growing crops smile positive encouragement on the agriculturist.

Morenci Observer: The work of removing the old bridge over the Bean in this village will commence next Monday preparatory to the erection of the new iron structure. The new bridge will be ready for use on the glorious Fourth.

Hudson Gazette: Blissfield, Tecumseh, Adrian and Jonesville each have a crack base ball team; Hudson nary. Where are the bold Hudson knights of the bat who not so long ago made the sporting world tremble with their omnipotence in the b. b. field?

Wm. H. Brezee, State Agent of the Detroit Evening Journal was in town last Monday on business connected with that paper. The Journal now has a good list in Tecumseh and desires a larger one. It is one of the best evening dailies circulated here.

The Detroit Post and Tribune has obtained a special Sunday train on all the railroads leading out of Detroit, by which their Sunday morning edition is delivered at all the principal towns of the state early the same forenoon. They deserve a liberal patronage for their enterprise.

Geo. L. Graves, of Milwaukee, has been spending a few days in town among his old friends. His hearty hand-shake is always welcome. Miss Carrie Powers returns home with him to stay a few weeks. He started back Tuesday evening, driving over to Adrian and taking the late train on the Lake Shore.

Round trip tourist's tickets to Traverse City, Petoskey, Mackinac Island, Mackinaw City, Sault St. Marie, Marquette and Duluth via the Michigan & Ohio Railroad, are now on sale at the Depot Ticket office at this station, where full particulars may be obtained as to rates, routes &c.
H. U. MATTHEWS, AGENT.

St. Nicholas comes crisp and bright with splendid contents. The spinning wheel story is continued and is accompanied by, Boys of Migglesville, The Scarlet Teamster, The Boy Hunters, Historic Boys, Queer Game, and a beautiful bit of poetry, entitled "The Brownies' Voyage." St Nicholas is the best youth's magazine published.

Hudson Gazette: We noted last week the spiriting away of a saloon stock from Addison. We learn that Cleveland, who held the mortgage, has got possession of the goods again. It will be remembered they were hauled to Ohio. From there they were shipped to Detroit, Cleveland resiezing them at Grosvenor the moment they crossed the state line.

Morenci Observer: A large number of citizens not connected with any church organization called upon Rev. Mr. VanAntwerp on Thursday and presented him with a purse of $25, as a testimonial of their kind regards as a christian gentleman who, "with malice toward none and charity for all," had always extended to them a kind and generous christian courtesy and respect.

A wire clothes line is an innocent thing if you do not molest it, but when a man is endeavoring to make a hasty retreat through a back yard where one of the domestic essentials is located, and tries to cut it in too with his neck, he will find it a tiresome undertaking even if he succeeds in an instant. Did you ever hear of any person trying it?

Fourth of July enthusiasm is getting to be a very uncertain element in this community.

Dr. E. Fessenden of Dundee, spent Monday night and Tuesday with friends in this village.

Ice water, fans, panama hats, linen dusters, ginger ale, and ice cream, are seasonable this weather.

Children's Day exercises at the Methodist Episcopal church have been postponed until Sunday July 13, on account of the public school exercises.

There will be a strawberry and ice cream social at the Methodist church next Friday evening for the benefit of the Parsonage fund. All are cordially invited.

The man that is known to have plenty of means and pays at long intervals, is "slow pay;" but the fellow that is of very light assets and practices the same thing, is a "dead beat." Do you catch on?

At a station not 100 miles from here a young man and woman were standing on a Michigan & Ohio railroad bridge making love and had to jump overboard to save being run over by the cars. No lives lost.

Hank Jones, our express agent, is selling a large number of tickets to those wishing to go across the ocean, and those wishing to take the trip should see him before purchasing their tickets as he will make the lowest prices.

Onion lunch parties are said to be all the rage now, as safe social gatherings. They are said to have been originated by a member of an Ohio Baptist church, who had only one leg, and didn't like the game of snap and catch 'em, that was so popular.

H. C. Conkling, of this village, has received the agency of Toledo and State of Michigan of the New Nickel Plate Fast Freight Line to New York, Philadelphia, Boston and principal New England points, and has established his office at Room No. 3, Produce Exchange, Toledo.

Nothing like knowing how Billy Arnold's baker has left him, and Billy rolls up his sleeves, and pitches in, and the result is that the customers of the Old Star bakery are being supplied with the very best of bread, pies and cakes. The public would be satisfied if he would do the baking all the time.

Last Monday evening a party of Tecumseh Masons visited the Manchester Lodge and had a most pleasant trip and visit. Frank Silvers best rig took them both ways. The names of those who went are: Dr. E. M. Conklin, J. R. Hialey, J. S. Temple, C. A. Sharp, T. Ralph, Ab. Wilson, J. H. Smith, John F. Wilson, E. Hause, Lewis Mudgett.

Ex Supervisor Cannon, of Deerfield, has on old hen which, having hatched a brood of chickens, he removed across the river to another point, leaving the chicks in care of another hen. What was Cannon's surprise when old mother "biddy" promptly ambled to the river side and without hesitation plunged in and swam across safely, meeting her brood on the other side to the tune of "We shall gather at the river."

The biggest thing yet. Toledo is making arrangements for the biggest kind of a celebration Fourth of July, one that will eclipse all former efforts. The fun will take place at the Tri-State Fair Grounds and will consist of base ball, a genuine race to the clouds in monster balloons, several horse races, and a grand display of day fire works; something entirely new and wonderful. There will be special excursion rates from here, for the occasion.

Adrian Times: Little Charley, youngest son of Sheriff Bidwell, met with an unfortunate accident Saturday evening, by which his left shoulder blade was fractured. The lad was in a box stall with his pony, when the animal crowded him against the side of the stall, with result above mentioned. The pony has been in the habit of rubbing himself against his attendant, through playfulness, and this time unfortunately caught his master unawares. Dr. A. M. Stephenson attended the case, the boy is being able to be about to-day.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK.

The following are the arrangements for commencement week

Sunday evening, June 22d.—Annual sermon by Rev. C. E. Conley at the Baptist church at 7:30 o'clock.

Wednesday evening, June 25th—Promotion exercises at the Opera House. All the grades of our schools below the high school will take part in this programme. The general programme will consist of recitations declamations and music, all by the little folks. This will be followed by appropriate grade exercises in which all pupils of each grade will participate. The programme will close with presentation of promotion certificates.

Thursday evening, June 26.—Graduating exercises of Class of '84. Programme will be as usual.

Friday evening, June 27th.—Reunion of the Alumni Association. These exercises will be held in the dining room of the Lilley House. There will be the usual literary programme followed by supper, served by Mr. Passmore. This will be followed by various toasts.

All indebted to the late firm of W. & S. W. Anderson please call and settle as we are anxious to close our books.
W. & S. W. ANDERSON & CO.

Mr. Alonzo Turner is not soliciting orders for roof painting for the Michigan Elastic Paint and Roofing Co. We give this notice because some have given him their job supposing we were to do the work.
SLAYTON & SON.

The Baptismal services which were conducted by Elder Rapp of the Ridgeway Christian Church at the River Raisin on Sunday afternoon last were witnessed by a large gathering of people who lined the banks on both sides. Nearly the whole village, as well as the towns east of us, must have turned out to witness the ceremony. Eight candidates received the ordinance prescribed by the rules of the Christian church.

That modest Quaker, WOOLSTON COMFORT, is no great hand to blow his own horn, but is an enthusiast in his milling business. He has this spring made his mill a complete roller mill—by removing the two remaining run of burrs—and adding two more sett of double rolls, and also adding other new machinery which improves the quality of his flour. We have tested Comfort's New Patent flour and confidently assert that it can't be beat. Whether used for bread, rich pastry or old fashioned ginger cookies, it invariably takes the cake. The cook, at our house, is always good natured when liberally supplied with Comfort's New Patent flour.

Morenci Observer.—The affairs of the Lenawee county agriultural society, are, we think, looking up just now, as under the direction of president Horton negotiations are pending which will doubtless result in purchasing an eligibly situated tract of 33 acre of land near the Wabash depot for the permanent use of the society.—The concern has a balance of near $1,700 in the treasury which with a handsome sum promised by the citizens of Adrian will enable the directors to commence the erection of the necessary buildings for the use of the fair this fall. It is pleasant to know that the county society is in the hands of square business men, and that the leechers who once held sway in its councils have stepped down and out.

Detroit Post & Tribune.—The Lake Shore management is at present trying to decide whether it or the state of Michigan is running the road. The company formerly operated as a part of the Michigan division a line running from Palmyra to near Adrian, and when the Jackson branch was built the Palmyra branch was abandoned save as a side track. The people at the stations on the line appealed to Commissioner Innes and that official commenced proceedings to compel the resumption of freight traffic on the abandoned branch, and there is a fair prospect of a lengthy encounter in the courts. The company's principal claim is that the branch does not pay and that the stations on the line are of no importance. The contest will be watched with keen interest by many, the opinion generally prevailing that the company will be obliged to resume the running of trains on the branch or surrender the right of way.

MASONIC VISIT TO MILAN.

At two or three different times this spring some of the Masonic brethren of Milan have paid the Tecumseh Lodge a visit, and on Thursday last, June 12th, a number of the Tecumseh brethren returned the compliment and accepted an invitation from the Milan Lodge to visit them. John J. Orr took the matter in hand and secured a party of fifteen to attend, as follows: Dr. E. M. Conklin, Geo. S. Wilson, J. H. Smith, C. M. Burlingame, S. C. Stacy, Wm. DeMott, John I. Werner, John J. Orr, John S. Temple, John VanVleet, Wesley Scutt, Jay A. Santus, Samuel Kniffin, John Britton.

The members living in Tecumseh took the afternoon train on the M. & O. and were met at Britton by the Ridgeway delegation. They took the five p. m. train on the Wabash and arrived at Milan just in time for supper. The wants of the inner men having been properly provided for at the Babcock House, our boys "took in" the village, or business portion of it, before the time arrived for harnessing the goat. The session was devoted to a third degree meeting, and the work was admirably performed. The hall was literally filled to overflowing. The candidate will have cause to remember the event of June 12th for a good many months. After the session our brethren were treated to a free lunch and every thing was done by I. S. Hitchcock, W. M. of the Milan Lodge and the other members thereof to make our visit an agreeable one. We were all impressed with the growing importance of Milan in general and with the sterling characteristics of the Milan Masons in particular. At eleven P. M. we took the Wabash train for home, and at Britton were met by one of Silver's best teams which brought us home in good season. All who went enjoyed the trip first rate, and those who remained at home missed the best thing of the season

The Colonels of the various regiments, and the Brigade Staff, of the State Militia, held a meeting at Lansing last week, and fixed the date for the annual encampment for August 9. The Montgomery Rifles, an independent organization of Detroit, were admitted to the State service.

A writer in an exchange says: "I discovered many years ago that wood could be made to last longer than iron in the ground, but thought that the process was so simple that it was not well to make a stir about it. Posts of any wood can be prepared for less than two cents apiece. This is the receipt: Take boiled linseed oil and stir in pulverized coal to the consistency of paint. Put a coat of this over the timber, and there is not a man who will live to see it rot.

DIED.

GLASGOW—Died, on Sunday June 15th 1884, Bertha L., daughter of James and Mary Glasgow, aged 8 years.

This dear child won much love to herself and bore with a very sweet submissive spirit the long illness which ended in her death. A sad vacancy has been made in the family circle to which she belonged, but there is comfort for its members in the hope that "It is well with the child."

It Can Cure

It is a fact that remedies almost without number, already contest the claim to cure all the ills that afflict suffering humanity. Thousands have found them powerless to work a cure for them.

No diseases have so baffled all attempts at permanent relief as have Rheumatism and Neuralgia. A long succession of disappointments has made their victims despair of the possibility of cure. For centuries they have been considered beyond the power of medical skill to cure.

And yet we say both can be cured, and that ATHLOPHOROS will do the business. The best proof that it can do it is that it has done it.

It Did Cure

Rev. S. R. Dennen, D.D., pastor Third Congregational Church, New Haven, Conn., rheumatism had kept him from the pulpit for two months at a time. He says he had suffered for years one could not live. He took the first dose of ATHLOPHOROS on Friday, Sunday he was in his pulpit, Monday he was well, and has remained so since.

Rev. William P. Corbit, D.D., pastor George St. M. E. Church, New Haven, Conn., was laid up for two months with Inflammatory Rheumatism, suffering most excruciating torture. ATHLOPHOROS cured him, and he believes it to be infallible.

H. S. Chandler, of the N. Y. "Independent," says ATHLOPHOROS cured him of Rheumatism from which he had suffered for a year and a half.

Rev. W. R. Evans, Washington, D. C., says: "I consider its work almost in the light of a miracle. It is a most wonderful medicine. It ought to be spread throughout the land."

It Will Cure

The great question is, Will it cure me? We believe it will. Is it worth trying? You must decide.

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

ZOA-PHORA

Is a Sovereign Remedy for all Complaints peculiar to

WOMEN.

MISHAWAKA, Ind., Dec. 1, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zoa-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years; but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. MRS. C. G.

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. Joan Spitler.

59 Wills St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasms, pain in my head and general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in my head, caused by weakness and severe exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora properly. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than 2 hours I had complete relief. I advise all ladies who suffer from nervous or sick headache or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

Beckleton's Bees.

Mr. Beckleton's bees swarmed the other day, and the new generation, leaving the hive, went over to an adjoining block, and settled in cone-shape on a peach tree. Hiving bees, when not managed skillfully, is a painful performance. The bee does not know that the human family admires his proverbial industry, and often stings the man who seeks to establish a home for the bill collector of sweets. The entire neighborhood was aroused when Mr. Beckleton's bees swarmed, and children, both white and black, assembled to see the fun. Mr. Beckleton was not at home when the insect raister occurred, and the management of the affair was taken in hand by the hired gentleman. A spring wagon with an impromptu hive was brought around. The unsuspecting horse, lashing the flies with his tail, soon attracted a scouting party of bees. The poor animal, stung to desperation, kicked and snorted, and breaking from his fastenings, ran out into the street and pawed the ground. A member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, came along, and seeing the horse tangled in his harness, but not observing the bees, approached with kind solicitude.

"It's a shame," said he to the hired man, "that you allow this horse to tangle himself in his gear. Whoa! Good Lord!" and waving his hands in the air he struck a trot, while a swarm of bees hovered around his devoted cranium. He ran to the street crossing, thrashing himself with his hat, reaching there just as a car came along. Some of the bees "zipped" the mule, and with a lunge the animal jerked the car from the track and ran against a fence. The only passengers were a fat man who sat reading a pamphlet on the Banting System, and an old maid who carried a little porte-monnaie sachel. A prominent bee went into the ear and drilled a cavity into the fat man's jowl, and a companion buzzed in and saluted the maiden lady on the neck. Banting's book flew out of the window and the beads on the porte-monnaie receptacle rattled as the old maid lifted her skirts and rushed from the car. The pain that a lean man can endure without striking demonstration will bring intensified fits to a fat man, and on this occasion Mr. Banting waddled from the car and fell over a tree box blown down by a recent storm. No sooner had he left the car than a dozen bees followed him. They crawled around his collar, leaving tracks of fire, and delighted themselves by a dance on his bald head. He bawled like a steer, broke down a garden fence, and when last seen, he was traveling towards the equator. The old maid had considerable trouble with her skirts, and her high-keyed shrieks must have rent the neighborhood like the wailings of the equinoctial wind.

When Mr. Beckleton reached home and learned that his bees had swarmed, he went over to assist the hired gentleman.

"Hold on there," he cried. "Don't fight 'em. Let 'em buzzaround. They won't hurt you. See?" as the bees began to buzz around his ears. "Wait a few moments and they'll be quiet." A bee lit on his moustache. "All you've got to do is—Gee whiz! whoop!" He ran against the fence and knocked off his plug hat, and in trying to fight off a bee that showed a disposition to settle on his eye, he trod upon the hat and mashed its crown through the brim into the ground. Everybody ran away and left him and, as he wandered around, he struck the peach tree and jarred the buzzing cone to the ground. Then he knew that man was made to moan; that life is full of sudden pain and cries. That bravery which would prompt a man to rush forward and rescue a fellow-mortal from a swarm of angry bees has not yet been discovered. Man has many virtues but this self-sacrifice is not one of them.

When Mr. Beckleton reached home, after the bees grew weary of his society, he looked like a bloated bondholder, and that evening, as he lay on the floor of his front gallery, a man who saw him said: "Blamed if I don't believe old Thingembobem will swell up and bust." Oh, no; bees will not sting you unless you molest them.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Made it on Oil.

"And you made that suit of clothes out of it?"

"That's exactly what I did," replied the thin man, proudly. "My wife's done a little sewing now and then, and had fifty dollars saved up. I went to her and explained how the market was. Told her there was sure to be a boom, and that now was the chance of a life time. You know I have been going pretty ragged lately."

The cold tea man nodded his knowledge of the fact.

"Well, I demonstrated to her where there was a fortune in sight if I only had that fifty dollars. She said I'd lose it, but I promised her I wouldn't; that I'd only operate on the safe side, and on a dead-sure thing. So she let me have the money and I went down to the Exchange. Oil was then selling at $1.10. I knew it would go to $1.20, because I had the pointers, you see. So I just stepped out and bought this suit of clothes."

"Well?" said the cold-tea man, expectingly.

"Well what?"

"Why, where does your oil speculation come in?"

"Ain't I got this suit of clothes? Didn't I make 'em on oil? Wasn't I on the safe side of the market? Ain't I ahead of it? What's the matter with you?" and the thin man walked off with dignity.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

—Ella Wheeler's marriage had its romance behind it. When the Army of the Cumberland held its reunion in Milwaukee, Mr. Robert M. Wilcox, a young manufacturer from Connecticut, was present. He had read Miss Wheeler's poetry and wished to see her. It happened that she contributed a poem to the occasion and was pointed out to Mr. Wilcox. On his return home he wrote to her, and, though she had never met him, she liked his letter and replied. A pleasant correspondence followed, and soon a meeting was brought about. It proved a case of mutual love at first sight.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Cats, Bicycles and Hay Fever.

With the opening of the season of outdoor sports comes the time of trouble for the poor victims of Hay Fever. For them flowers have no odor, and the summer little of no beauty. To snuff, sneeze and wipe their weeping eyes for three or four successive months:—this is their pitiable portion. There is no help in sea-voyages, there is no help in high mountain air. These only lighten the pocket and leave the disease unabated. But there is a positive cure in Ely's Cream Balm. Try it. If you continue to suffer it is because you neglect a remedy as sure as it is cheap and pleasant.

ELECTRIC LIGHT SOAP

FOUR POINTS

Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD.
Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS.
WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC.
WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing; use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes in to soak, rubbing plenty of soap on the more soiled parts. Let them lie [illegible] stir them occasionally so that they may get the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them lightly out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil 10 to 20 minutes, rinse well, blue and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boilings by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Fannels and prints should not be boiled, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the wash-board, and being the best disinfectent known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury; the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press water out with the hand; boil 3 to 5 minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press carefully between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron between pieces of old flannel. Soak curtains 10 to 30 minutes and boil 5 to 20 minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, or pin every scallop to carpet over a sheet to dry; no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

Sold by leading wholesale and retail grocers everywhere. Dealers may obtain our goods upon application. ELECTRIC SOAP MANUFACTURING CO., Indianapolis, Ind., and 26-28 South Water St., Chicago, Ill.

Concerning Light-Houses.

The loss of two steamships within a short time, (the Columbus and the Daniel Steinmann), by neglecting the friendly warning afforded by the light-house, calls our attention to the importance of these structures. This was fully recognized in ancient times, and the pharos of Alexandria dated three centuries before the Christian era. It was built of stone, five hundred and fifty feet high, and the light could be seen for forty miles. It stood for a thousand years, being eventually destroyed by an earthquake. The earliest of modern light-houses is the tower of Cordovan, one hundred and fifty feet high, which was on the coast of France for nearly three centuries. The Eddystone light-house is well-known in the records of navigation, and being the only one of the four that has withstood the wrath of the elements, it has given its builder fame.

The colonists soon learned the necessity of these structures, and a number were in existence before the revolution. They were of small height, and the illumination was of a defective character. Forty years ago our Government sent a commission to examine the light-house system in Europe, and this gave a marked impulse to the system. At present there are nearly seven hundred light-houses on the American coasts and rivers, and also twenty-five floating-light stations, the total annual expense being $1,889,017. In addition to the above there are nearly six thousand buoys and beacons, which mark danger of less threatening character. The United States is the only Government which imposes no burden on commerce for this costly protection. Foreign vessels reap the benefit, but when our ships enter a French or British port containing a light-house they are taxed for its support. The advantages enjoyed by foreign ships is shown by the fact that fifty Clydebuilt steamers are in the transatlantic trade, and all enjoy the benefit of our light-houses, toward which they contribute nothing, while at the same time their rivalry has crushed our own shipping. The Americanlight-house system is controlled by the Treasury Department, and the coasts are divided into twelve districts, each of which has an inspector. The latter is furnished with vessels which they use in their quarterly inspections, and each is required to report the condition of his district to the "Light-house Board." The latter is formed of navy officers who hold their meetings quarterly in Washington.

Whatever may be the difference in light-house management among various nations, there is now but one method of illumination, and this has given distinction to its author. Fresnel, to whom reference is made, was born in France nearly a century ago, and was bred a civil engineer, but early displayed a taste for general science. In his twenty-sixth year he wrote a very able article on astronomy, and his next subject was the polarization of light, which was followed by another and still more important production. His incessant progress in science gave him distinction throughout Europe, but his greatest discovery was in reference to the illumination. In his thirty-first year he was appointed to the light-house service, in which he soon wrought a complete revolution. Previously the illumination had been produced by reflectors, which was an expensive as well as an inconvenient method. Fresnel perfected the lens method which had been attempted in vain by other scientists, and his success led to its general adoption. He was the most brilliant French inventor of his day, but in the midst of his career he was removed by death, having hardly reached his fortieth year. The Fresnel method has been adapted to headlights for steamers and pierheads as well as for ferries, and is now in general use. It is possible, however, that the electric light may be substituted for light-house purposes. Life in a light-house is, of course, very monotonous, and yet the keepers become so much attached to it that few ever resign. There is no society for the families, no church, no school, no entertainments, but on the other hand there is the companionship with nature and the fascination of the ocean, which never loses its power.—N. Y. Cor. Troy (N. Y.) Times.

Western Forest Fires.

"That sniff of burning pines that we got here last night is the first thing that reminded me of home since I left Leadville," said Captain William Kavanagh, an old frontiersman, scout, trapper and miner, in the rotunda of the Lafayette Hotel yesterday. "Of course this fire we had up in the State wasn't a marker in extent to the fires we have up in the Rockies and Sierras, but it's more serious in its consequences. I see by the papers that there was some loss of life and considerable loss of property, while out West the only damage done is the destruction of a few tons of game."

"Do the Indians ever get caught?" was asked.

"Yes, now and then. I remember in '69, when twenty-six Utes were caught in a fiery trap in the Red River country and only one escaped to tell the story, and he died forty-eight hours afterwards from the burns he had received. About two years later twelve red devils were burned to death in the Black Mountains, near Santa Fe, N. M. They belonged to the New Mexico tribe of Apaches and met their fate while being pursued by a party of "Regulators." It was said that the pines were fired by Vigilants, but out West we don't investigate those points very closely, when a redskin is concerned.

"The forest fires in Colorado," continued the Captain, "and throughout the mountain ranges occur twice a year—in the fall and spring. They originate from various causes—sometimes from a prospector's or a hunter's campfire, but more frequently they are fired by the redskins, who use the forest for a dual purpose. When at war with the whites the forests are fired to cut off the approach of the soldiers, and in peace the forests and prairie grass are often set on fire for the purpose of running out the game.

"In 1868 a half-breed Indian scout invited me to join a party of Ute hunters in a hunt down the White River. I accepted the invitation. Our party consisted of fourteen bucks, two half-breeds and myself. I supposed, of course, that we would simply beat the woods for game. Instead of that they formed a circle two miles in circumference and fired the forests in sixteen different places and then fought the flames along the edge of the circle. After working all night chopping down trees and hauling them out of the reach of the flames we went into camp at the opposite side of the White River and waited there, hungry as wolves, for the fire to die out. The third day we wrapped ourselves in wet blankets and started through the forest of blackened and smoking trunks in search of our game. Within a hundred yards we began to pick up the small game. Every man of us was nearly starved to death, and I am free to say that the best relished meal I ever ate was when I scraped a cool spot under the hot pine needles and devoured a roasted woodchuck without salt or pepper or any other of the usual accessories. I suppose we piled up a ton or more of small game, such as rabbits, squirrels and woodchucks, but we tramped for an hour before we found any big game. Then we found it in a heap. Twenty head of deer, a dozen or more of elk, two bears and a stray antelope lay dead along the bed of a little mountain stream that ran through the burned forest. A short distance beyond was the carcass of a female mountain lion, which had died in a vain effort to save its litter of three cubs.

"I have seen scores of big forest fires compared with which these blazes up in the State would look like bonfires; but the most exciting one occurred in October, 1879, when the Leadville boom was at its height. The Ute war, which began during the summer with the massacre of Father Meeker and the employes of the White River Agency, and was followed later by the killing of Major Thornberg and his troops, caused an intense excitement throughout the State. The farmers deserted their ranches and flocked into Denver and Leadville. Even the miners, who are always the last to retreat, left their claims along the range and came to Leadville. This stampede was caused almost wholly by the forest fires which were raging on the opposite side of the Sierra Madre, and which were supposed to have been started by the Utes.

"One night the forests in the direction of Alma were fired and a high wind impelled the flames with almost lightning rapidity towards Leadville. Even the old-timers felt nervous and the town was in an uproar. I walked into the Windsor Hotel and there sat about twenty-five men, armed to the teeth with repeating rifles and revolvers. Miners kept flocking in from the gulches, driven in by flames, which come rolling up the Arkansas Valley and down Big Evans Gulch. By midnight Leadville was shut in by a roaring mass of flame. The mountains which surrounded the basin in which Leadville nestles were mountains of fire. We were literally at the bottom of a burning pit. The heat was so intense that it scorched men's faces a half-mile away from the flames. The Indian fighters were compelled to drop their arms and devote their attention towards saving the town from fire instead of from the redskins. Many cabins on the outskirts of the town were burned, but the greater portion of the camp was saved. For six weeks afterwards both Leadville and Denver were enveloped in a cloud of smoke denser than any that ever hung over Pittsburg. During all this time the sun looked like a ball of molten iron and the moon like a red lamp in an apothecary's window. Millions of feet of lumber were destroyed during the fire, as there are every year along the great Western ranges."—Philadelphia Times.

Hawaiian Notes.

The year has been a very dull one so far, through the decline in sugars and the fear that the natives and planters have regarding the effect of the treaty recently concluded between the United States and Mexico. While they have no fear of the renewal and continuation of the reciprocity treaty now in force between the islands and the American Government, still they dread competition with Mexican sugars in the future and prophesy all sorts of commercial cyclones. The truth is that these islands will not and should not yield more than 60,000 tons of sugar annually, the highest exportation so far having been 57,000 tons in 1882. There are 40,000 acres under sugar cultivation in the Hawaiin Islands to-day; it is possible to cultivate 60,000 acres, but no more. In fact, everything has been put into sugar, at all times a dangerous commodity in the market, to the neglect of coffee, which thrives splendidly, and has only a nominal acreage in Kauai, the westernmost island, except in Niihua. Rice will flourish all over the islands, and the Chinese are most useful and adaptable in reclaiming waste lands for this purpose and also for the planting of bananas, mango, and guava trees. Years ago these islands raised splendid cereals, and the flour of the Sandwich Islands was noted for its excellence. So were the potatoes, which now come from Australia and the United States. In fact, the planters have abandoned everything for sugar and are now learning their mistake. Cotton, grapes, vegetables of all kinds grow here bountifully, and there is practically no limit to the field open to prudent and energetic capitalists.

Every business house is closed here on Sundays—saloons, barber shops and stores of all kinds. No wine is sold in restaurants, and those who require it take it in their homes, not at the public bar. There are no hoodlums or foul-speaking juvenile criminals. The husband who deserts his wife or the wife who leaves her husband is punished by imprisonment on the "reef," separated from the main island by water. Prisoners and convicts work on the streets. Everybody goes to church here on Sunday, a habit which at once impresses an American favorably. Each one attends his own place of worship, and those who do not go are few and far between.—Honolulu Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

—Mr. J. H. G. McDaniel, of Pickens, S. C., has a piece of crystallized quartz found in that county which has almost a perfect resemblance to an ear of corn. Pieces of the quartz are in the shape of grains of corn and are stuck together like grains growing on a cob, except that they are not arranged in rows. Many who have seen it declare that it is a petrified ear of corn.—Chicago Times.

GIRLS SHOULD LEARN DOMESTIC DUTIES.

A mother has no right to bring up a daughter without teaching her how to keep house, and if she has an intelligent regard for her daughter's happiness will not do it.

By knowing how to keep house we do not mean merely knowing how books should be arranged on a center table, and how to tell servants what is wanted to be done. We mean how to get a breakfast, a dinner, a supper; how to make a bed; how to sweep a room; how to do the thousand and one different things which are requisite to keep a house in order and to make it pleasant.

A person who does not know how to do a thing well does not know how to have it done well. No number of servants make up for the want of knowledge in a mistress.

A family employed a girl to do general housework. She came just at night, and the first thing assigned to to her to do was to wash the supper dishes. She washed them in cold waters and without soap.

A gentleman sent home a roasting-piece of beef and a quantity of cut porter-house steaks. When he sat down to dinner he learned that the new cook had roasted the steaks. Yet many a boarding-school miss at the time of her marriage might make either of these mistakes.

Not one woman in a thousand knows how to make bread as good as it can be made. And sour tempers, scoldings, dyspepsia, with its indescribable horrors, and even death itself, not unfrequently result from bad cooking.

Mothers, whatever else you may teach your daughters, do not neglect to instruct them in all the mysteries of housekeeping. So shall you put them in the way of good husbands and happy homes.—The Household.

Save the family and you can save the state; otherwise not. Save the family and you can save the church otherwise not. Therefore I do not do not hesitate to say, great is the state, great and sacred is the church, greater, and more sacred is that divine institution which we call the family.—Joseph Cook.

We have some apostles of a new gospel, pardon the use of the sacred word in such a connection, who tell us that the home is an evil, that marriage is an evil, and that the world will never get on well until both marriage and the home are banished from society, and men and women behave toward one another like beasts. They would abrogate all marriage laws and turn mankind out, not as families but as individuals to form alliances and beget children whenever and where ever they may choose. They would do this, they say, because the home is so often a place of misery, because the family is so frequently a collection of individuals, not bound together by love but by law. We grant that there are many unhappy homes; it is a sad thought; but for this shall we destroy the home? Is it likely that the annihilation of the home would increase the reign of purity and love among men? As well might we expect that the annihilation of courts of justice would strengthen the reign of law and order.—Marriage Guide.

Probably for many households the hours before church are hurried, tumulous and undevout. The family rise late, and breakfast is tardy. The children are harrassed about shoes, gloves, and lost or mislaid articles of dress. The parents have not fully recovered from the fatigue of business or pleasure of Saturday night. The first bell peals out its summons before anybody feels ready to hear it, and the progress to the place of prayer is a scramble to arrive before the opening anthem shall have been concluded. Dr. Arnot of Scotland, used to beg his people to spend the hour before coming to church in reading, meditation and prayer. If it were the habit of our congregations thus prepared in heart to go to the sanctuary, how different might be the impressions made on them by the sermons and public prayers. Had every disciple made the pastor, the week long, the subject of reverent, anxious, earnest prayer, would not the pastor enter his pulpit clothed with power from on high, and would not the benedicion return with ten fold largeness on the worshipers themselves?—Christian Intelligence.

It is not all loss that many women do not marry. The world needs them in many places that will be more and more open to them as intelligence and common sense prevail. There is often great heroism in their singleness. It is seldom because they have voluntarily chosen it, but because they have chosen not to marry where they could not give their hearts. Often they have resisted goodly offers, good men with good prospects, simply because their hearts would not consent to the bonds. Sometimes conscience has forbidden. They could not join in so sacred a life with a man of lower moral life than they lived themselves, and so have heroically chosen to forego the coveted pleasures of domestic life for the sake of a conscience sacred to truth and purity. All honor to such heroism! The world and the homes of the world would be better if there were more of it.—Heart of the World.

Offers of seven hundred and fifty dollars have been made for this antique, which is valuable in the history of piano making.

—One of the only two remaining Roman milestones in Great Britain is in Cannon street, London, the other being in Chesterholm, in Northumberland. There is Roman work about the Tower of London. Until quite recently an old Roman turret was standing within a hundred yards of Ludgate Hill station, and in Cripplegate may yet be seen a splendid specimen of the original Roman wall.

—A report having been generally circulated that a cinnamon bear belonging to Mr. Oram, living in the woods near Fort Montgomery, West Point, N. Y., had been set free, it led to a tragedy recently. A miner who was intoxicated took refuge in Joe Connolly's barn, near by, and one of Connolly's boys, hearing the movement of the man, ran to the house, and, obtaining a shot-gun, fired into the hay where he was lying, and seriously wounded him.—N. Y. Mail.

—From a French State paper, lately brought to light, it appears that in 1770 the following Parliamentary decree was solemnly passed and duly registered under King Louis XV.: "Whosoever by means of red or white paint, perfumes, essences, artificial teeth, false hair, cotton wool, iron corsets, hoops, shoes with high heels, or false hips shall seek to entice into the bands of marriage any male subject of his Majesty, shall be prosecuted for witchcraft and declared incapable of matrimony."

—Jonathan Whedock deposited in the New Hampshire Savings Bank, in Concord, March 23, 1833, one hundred dollars bounty money which he had received as a Revolutionary soldier. Two other deposits of fifteen dollars each were added to it April 15, 1834, and April 9, 1835. The money still remains in the bank, and amounted on the first day of January last, with acrued interest, to two thousand and fifty-five dollars and forty-four cents.—Boston Transcript.

—Hugh Fagan, a Utica boy, fourteen years old, went to Albany, N. Y., recently to have a huge tumor removed from his neck. The operation, which necessitated an incision seven inches in length, was successfully performed by two doctors. The excised mass weighed nearly two pounds. Fagan showed wonderful grit both before and after the operation, and refused all stimulants. He walked to the hospital, where he will remain until the wound is healed. The operation was witnessed by a number of physicians and students.—Utica Herald.

—A very pretty custom, which has since been followed, was introduced at a fashionable wedding recently at the Savoy Chapel Royal, London. The choir formed a procession down the aisle to meet the bride and then walked back before her to their places in the church chanting a bridal hymn. A moral support is thus given to a faltering girl who has usually to walk up the aisle the observed of all observers, and overhearing, perhaps, remarks on the redness of her nose, or some defect in her dress, not very reassuring. After the ceremony the choir again formed in procession and walked before the bride and groom down the aisle to the entrance gate.

The second largest source of revenue to the U. S. Government from any one branch of business, is derived from the production and manufacture of tobacco. Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co., of Durham, N. C., claims to be the largest manufacturer of Smoking Tobacco in the world. The reputation of Blackwell's Genuine Bull Durham Smoking Tobacco is too firmly established to need any commendation at our hands. In another column our readers will notice their new announcement which is of interest to all lovers of the weed. The company are perfectly responsible, and when they announce that they will give away $11,950 in cash, it is an assured fact that they mean just what they say. Smokers will find an opportunity of combining business with pleasure by reading their announcement.

Cover Your Heads!

One week ago we opened our new Hat and Cap Department, and although we felt sure of the support of the public in our new venture we were not prepared to see our sales for the week fully double our expectations. Everyone should see our celebrated $1 Hat, which is sold by other dealers at $1.50. This Hat we make our specialty. We purchase such large quantities to supply our different stores that we can well afford to sell them at $1, and still have a fair profit. Our $1.50 Stiff Hats in all the latest shapes, other dealers' price $2. Our $2 and $2.50 Hats, from the best makers, and our $3, $3.50, $4 and upwards, are all fine imported English Stiff and Soft Hats. Every line we sell at 50 cents less than elsewhere in the city.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

Donaldsons circus drew an immense crowd here Wednesday afternoon and evening, and the day will be long remembered.

It was the bright final, to Professor Pierce's years of labor which have never been clouded by antagonism between himself and students; and it finished Charley Kieber's brief earth life that flitted with laughter singing on his lips. Shifted homes would perhaps express the change better, for who can realize death, that comes like a glint of sunshine. He had lived but eight years; not long enough to develop into a shining example of good or evil, but he would not risk his card of honor in exchange for the circus. He had permission to go, but returned to school instead; saying he would wait until evening to see what to any child is Wonderland. But the mill pond lay between, and leaving his prize on shore he sprang in, daring his two playmates to go deeper. It was treacherous ground and a slip sent him headlong. But a few moments after he ran across the play ground Professor Pierce took him from the water, hundreds of people left the tent and one, his Trapeze to crowd about doctor Jones and help him coax back a heart throb though it was plainly a useless effort. The little boy, that not one of fifty, leaning against line and gate had ever heard of, grasped hearts astray, as he climbed over golden bars. More tears were rained above two little hands filled with flowers, than for all who have said good bye to friends here for many years. It was pitiable to see age that affiliates with childhood, left desolate, and sympathy for the grand parents who had claimed him from infancy would not be repressed. Between their youngest son who had chosen a soldiers fate, and this little one stretched thousands of miles and dreary waiting. The bright little student gave promise of becoming their anchor, when all the rest of a numerous household should have drifted away. But He knows best, who portions tears and aching hearts, and lengthened years. The couplet embodies sentiments of Rev. H. Hughs and few presume to differ, yet it is difficult to see its merciful application to some cases. There are tears and aches not Heaven ordained, I fancy heart aches of aged parents produced by their children's neglect, is one kind, and does not always spring from depravity so highly extoled, as man's heritage. The disposition to neglect them can be acquired so near perfect in training schools of vice that you cannot sort it out from genuine. The school committee is selected from those who are willing to regulate morals by the size of transgressors. Its a fact we dont need to quote scripture to verify what the committee says; they did not organize the school for training right motives into weakness, and strengthen wrong ones; they only supervise and regulate it. That is keeping up the organization to the best of their ability. And how is it regulated?

It is not uncommon to see a man with a child a year or two old tucked under his arm, reeling along the street in fashion that endangers the little one's life every moment, and the spanks it gets are a part of the school discipline. It don't seem as if heaven apportioned tears to that baby as much as the committee that legalized its cry. If you could see the abuse heaped upon its mother in five minutes, you would wonder if anything on earth could induce a woman to leave her husband, or if there would be time enough to ache in, if her years outnumbered Methusalah's.—Such lives as hers are lengthed by the much quoted Timothy plan. It crowds a deal of variety into a short time and probably originated the style of reckoning, one day as a thousand years, or vice versa, I forget which.—The foolish game of the woman shaping her whole life by one mistake is played in every town in the universe and excites little wonder, less sympathy and no respect. If St. Paul had not left behind him definite rules to regulate conduct in such emergencies, the non-divorce amendment ministers are talking to divine decree would seem a trifle compulsory.

RAISIN VALLEY SEMINARY.

The Twelfth Annual Commencement—A Fine Program Presented.

The commencement exercises at the Raisin Valley Seminary are looked forward to by a large circle of friends as an occasion to be enjoyed. This institution of learning is continually growing in reputation and influence. Their graduating exercises always draw a large gathering of interested listeners. The program presented on Friday last was a very fine one in every respect. The weather was all that could be desired. The main audience room, in which the exercises were held, was tastefully decorated with evergreen festoons and appropriate evergreen mottoes adorned the walls. The room was filled to overflowing, demonstrating the fact that the Seminary is in need of a larger hall for public entertainments. Promptly at ten o'clock the assemblage was called to order by Prof. White, and the program was presented as follows:

Music.
Devotional exercises.
Hidden Beauties—Charles M. Comfort, Tecumseh.
The Philosopher's Stone — Lewis Murback, Berkey, O.
Forests—George T. Stanley, Damascus, O.
Music.
Silent Forces—Hannah Harkness, Adrian.
Caste—William B. Green, Adrian.
Presenting Diplomas.
Address—Erastus Test, M. D.
Music.

The music was given by a quartette of singers from the Seminary, with organ accompaniment. The essays were all finely rendered and showed the result of careful training. The address by Prof. Test was a splendid effort, and will long be remembered by those who heard it. We regret that his modesty prevents us from giving it to our readers in full.

The total membership of pupils during the past year has been 81, of which there was one in the fourth year, five in the third year, twelve in the second year, forty-one in the first year and twenty-two in the preparatory course.

The following constitutes the present corps of officers and instructors:

William W. White, B. S., Principal, German and Natural Sciences.
Maggie E. Newsom, A. B., Assistant Principal, Latin, Algebra and History.
J. H. Douglas, Jr., B. S., Astronomy, Arithmetic and University Algebra.
Thomas B. Eddy, Superintendent.
Elizabeth H. Eddy, Matron.

MACON MOLECULES.

Isaac Pennington is building a large barn.

Mark Mills was home from Detroit Sunday.

The band boys gave an ice cream festival last Saturday evening in Pennington's grove. All enjoyed the ice cream and the music too.

Rolph Mills has exchanged his gig for a fine Moyer carriage. Now look out, ye fair ones.

Miss Maude Howell closed her school last Friday.

Miss Helm closed her school in the Mills' district last Friday. Miss Helm will teach a fall term in this district.

Miss Carrie Knight, of Bridgewater, is visiting relatives in Macon this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Osgood are visiting at St. John.

Bradley Scudder has been sick for a number of days. We are glad to report him convalescent.

Next Sunday will be Children's Day at the M. E. church. Rev. Mr. Kerridge will deliver a lecture Sunday evening.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

Spring crops never looked more promising than now. Wheat is coming on well with indications of an early harvest.

Mrs. Randall, of Milan, aged 71 years died on the 15th. She had been an invalid for a long time and confined to her bed for 15 years. The funeral was observed on the Tuesday following.

Frank Clarkson and Miss Nellie Clark were married at the home of the bride June 12th. Miss Clark will not change her name very much. The newly married couple took a trip around the Lakes which must be delightful during this warm weather. They have the good wishes of many friends, and we say thanks in acknowledgement of cake received.

The church social are arranging for an ice cream festival this week Friday evening, the 27 inst., to be given on the lawn at the home of Mrs. Robert Houseman. The ladies will please furnish cake. A good time is anticipated and a large attendance is expected.

The meeting of the Union club last week Friday evening at the Christian church proved very successful as the attendance was large and the general interest good. The address given by Rev. J. L. Hudson, of Morenci was one of the best. The club held a special meeting on Saturday evening for the purpose of organizing which resulted in the election of the following officers; President, G. P. Waring; Vice President, Rev. B. F. Rapp; Secretary, Geo. Gripton; Assistant Secretary Martin Palmer; Treasurer, L. E. Hause. An executive committee, one from each school district was also provided for with Dr. D. W. Lorce as chairman. The committee in full and its duties will be given hereafter, when entirely filled. The next club meeting will be July 2nd, the place and speakers will be hereafter announced.

Hot, Hotter, Hottest.

The frequent showers and hot weather makes corn, potatos and oats look fine.

Haying has commenced and if we have a few days clear weather there will be as fine a lot of hay put in as one could wish.

Mrs. Cox is repairing her house recently purchased of Mrs. Jane Thompson.

Mrs. Cheever has commenced the wall to her new house on lot recently purchased of G. W. Jackson.

A. J. Sutton, agent at Ridgeway will sell tickets to all points on the M. & O. R. R. July 2, 3 and 4 good until July 5, for one fare for round trip. Come one, come all and have a ride.

The Smith Brothers have moved part of their market over to Macon, and "Ase" will tend the market here, while "Lank" carves the round for Maconites.

Mr. Robert Houseman met with a painful accident Monday. While tearing down a fence he stepped on a nail and is suffering from the effects.

Mr. & Mrs. G. W. Jackson, Misses Luella Wilson and Ada Loree and Martin Palmer attended the commencement exercises at the Normal this week. Miss Ella Jackson returns home with them.

Miss Kittie Clark is very sick again.

Misses Rhoda and Ida Arner are going to Farmington this week to visit Mrs. Libbie Hatton.

The editor of the Milan Leader, A. B. Smith, and wife, spent the Sabbath with their aunt, Mrs. Jno. Arner.

Mr. F. D. Crossman is canvassing the town for Cram's Atlas with good success.

W. E. Barrett started for Owego, Kan. last Monday. He is going to visit friends, and may be work up the dressmaking trade there. How is it Miss ——?

Owing to the bad weather there was not many out to the social last Friday evening. They will give an ice cream entertainment at Mrs. Robert Houseman's Friday eve., June 27.

The village school closed last Saturday. Miss Wilson has the best wishes of all her pupils and friends here. She leaves for her home at Morenci in a few days.

Children's day was observed last Sunday. The exercises passed off pleasantly and the church was handsomely decorated.

Mrs. Frank Clarkson and wife returned from their trip last Saturday. They had a very pleasant trip up the lakes, taking in Mackinaw, Petoskey, etc.

The Union club gave an ice cream entertainment at the home of Lyman Hause last Wednesday evening and was well attended, although the evening was very unfavorable, keeping away many who had prepared to attend. The proceeds amounted to nearly $20, all of which has been expended in temperance literature to be distributed gratuitously. The club will hold their next meeting at the Free Methodist church Tuesday evening, July 1st. Rev. O. Barfell, Rev. B. F. Rapp, Dr. D. W. Loree, C. L. Lowe and others will address the meeting. Music from new temperance song books will be a pleasing feature of the meeting.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Miss Flora Parker, of Ypsilanti, is visiting friends in town.

Clinton supports three ice cream saloons.

Ed. Clark of Jackson is spending a few days with his parents.

Ella Wellwood, May Morey and Ella Swift, compose the graduating class from the Clinton High School this year.

A delegation of Milan Masons visited this lodge last Saturday night.

The haying season with the farmers has already began.

Where are the young gentlemen that play ball in this town?

Manchester will attempt to elevate a baloon the Fourth, with gas, we suppose; and there are people in this town mean enough to wonder if some of Manchester's citizens intend to furnish the gas.

The Clinton Band now comes out sixteen strong.

Farmers complain that rust will damage the wheat crop considerably this year in this section.

Saline supports two brass bands. This may correctly account for the brass of some of her citizens.

Mell Bull, brother of Mrs. E. VanDeMark was in town the first of the week.

Solomon Brown has been raising the floors and otherwise improving the inside of the Chandler building.

The graduating and commencement exercises of most of the High Schools and Colleges in the State of Michigan will take place this week. Fond mamma's and fair maidens will listen in rapture to the average graduating oration that will contain the usual number of latin phrases; and the graduate himself, in the midst of June flowers and sunshine, with a "sheepskin" under his arm will think that the world will now wag a little more than formerly as he is about to enter it. Such is life.

James Cobb and wife of Norvell, came down Tuesday, called on their many friends here and attended the Masonic festival in the evening.

The Congregational, Methodist and Baptist churches will hold union services next Sunday evening at the Baptist Church.

Cos. Davis caught a ten pound pickerel with an angle-worm for bait, one day the first of the week.

Dr. J. W. Burchard tried to improve his complexion on and around Sand-Lake last Friday.

The graduating exercises of the Clinton High School will take place next Friday evening at the Town Hall. The music will be furnished by a quartette selected for the occasion—Miss Laura Clark, Mrs. E. VanDeMark and Messrs. Kerridge and Smith.

The Macon band take great interest in their band and are doing nicely with their music. They will make their debut before the public in Clinton the 4th.

George Freese of Detroit, spent Sunday in this village.

Strawberries in this section have been a very large yield and the size and quality considerably above an average.

We hear that Miss Laura Clark intends to spend part of the summer in St. Louis, Missouri.

Considerable wool has been marketed here this season; 150,000 pounds last week.

Charlie Spafford uses genuine cream for the ice cream that he "turns up." It is as good as the best; we have sampled it.

The Methodist people will hold a festival next Wednesday evening at the basement of their church. Everybody is cordially invited.

Charley Keyes sustained quite a severe accident last Saturday evening while walking by the north side of the hotel he accidently fell into a cellar-way, the door of which had been left open. Mr. Keyes' leg and side were severely bruised in the fall but fortunately no bones were broken.

D. Woodward, besides the farming implements that he manufactures, keeps on hand a general stock of other makers. He sells hay tedders for $42 each.

Charley Davis who lives on the Chicago road west of town has been recently building a fine new barn.

Mrs. David Brooks, while attending the Masonic festival Tuesday evening caught her foot in the matting on the stairs that lead to the masonic hall and fell to the bottom. Her face and side were severely bruised by the fall. The matting on the stairs did not seem to be properly fastened.

Wm. Amspoker has sold the meat market here to Wm. Muir, who took possession last Monday. Mr. Amspoker has purchased an interest in a market at Manchester.

The band came out last Tuesday with new uniforms which they have here on trial. The color is red trimmed with gold, and are handsome. The price seems to us very reasonable, and if the boys want a good suit, we cannot see how they can do any better than to purchase them.

As this is the closing week of the high school, we are reminded that there is no Alumni association of the graduates of our schools. There are enough graduates at present to make such an association both interesting and instructive. Let some of the graduates consider the matter.

Mrs. Grace Smith possesses a Night Blooming Cerius plant that had a magnificent blossom on it last Tuesday night. The plant is three years old and it is a rarity that one of these plants bloom, and then only in the night, as the flower withers with the morning sunlight. Mrs. Smith kept "open house" and all lovers of fine flowers were permitted to view this fair member of the Cactus Family in its fairest state.

The Decoration of the Masonic Graves in our cemetery last Tuesday was a decided success. The procession was large and was led by the band, playing a dirge. The banquet in the evening was attended by over two hundred guests.

A young lad working for Munson King, north of town, was unloading hay, he fell and the wagon passed over him. Both bones in his right leg broke and a severe scalp wound.

chiefest,
'Spacially Jim!

I told I hadn't no 'pinion o' men,
An' wouldn't take stock in them,
But they kep' up a-comin' in spite o' my talk
'Spacially Jim!

I got so tired o' havin' 'em roun',
'Spacially Jim!
I made up my mind I'd settle down
An' take up with him.

So we was married one Sunday in church,
'Twas crowded full to the brim;
'Twas the only way to get rid of 'em all,
'Spacially Jim.

—The Century.

A SHATTERED INTELLECT.

"Help! help! help!"

I started to my feet in a tremor of fright as this cry rang through my room, and gazed at the partition wall which divided my apartment from the room next to it in helpless terror. Then I bethought me of the hall, and rushing out there I knocked on the door next to mine.

Silence, followed by a low demoniacal laugh!

"What is the matter?" I called. "Open the door, if you need help."

A voice evidently that of an aged woman, called out:

"Go away!"

Then I could hear her laugh and mutter to herself, and I went back to my room. On the way I met the boy who was janitor of the building.

"Who has No. 27?"

"Some crazy womans," he answered in disrespectful haste, and was gone before I could ask another question.

A mad woman in the next room! Surely fate was unkind to me. I had come here to improve my own mind, and found myself tete-a-tete with idiocy. I could move out, but I had only just moved in, and ducats were as scarce as hens teeth. I was preparing myself for dramatic readings, and spent the most part of my time in the drill work of the profession, with intervals devoted to the rendering of classical music, vocal and instrumental. I comforted myself with the belief that however hard my poor demented neighbor shrieked and raved in her insane delirium, I could drown her out with an opposition bedlam, and I decided to stay where I was and attend to my own affairs.

If I had only done so!

"Mind your own business" is a homely formula, but it is a little classic of sensible, pertinent advice, which we would do well to engrave on the ritual of our daily lives in letters of gold. So much for parenthesis.

I studied aloud. I raved and ranted to develop my voice. I paced my chamber in a long white gown and holding a tallow candle in my right hand, while I strode up and down, repeated in sepulchral tones:

"Out, damned spot, out, I say—one-two, why then 'tis time to—

"Save me! save me! help! help! for God's sake, help!"

I dropped my candle, jumped into bed, and drew the bed-clothes over my head. There I lay and shivered until morning.

Then I saw a pale, still woman with a resolute face, coming out of number 27.

"How is your patient?" I asked hurriedly, as she passed me on the landing.

The woman stared at me a moment as if she did not quite understand.

"The insane woman," I explained.

"Oh, yes, much better, but I cannot stop to talk," and she hastened away while I wondered whether she was a nurse to the mysterious woman shut up there, or a relative, possibly a daughter.

I decided on the latter when I overheard the fond language she used toward the poor demented creature. Never a harsh or reproachful word, but the tender endearments of an affection that was as self-sacrificing as only the strongest filial love can be. And so proud and careful of the unconscious sufferer that no eye was allowed to rest upon her in that wretched state.

I honored and respected such devotion, and soon in my own way I longed to assist the sad and silent woman, who shrank from the advances of strangers, in her labor of love. I began by leaving tiny bunches of flowers at the door. Then small offerings of fruit, and I had a selfish reward in the silence and peace that followed each occasion. I could hear the patient softly laughing or talking to herself, and I even imagined she had learned to expect the tributes of my sympathy. Who knew? It might even act as a new mind cure, this outside diversion from an unknown source.

Several times I had tried to talk with the daughter—as I had decided her to be—but her manner was so reserved, and so strange, that I began to think she, too, was non compos mentis; that they were, in fact, a mad family. But I had learned that she filled a responsible position during the day, and that her whole life was given up to the cheerless society of the wreck whom she protected with such devotion that I had never yet caught a glimpse of her. I felt that to help such a sorrow was a privilege, and I desired no thanks or acknowledgment.

And yet—I will confess it now—it was sometimes hard to bear. The ravings of insanity are never pleasant to listen to, but there was a peculiar weirdness in the muffled cries that rang through the deadening walls.

But there came a climax, as there does to most of the tragedies of life, and it did not come a moment too soon, for I had fallen into a nervous condition that, if I had been a fine lady, would have caused my friends and myself great apprehension. But I am not a fine lady, and the few friends I had lived far away and did not trouble themselves about me. And I had become absorbed, fascinated, haunted by the nameless terror on the the other side of my partition. I too, was beginning to laugh hysterically; to scream "help" and "murder" in my sleep; to mutter, and babble incoherent words. My face had grown white and wild looking. I fancied that every next door neighbor avoided me, as if afraid of me—ha! ha! the idea is too funny!

One evening, just at dusk, I went home from a rehearsal for a performance in which I was to appear, and, all absorbed in my part, toiled wearily up to my room in the fourth story and walked in without unlocking the door, so unconscious was I of my surroundings. But the room was lighted and a woman sat there sewing; the furniture was strange, nothing was mine. I had made a mistake and walked into No. 27. The woman who sat there alone rose as I stamped and stopped back.

"I beg your pardon," I said, as I recovered myself, "but it seems I have made a mistake. I was thinking so busily, I did not notice—"

"Won't you sit down? Take this—"

"I'll kill you! Help! help!" shrieked a discordant voice—the voice that haunted me.

I started in sudden fright; every nook and corner was visible to the eye; the bed was there, white and unoccupied; no one was present except we two.

"Who is it? What is it?" I gasped, turning pale and sick.

"My parrot!" said the woman, calmly, pointing to a gray African parrot sitting sleepily in a cage in the corner. "I dare say she often amuses you with her noise. She is a very tragic bird. I am very choice of her, but some day you may borrow her, if you like her for company."

"I would like to ring her neck," I said and went home.

The next time I met the janitor I asked him how he dared to tell me there was a crazy woman in that room.

"Ale vimmins bees crazy," he said, with a cynical smile. "I tells her you vas crazy mit your own selluf."

"Told her I was crazy?"

"Yees, and she was africet, too."

Then I was a mad woman. I had been fooled and outwitted by a lout of a boy, and that bird I most despised, a poll parrot.—Mrs. M. L. Rayne, in Detroit Free Press.

The New Rich of New York.

The third circle of New York society is based on money—money alone—and so freshly made as to contain a clinging odor of the manner of its making—not always fragrant. Its members are apt to be vulgar, if from no other cause from their pecuniary ostentation and love of display. They have not had wealth long enough to become accustomed to it; consequently they are restless in their desire to advertise a fact which affords them so much shallow importance. As a rule, they are but half-educated, and their manners are defective. They tend to noise, self-assertion, and boastfulness; they rehearse their lives, seldom romantic or enthuling; they strut and swaggar from conceit and consciousness of what they have accomplished. As money is their sole test of worth and significance, they are not squeamish as to the method of its obtainment, and they do not inquire, therefore, too closely into the antecedents and record of the members of their set. They form a kind of bufflo company whose pretensions and extravagance would be diverting, if not repellent. They have the showiest carriages in the park, the costliest clothes, the biggest diamonds, the highest voices, and the worst pronunciation. They are forever advertising themselves in every possible way by word of mouth and by paragraphs in the newspapers. Their dearest ambition is to be thought fashionable, and they are so diligent to this end that outsiders are often made to believe them all that they assume to be.

They are very fond of frequenting the watering places, notably Saratoga—they do not affect Newport, where Knickerbocker or Mayflower blood, backed by a big income, asserts itself—and of attracting attention by their gaudy turnouts and their miscellaneous prodigality. The members of other circles rigorously avoid these shoddyites, as they are commonly called, and the shoddyites have, therefore, little society save of their own sort. This always annoys them, and they spend more lavishly than ever when they make an advance that is repelled, being under the impression that cash is social as well as financial capital, and that its reckless disbursement is a passport to a better circle they are always trying to enter. It is their misfortune that they can conceive of nothing higher or holier than money, and the blunders they commit from this misunderstanding are manifold and momentous. If they were fashionable the prejudice against fashion would not be without reason, for they are odious to every one possessed of self-esteem and delicacy.—N. Y. Cor. Chicago Tribune.

A National Fault.

If we could only learn that there are but twenty-four hours in a day. But it is a national fault with us to try to crowd about thirty-six hours into every day. We want to make up ten columns of matter into a nine-column paper. When a hen refuses to sit before she is ready, thus teaching humanity a lesson of patience and the eternal fitness of things, we do not yield to the hen; we construct artificial hatchers and hatch out twelve dozen chicks in forty-eight hours. If plants and vegetables refuse to grow for us as rapidly as we think they should, we force them into hot-beds and make them keep step with the times. We fly past the wind and outstrip the birds with our railway trains; we make water run up a hill; we light our streets without oil, gas or candle; we take the sting out of lightning with platinum tips; when we can't fly we run, and if we have to walk we don't; we simply sit still and telephone. We go up stairs in an elevator, and we call a messenger boy or a policeman or a hack with an electric bell. We won't even make the physical exertion to shout "fire," we press a button or pull down a hook, and a machine gives the alarm for us. We are going to be physically lazy. If it be true, as the scientists say, that unused members and organs disappear, in so many generations the American people will be a nation of men without legs.—Hawkeye.

Scientific Conceptions and Social Potency.

The first Napoleon's hatred of and contempt for "ideologues" expressed in part the practical man's scorn for mere dreamers, but expressed far more the antagonism of brute force to that subtle ideal force with which it had to struggle in vain. For ideas have their own laws of growth, and as the tender shoot of some vegetable organism will upheave the heavy and rive split the hard rock, so will the development of some new conception often defy the constraints of material compression. The minute egg of the coral animal may grow into an oceanic islet, or, into a reef besides which ships may sail for days, or even into a densely peopled land, with its railways, canals and busy commerce. Similarly, an idea from the brain of some Descartes or Hobbes, some solitary sage of Konigsberg, or a Genevan skull, full of imagination, but empty of morals, may, in the course of a few centuries, transform the aspect of the civilized world. The present is a time when scientific conceptions have a quite exceptional social potency, and we venture to think that some of those who have attained currency merit more attention from non-scientific readers than they have received on account of the relations they bear to temporary politics. We believe that many of the errors of even the most extreme school of Nihilists are the outcome of one recondite and mistaken philosophic idea, apparently quite remote from the sphere of politics. This idea may be shortly expressed as the mechanical conception of the universe. But if we are right in believing that this conception is at the root of such political errors, they have also a common origin from a source much less remote. They may be considered, in the first place, as developments of the main political error of Jean Jacques Rousseau, whose dreams have had results which now threaten so much of Europe with revolution and anarchy. This main political error is the conception that the art of politics is a mere matter of counting heads, one man being absurdly represented to be "as good as another." Hence arises the profound error of regarding a nation as a mere loose aggregate of similar units, instead of as an organic whole composed of a system of mutually related parts (having very different values and very diverse functions) from the family upward. But this imaginary reduction of one national, organic whole into a mass of separate, similar atoms is really but one of many examples of that modern tendency to regard all action as merely mechanical which has increasingly invaded every branch of knowledge, to the profound detriment of morals and religion.—British Quarterly Review.

Who's a Hoosier?

A story is told by some of the old residents of the State to the effect that the word was first applied to Indianians about the time when Madison was the center of a large pork trade, and the farmers for a hundred miles around would drive their hogs there in great droves. The peculiar noise that they kept up in driving the swine—sounded something like hoo-ie! hoo-ie! hoo-ie!—led to their being called, by a corruption of the sound, "Hoosiers." The story, if true, would make the origin of the word comparatively recent, and it can not be accepted with credence for the reason that the palmy porkopoly days of Madison were long after the Hoosiers had become known.

The first that is known of the word appearing in print was in 1830, when John Finley, the Wayne County poet, wrote a New Year's poem for the Journal entitled "A Hoosier's Nest," in which a description of the pioneer cabin in Indiana is given. The poem, in the light of one of the traditional stories, gives something of an idea of the manner in which the word came into use. The first few lines read:

I'm told in riding somewhere west
A stranger found a "Hoosier's nest,"
In other words, a Buckeye cabin,
Just big enough to hold Queen Mab in.
Its situation—low but airy—
Was on the borders of a prairie;
And, fearing he might be benighted,
He hailed the house and then alighted.
The Hoosier met him at the door,
Their salutations soon were o'er.

It was the custom among the early pioneers in Indiana in traveling through the country to hail a cabin by calling out: "Who lives here?" and "Who's here?" About the time of the treaty of peace with the Indians, in 1818, and when the State was very sparsely settled, travel was attended by great dangers, and no man ever rode away from home without his rifle. As a common precaution of safety, when a traveler saw in the distance the smoke from a camp or cabin fire, he would call out, upon coming within hearing distance, "Who's here?" and from the response he would know if he was among friends. From a corruption of this form of salutation the people of Indiana were called Hoosiers. Doubtless settlers, in writing back to friends at their old homes, would say that they "were among the Hoosiers," and in a few years the appellation sprang into general use. General W. H. H. Terrell, whose researches in the early history of Indiana have been thorough, and who may be accepted as authority, says that this is the true origin of the word, and Governor Wright is credited with saying that it was a corruption of the form of salutation of the early settlers of the Western country. A critical interpretation of Finley's poem seems to give proof of this explanation.—Indianapolis Journal.

—Henry F. Waters, the London agent of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, has discovered among the records of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury the will of Sir George Downing. The Boston Post says: "It is an interesting fact that he, a Salem boy, a graduate of Harvard College in the famous first class of 1642, has given his name to Downing Street, known the world over as the official residence of the Prime Minister of England."

—Troy, N. Y., has a three-legged boy baby. The doctors want to cut one of the legs off, but we think it should be let alone. No doubt when the boy gets a little bigger he will delight to play around railroads and he will not have more than two legs left when he grows up.—Philadelphia Call.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In 1875, thirteen men comprised the entire working force used in the manufacture of the James Boss' Gold Watch Case. Now over five hundred are employed, and the number is constantly increasing. The reason of this increase is this: In the James Boss' Gold Watch Case all the metal in sight and subject to wear is solid gold, while the remainder, which only lends strength to the case, is of stronger metal than gold, giving gold where gold is needed, and strong, elastic metal where strength and elasticity are needed, a combination producing a watch case better than solid gold and at ONE-HALF the cost.

Over 200,000 of these cases have been sold, and every jeweler in the country can testify to their quality and merit.

LEXINGTON, MICH., Dec. 5, 1882.

E. W. Marsh, of the Democrat, bought a Jas. Boss' Gold Watch case 18 years ago, and carried it until a short time ago, when I purchased it, and sold it to a customer. The case shows no signs of wear, except that natural to any case, and I am satisfied can be safely guaranteed for at least ten years more. I have sold the James Boss Gold Watch Case for many years, and the parties who bought the first ones are carrying them to-day, as well satisfied as though they had bought a solid gold case costing twice the money. I regard them as the only cases of this kind a jeweler should sell who desires to give his customers the worth of their money or value his reputation.

DIPHTHERIA!

THE PROSTRATION which follows Diphtheria, and the persistency with which it clings to the patient, are well known to all who have had any experience with this terrible disease.

The following letter shows how the restoring and invigorating properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla overcome it, and how by vitalizing and enriching the blood it neutralizes and eradicates the poisoned matter from it, bringing to the convalescent the color, life and vigor of robust health.

LOWELL, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.—Gentlemen—My little girl had the diphtheria last April. The disease left her very weak, blood poor, with no appetite, and she could not seem to rally from its effects. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA was recommended by a neighbor. After she had been taking it a few days we noticed a change for the better—she began to eat with a relish. It seemed to take out the poison the disease had left in her blood, the change being very noticeable in her face. She took it two months and fully regained her health, much to our delight. We now recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA with a great deal of pleasure. Very truly yours,

General News Summary.

Interesting Home and Foreign News.

CONGRESS.

IN the Senate on the 18th, after the reading of the journal, which contained allusion to the Fitz-John Porter bill, the Chair stated that no further action on that bill was necessary, than to have the action of the House announced to the Senate. Consideration of the Utah bill was resumed. An amendment by Mr. Hoar to strike out the clause abolishing woman suffrage in the Territory was rejected, and the bill passed—yeas 31, nays 16. Adjourned. In the House a further conference was ordered on the Post-office bill, and Messrs. Townshend, Holman and Horr were appointed on the part of the House. The House proceeded to the consideration of the Pacific Railroad bill known as the Thurman amendment to the bill. A long debate followed, and without reaching a conclusion the House took a recess until the 19th.

THE Senate on the 19th passed a bill to prevent the importation of tea dust into the United States. Mr. Butler's resolution providing for an inquiry into the condition of the New York banks was called up, and after debate the matter went over, and the Mexican Pension bill was taken up, and pending debate the Senate went into executive session and soon adjourned. The House met in continuance of the session of the 18th and resumed consideration of the Pacific Railroad bill. An amendment offered by Mr. Thompson was agreed to, to make the aggregate yearly contribution of the Central Pacific Company fifty-five instead of thirty-five per cent. of the net earnings, and that of the Kansas Pacific forty-five per cent. The bill then passed without division. The bill to prohibit the importation and migration of foreigners and aliens under contract to perform labor, was then called up and passed without division. Pending debate on the contested election case of Campbell vs. Morey, the House adjourned.

THE Senate on the 20th agreed to the resolution heretofore offered by Mr. Voorhees, calling for information as to the Indian beef contracts. Mr. Groome presented the credentials of Ephraim R. Wilson, Senator-elect from Maryland, for a term of six years, beginning March 4, 1885. The Mexican Pension bill was taken up. Several amendments were offered and rejected, and without reaching a conclusion the Senate went into executive session and adjourned. The House passed a bill reducing from fifty and twenty-five cents to ten cents the clearance fees levied upon vessels engaged in domestic commerce. Mr. Hutchler, from the Committee on Civil Service, reported a bill to repeal the tenure of office act; placed on calendar. Consideration of the Campbell-Morey contested election case was resumed, and after debate the minority resolution, confirming the right of the contestee to the seat, was lost—yeas 63, nays 139. The majority resolution, seating Campbell, was agreed to, and that gentleman appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office. Mr. Tucker, from the Judiciary Committee submitted a report upon the case of Hallet-Kilbourn vs. Sergeant-at-Arms Thompson; the report recommends that an appropriation be made to pay the amount of the judgment in relief of the defendant; referred to Committee on Appropriations. Adjourned.

DOMESTIC.

THE east-bound passenger train on the Burlington & Missouri River Road went through a bridge near Hubbell, Mo., on the 18th, injuring thirty persons, three or four fatally. It appears that some miscreants had removed the spikes and spread the rails about sixty feet from the approach to the bridge. The engine left the track but crossed the bridge on the ties. The jolting weakened the bridge, causing it to fall, carrying down the entire train.

THE bondsmen of Colonel Burnside, defaulting disbursing clerk of the Postoffice Department, have surrendered him to the authorities.

THE First Comptroller of the Treasury in settling the accounts of Robert C. Morgan (deceased), formerly Disbursing Clerk of the Department of State and Chief of the Bureau of Accounts, discovered a deficit of $12,000. His bondsmen have been called on to make good the account. Morgan was Disbursing Clerk of the State Department many years and was held in high esteem. He died about two months ago.

ABOUT five thousand miners are idle in the Monongahela Valley.

AT Muncie, Ind., on the 18th, Thomas Watling, who went to California during the gold fever of 1849, leaving a wife and three children, returned from the far West and spent the evening with his wife, children and grand-children. FOREIGN.

NEWS has been received at London that while the whaler Chieftain was sailing off the coast of Greenland four boats were dispatched in pursuit of a school of whales. A dense fog arose and the crew were unable to find the ship. They were only supplied with two days' provisions and water. A tempest arose and the boats were separated. The cold was intense. One boat reached land after eight days at sea. The men were in an emaciated and thoroughly exhausted condition, the only nourishment being from sucking ice. It is feared the other three boats containing fifteen men are lost. Only seven men were left on board the Chieftain and great anxiety is felt for her fate.

THE priests and military authorities of Saxony have started a crusade against the Mormons, which will probably result in their expulsion from the province and possibly from the entire empire.

THE death of John Gustavus Droysen, the eminent professor of history at the University of Berlin, is announced. Professor Droysen was born July 6, 1808, at Treptow, Pomerania.

ADVICES from Turkestan state that the Amu Daria River burst its dyke into the Kudshar Canal. A large military camp was destroyed and the fertile country submerged. Many persons perished.

A DISPATCH from The Hague says the Prince of Orange died on the 22d.

THE powder mills at Pontremoli, Italy, exploded on the 22d, killing thirty persons and injuring seventeen others.

IT is estimated that no less than 34,000 people have been converted by Mr. Moody since he began his revival meetings in London last fall.

A DISPATCH of the 21st from Battleford, Manitoba, says the Indians of Poundmakers Reserve seized and beat a Government official, broke into the Government store and stole provisions. About fifty mounted police, sent from Battleford to arrest them, were set at defiance and a fight was expected. The people of Battleford were alarmed, and had organized themselves for self-defence. No arrests.

THE small-pox epidemic continues to increase throughout London. There are now about 1,700 cases in the public hospitals, and new cases are being daily reported at the rate of about seventy-five per week.

IN the English House of Commons on the 21st the Under Foreign Secretary stated that the last news from General Gordon was of the date of April 12. He said that twenty messengers had been sent for General Gordon by different routes. One messenger who went up the Nile by boat succeeded in entering Khartoum. On his return, bearing General Gordon's answer to the Government he was pursued by rebels and killed.

LATER.

THE oil refinery of George Allen, & Son at Franklin, Pa., was totally destroyed by fire on the 23d, caused by an explosion of gas in the boiler room. The flames spread to the tanks and buildings, which were speedily consumed. Loss, $75,000. The track of the N. Y., P. & O. road for a distance of 100 yards was destroyed. Hugh Carr, superintendent of the refinery, had a narrow escape from a horrible death.

AN explosion of dynamite on the 23d in Brady's tunnel, near Washington, Pa., on the Hempfield extension of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, fatally injured Roger Kane and badly bruised and cut another workman whose name was not learned. The accident was caused by the blast not going off at the proper time.

THE depositors of the New Castle (Pa.) Savings Bank have accepted the proposition of Colonel Wallace to issue certificates payable in one, two and three years, bearing interest. A TORNADO visited the town of Fort Madison, Iowa, on the 23d, unroofing a large number of houses, including the Baptist Church and postoffice, and doing much damage. It was accompanied by a heavy rain, which flooded the unroofed buildings, and increased the losses.

REPORTS from Calais, Me., on the 23d state that forest fires were raging north, east and west of that place and all spreading rapidly. The city was surrounded with a dense smoke. Large gangs of men were at work, and more would start out to fight the flames.

A RESOLUTION was adopted in the Senate on the 23d directing the committee on Expenditures of Public Money to investigate the recent defalcations in the department and frauds upon the Navy Department. The Mexican Pension bill was then taken up and its consideration proceeded with. Mr. Sherman spoke in opposition to the bill. Mr. Mitchell offered as an amendment the substance of the pension bill introduced by Mr. Cullom early in May, providing pensions for "invalid soldiers and sailors who have been discharged from the army or navy of the United States after three months service in the war of the rebellion and, for widows and dependent parents of deceased pensioners." Adopted—yeas 32; nays 27. A motion to postpone the consideration the bill until December was lost, and after agreeing to come to a vote on the bill and amendments on the 24th, the Senate adjourned. In the House Mr. Hancock introduced a bill authorizing the funding of the entire bonded debt of the United States in two per cent. fifty-year bonds; referred. The Sundry Civil Service bill was taken up on a motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill. Amendments were adopted: Providing that United States marshals and district-attorneys be paid stated salaries; granting one month's extra pay to House employes; striking out the provision that no speech be printed in the Record that has not been delivered on the floor of Congress; commanding the Secretary of War to sell at public sale the Allegheny arsenal, Pennsylvania, the Augusta arsenal, Georgia, the Indianapolis arsenal, Indiana, Kennebec arsenal, Maine, and Watertown arsenal, Massachusetts. The bill was then passed—yeas 180, nays 35. Adjourned.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK.

The Annual Sermon to the Graduating Class, Delivered by Rev. C. E. Conley.

The Baptist Church was filled to its utmost capacity on Sunday evening last with an appreciative audience the occaston being the delivery of the annual sermon to the graduating class by Rev. C. E. Conley, pastor of the church. This new feature of commencement week exercises was introduced last year by Prof. Hammond, and it has given such general satisfaction that it will, without doubt, be permanently retained. The services were admirably adapted to the occasion. The music was excellent, the audience appreciative and the sermon itself full of good, practical advice, eloquently given. Revs. Babbitt and Hudson assisted in the pulpit services. By the courtesy of the author, we have the pleasure of giving our readers the discourse in full, which they will find excellent week day or Sunday reading.

THE DISCOURSE.

1 Cor. 16-13. "Quit you like men."

Is man an animal? Unquestionably some men are. They not only possess the physical characteristics of the animal, but they possess, in some instances to a very large degree, the animal nature. They are gross, sensual, selfish and thoughtless. They live for the present and for present gratification. If such men are more than animals, they are animal in their tendencies.

But then the word man is used in a higher sense. We say, "he is a man," meaning that he possesses qualities that do not characterize animals. His soul outweighs his body. He is unselfish, thoughtful and brave. He is just, merciful and magnanimous. In his own estimation himself is not the hub of the universe, but just one of the ordinary spokes. He lives on the level with his fellow men, to co-operate with them and in his turn to support them. He expects, and is fitted, to bear burdens.

Like his body, his spirit is upright. His heart, like his face, looks heavenward, and beats with unfeigned love and devotion to God, who gave it being, preserves its life and directs its ways.

A man, in this sense of the term, is not an organism. He is a spirit served by organs. That part of him which corresponds to the animal is under control. His physical desires are under bit and bridle. They do not run away with him, dashing him into pieces, but he drives, using them to serve his higher and manly purposes. They are his ministers to aid in his development Godward, and in the accomplishment of his projects of philanthropy. Under God he is master of himself.

A man is the crowning work of God. Carlysle said—"he is the miracle of miracles." In what does his glory consist? Not in his duration. The pyramids of Egypt are venerable with the age of more than forty centuries, the mountains, with unnumbered periods. Yet, compared with a man—comparatively speaking the creature of a day—they are as nothing. It does not consist in his strength. The horse, the bird, even the hare will outstrip him. Compared with the beasts of burden and the beasts of prey, he is almost strengthless.

Darwin's doctrine of the "Survival of the Fittest" embodies many elements of truth. It is that in the struggle for existence in the animal world, in their preying upon each other, in their mutual conflicts, the fittest alone survives, the rest perish. This fitness is strength, fleetness and superior sagacity.

But why does man survive? He is engaged in the same struggle, is without towering strength and marvelous fleetness. He survives, because of those qualities that distinguish him as a man—because of his likeness to his Creator. The divine in him is the sure pledge of his continued survival. But only those men who have the divine will survive. Those who are without it and are developing the baser part, the animal part of their natures, will perish—and more, in the world to come they will be the undying witnesses of their own perdition. Men in the higher, nobler divine sense, will alone be grandly and truly immortal. The only perfect man this world ever saw was the God man, Jesus of Nazareth and Jesus the Christ.

In this sense our text is to be understood. "Quit you like men."

I. In the first place let us consider a man's heart. The heart is that which gives direction to the activities which make up the life of its possessor. A steamship is the storehouse of tremendous energy. Its mighty will moves its iron and oaken frame with ease. The engine gives motion, nothing else. It is the rudder that directs its movements.

A human life is the dwelling place of energies, not as great as those of a steamship to be sure, but far more mysterious and subtle. They are mainly the energies of thought—and thought rules the blind energies of matter. Like those of a ship, they are aimless, unless directed. The heart is their rudder—it determines their course.

Look out upon the stream of life, and behold human destines going in opposite directions. Some are moving up stream towards the embowered haven at its source. Others are moving down stream towards the awful cataract that thunders below. So far as we can determine the energies of the one class are no greater than those of the other. Why their opposite directions then? The answer is evident. Their hearts are opposite in character and consequently give opposite directions. The first essential of a true and successful manhood is a right heart—a heart that heads the life up stream towards God. It were better that a steamship had never been built or that it had rotted at the wharf, than to head down stream—that means destruction at the cataract.

These words carry infinite weight when applied to a human destiny. To be under the direction of a bad heart makes life more than a failure—it makes it a calamity, a horrible disaster. Of one the Savior said, "It had been good for that man if he had not been born." (Mar. 26-24.) Certainly these words are true of all men who take the same direction.

If the rudder be right, ships will go up stream, even if the current is strong. Indeed they will go if, in addition to the current, there is a strong head wind. Their progress may be slower and more difficult than that of those which go with the current and before the wind. Nevertheless the rudder is right and they go. Men, in the nobler sense of the term, have right hearts, and go up towards God. Let the heart be right and they will never go over the cataract of perdition. Headwinds and counter currents may retard and increase labor, but nothing more. The great need of all is not a change of circumstances, but a change of heart.

Go into an artist's studio, and you will find him surrounded by models. Whether in painting or sculpture, he strives to imitate them. The more nearly he approaches them in excellence the greater he considers his success. But so long as his work appears inferior to the best models of the greatest masters, he is unsatisfied and toils on. But what artist ever found a perfect model? What genius ever looked upon his work as he put it by and said, "It is finished." "It cannot be surpassed," "It is faultless."

Jesus Christ is the perfect model. He is the archetypal man. In him dwelt all the elements of manhood in their completeness. In his bosom beat the perfect heart of the perfect man. He hated wrong, which is but another name for sin. Was it entrenched? Was it hoary with age? Was it buttressed by the pillars of society? Was it defended by wealth? Was it idolized by respectability? He attacked it without fear and without mercy. He was the relentless enemy of whatever was hostile to his God and to the truest interests of man. He was vigorous, but not harsh. His heart was tenderness itself. His hatred for wrong was no greater than his love for the wrong doer. In his eyes every persistent sinner was an immortal spirit rushing on in madness and blindness towards the bottomless abyss.

A legend has floated down to us from the early days of Roman History. It is this. The earth opened and threatened to engulf the nation. The seers explained that the only rescue from the impending doom was for some one to voluntarialy cast himself into the chasm. Then it would be closed up, and the doomed people would be redeemed.

One of the bravest knights responded, "I will go." The declaration and the deed were almost simultaneous. Leaping in, the chasm closed over him and his people were saved.

This faintly illustrates the self-sacrifice of the Son of God. Stirred by the peril of humanity, his heart moved him to self sacrifice for its rescue. The Roman knight went to his death with the tearful gratitude of those for whom he was to die. Jesus went to his, in spite of the enmity and malice of those he sought to rescue. Manhood does not consist in fame and earthly glory, nor in the praise or acclaim of men. Men are not such as Alexander, Caesar and Napoleon; but such as Paul, Luther, Knox and Williams—men whose hearts were like Christ's. "Quit you like men."

II. In the second place consider a man's intellect. While a right heart is the prime essential to a true manhood, it is not the only essential. Jesus was more than heart. His intellect was the broadest and the profoundest. A steamship would be of no use without a rudder. On the other hand a rudder would be of little account without the ship.

If the heart is the rudder, it must have powers and energies to direct, if there is accomplished any achievement worthy of the name.

A man of intellect is a man of power. A man of trained mental powers, like an athlete, wins. He it is who lays his hand upon the forces of the Commercial World and obliges them to lay their golden treasures at his feet. He accumulates wealth, and wealth is an important element in power. It is not a sin to be rich. Indeed it is a sin not to possess wealth, if one remains poor because he has not the energy to fit himself in mind to acquire it. If it is not a sin to have a strong arm to raise in the defense of the weak and oppressed, it is not a sin to get and hold money to feed the hungry, clothe the naked and to send the gospel, whose teachings are the fundamental law of Commercial and Business prosperity, to the poor and benighted of earth. The love, not the use, of money is the root of all evil.

J. P. Crozer of Philadelphia worked as hard and studied as closely to make money for the promotion of the kingdom of God, as most men do, to make money for hoarding. And institutions of learning and philanthrophy stand in our country as monuments of his manly, his Christly consecration. Wealth is oppressive and detrimental, when it is in the hands of persons, instead of the hands of men. Vanderbilt and Gould have not the hearts of men. Did they possess them, their millions would bless and not curse, relieve and not distress. It is the duty of every man, whom God calls into a life of business to make the most of his opportunities for the glory of God and for the relief and uplifting of humanity. To do this his intellectual powers must be trained, his business faculties must be enlarged by untiring effort and the most assiduous application. These things a man will do.

But I wish to call your attention to the importance of intellectual strength for other purposes, higher and more important.

The conflict of the ages is a conflict of ideas—wrong ideas arrayed against right ideas. The right deserves and needs strong and able champions. It often occurs that a vigorous intellect will clothe an error so attractively that it appears more true than truth itself. It is the old story of Satan's appearing as an angel of light to deceive, if possible, the very elect.

Right and Truth and Justice must have champions equally able. They must have men of thought and of disbernment; men who can discover the joints of their harness and who have the manly heart to thrust the dart into them. The newspaper is upon everybody's table. Its sentiments in the majority of cases become the sentiments of its readers especially when those sentiments are wrong. Let the press be on the wrong side of the temperance reform, as it generally is, let it be irreverent and pass lightly over the things that are sacred, let it send out a covert skepticism, as it too frequently does, and its readers show the effect of the poison. Almost every child in the land spends the most impressible part of his days with the teacher in the Public School.

Is he manly? The child copies it. Is he unmaly? By this I mean, is he immoral or worldly or regardless of the truths and commands of the Bible? Is his conscience elastic and is he without consecration? His pupil is more apt than otherwise to be like him. Whether a man's life be right or wrong, it is contagious.

Perhaps no means of influence is more potent than that of public address. Marshaled thoughts quickened into life by the living voice are almost irresistible. As if under a spell, men are led by them right or wrong. The editor, the teacher and the speaker constitute a sort of a trinity of power. These functions will be performed, if not by men, by those who are unworthy of the name. And persons, who are not men, are not going to stand by to see whether men will do the work before they take hold. They will spread their poison, if they can. If men occupy these positions, it will be because they are strongest intellectually. Is it manly for a young man who has strong hands, a clear head and right heart, to say I can't fit myself by study to overpower these enemies of God and man by sheer strength and to supplant them? In fact is he a man, if this is his spirit? Twenty years ago young men looked upon the strife around our nation's flag and over the human slave, and felt to imperil their lives for the nation's honor and for human freedom. Is the conflict of ideas of to day any less real, any less important than that conflict of bullets? Will not manly hearts be as strongly moved to champion the cause of right, of humanity, and of God, and also to fit themselves to win? I tell you young men and women, if they are men and women, will be inspired by the trumpet call of duty, to give themselves, by means of study, mental strength, which will enable them to triumph. I plead for higher education, for the academy and for the college. It is said that the professions are overflowing. They are full of failures, but not of successes. I plead for that mental discipline, which will ensure success. "There is room enough on top." "Quit you like men."

III. We will now consider briefly our third point—a man's throne. By throne I mean power. A man—consisting, as he does, of heart and intellect—is a moral ruler. His utterances of truth, quickened into life by his love, win. They produce conviction; they give him followers. His arguments and entreaties are in effect commands, and kindred souls obey. They create and shape public opinion, which at length heaving like an earthquake, shatters to fragments the hoary fastnesses of wrong. Leadership does not consist in office-holding. The holders of office are bt the executives of the sentiment which the leaders have created.

Wendell Philips and Garrison were more truly rulers of this country than Abraham Lincoln. They breathed into the nation the spirit of emancipation; he emancipated in obedience to the nation's will. In the books of American History the name of Lincoln will be forever coupled with that most splendid triumph of human rights and human liberty. But in the books of God, the names of Garrison, Philips and their compeers are written over this moral triumph in letters of living, undying light. They were men—men of conscience and conviction. When they began to speak, they were opposed and set upon by all the baser passions of the human heart. They were maligned, assailed, mobbed, beaten. Citizens hissed them, and their names were by words in the mouths of children. Still they argued and entreated. In time the thunders of battle rolled. Those sharp words were transmited into hissing bullets. Congress resolved, armies mustered, squadrons marched and charged. Whose power was here manifested? The presidents? No. It was the power of such men as Garrison and Philips. No emperor ever sat upon a throne of more absolute, resistless power than theirs—and they never held an office.

The Christian Church is alive with missionary zeal to-day. It was not so a hundred years ago. What has wrought the change? The example, the influence and the words of such men as Carey and Judson. They were men after the model of Christ himself, and in the beginnings of their work they were treated much as he was treated. But they ruled and do rule. The power which emanates this hour from their graves is more absolute than the power which emanates from the man on the Tiber.

The Sage of Portland has dedicated his life to the prohibition of the Liquor Traffic. His country-men have greeted him as they greeted Philips—with hatred, ostracism and ridicule. But his thought is becoming the law of millions. His convictions are sweeping around and through our land like billows of fire. He is ascending his throne. The time is coming, when that power will bid the traffic "Begone" and it will go.

Such is the grandeur of manhood, which is but another word for Christhood. A man is the grandest spectacle of time. Civil and social distinctions are like the waves of the sea. They come and they go and are forgotten. But men, like the mountains of God, endure—like God himself, they endure forever. To be a man is to be like God; for "in the image of God created he him. (Gen. 1-27.)

"Quit you like men."

THE STAGE-DRIVERS STORY.

How General Scott's Life was Saved and How His Driver Twice Escaped Death.

The traveler of the present day, as he is hurried along in the lightning express, in its buffet cars and palace sleepers, seldom reverts in thought to the time when the stage coach and packet were the only means of communication between distant points. It is rare that one of the real old time stage drivers is met with now-a-days and when the writer recently ran across Fayette Haskell, of Lockport, N. Y., he felt like a bibliographer over the discovery of some rare volume of "forgotten lore." Mr. Haskell, although one of the pioneers in stage driving (he formerly ran from Lewiston to Niagara Falls and Buffalo), is hale and hearty and bids fair to live for many years. The strange stories of his early adventures would fill a volume. At one time while going down a mountain near Lewiston with no less a personage than General Scott as a passenger, the brakes gave way and the coach came on the heels of the wheel horses. The only remedy was to whip the leaders to a galop. Gaining additional momentum with each revolution of the wheels the coach swayed and pitched down the mountain side and into the streets of Lewiston. Straight ahead at the foot of the steep hill flowed the Niagara river, towards which the four horses dashed, apparently to certain death. Yet the firm hand never relaxed its hold nor the clear brain its conception of what must be done in the emergency. On dashed the hores until the narrow dock was reached on the rivbang, when by a masterly exhibition of nerve and daring, the coach was turned in scarce its own length and the horses brought to a stand still before the pale lookers-on could realize what had occurred. A purse was raised by General Scott and presented to Mr. Haskell with high compliments for his skill and bravery.

Notwithstanding all his strength and his robust constitution the strain of continuous work and exposure proved too much for Mr. Haskell's constitution. The constant jolting of the coach and the necessarily cramped position in which he was obliged to sit, contributed to this end, and at times he was obliged to abandon driving altogether.

Speaking of this perfod he said:

"I found it almost impossible to sleep at night; my appetite left me entirely and I had a tired feeling which I never knew before and could not account for."

"Did you give up driving entirely?"

"No. I tried to keep up but it was only with the greatest effort. This state of things continted for nearly twenty years until last October when I went all to pieces."

"In what way?"

"Oh, I doubled all up; could not walk without a cane and was incapable of any effort or exertion. I had a constant desire to urinate both day and night and although I felt like passing a gallon every ten minutes only a few drops could escape and they thick with sediment. Finally it ceased to flow entirly and I thought death was very near."

"What did you do then?"

"What I should have done long before: listen to my wife. Under her advice I began a new treatment."

"And with what result?"

"Wonderful. It unstopped the closed passages and what was still more wonderful regulated the flow. The sedimen vanished; my appetite returned and I am now well and good for twenty more years wholly through the aid of Warners' Safe Cure that has done wonders for me as well as for so many others."

Mr. Haskell's experience is repeated every day in the lives of thousands of American men and women. An unknown evil is undermining the existence of an innumerable number who do not realize the danger they are in until health has entirely departed and death perhaps stirs them in the face. To neglect such important matters is like drifting in the current of Niagara above the Falls.

Some young Clinton gentleman seem to have better luck fishing on Sunday than did the youth that the preacher caught fishing on that holy day, who, after asking the boy how many he had caught, received the reply that when he got the one he was after and two more, he would have three. A Clinton young man caught a ten pound pickeral last Sunday up in the pious town of Podunk with an angleworm for bait. We suppress the gentleman's name to save his parent's tears for such impiety, but caution him against any such impropriety in the future.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

The festive potato bug is having a good time this spring.

Asa E. Stevens, of Chicago, is home for a two week's vacation.

Bert Tribou of Detroit, was at home two or three days last week.

Our job presses are crowded now days to their fullest capacity.

Mr. P. S. Blosser, of Manchester, was in town last Tuesday and favored the HERALD with a call.

Dr. L. H. Goodrich, of Detroit, was in town over Sunday visiting his sister, Mrs. C. M. Burlingame.

The regular commencement exercises of the graduating class take place at the Opera House this evening.

Mrs. C. M. Burlingame left home Monday morning on a visiting trip to relatives in Coldwater and in Indiana.

Ell Hand caught seven nice pickeral in the Brownville pond on Tuesday afternoon, weighing from 3 to 5 lbs. each.

Sam James, of Detroit, passed last Sunday at his home in this village.—His many friends are always glad to see him.

C. A. Kiel, of Toledo, came up last Saturday and spent Sunday at Sand Lake. A day in the sunshine was good for him.

Uncle James Updike was in town last Saturday for the first time since his accident. We were glad to see him out again.

The farmer weareth a more cheerful countenance and whistles merrily as he guides the cultivator among the springing corn.

Will Hastings was the only Tecumseh boy who went to Ann Arbor for examination preparatory to entering the University.

M. P. Brown is taking lots of photographs these days; at least we printed an express wagon load of cards for him last week.

The next meeting of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M., takes place on Friday evening, July 11th. Work in the 2nd degree.

Uncle Ezra Blood and wife yesterday took the M. & O. road for Richland where they will remain a few days visiting friends.

Mrs. F. C. Stoepel, of Detroit, is at home with her parents and expects to remain here for several weeks, probably during the summer.

Billy Eccles furnished the ice cream for the Manchester Alumni Society last week and they pronounced it extra nice. The fact is that Billy knows just how to make the boss ice cream.

Chas. Brewer and wife returned home from their western trip on Friday afternoon last. Charlie reports having had a good time and he looks as though the trip had agreed with him.

Uncle Geo. Sheeler, of Cambridge, came down on the M. & O. road Saturday and spent Sunday with Tecumseh friends. Although nearly eighty years of age he is enjoying excellent health. His son, Frank, now runs the old farm and Uncle George spends his time visiting.

The Baptist Items for June appears this week. It is fully up to the standard of former numbers and contains an interesting exhibit of church news and miscellaneous matter. Bro. Conley has succeeded so well with the first volume that he can well afford to continue the venture.

A Columbus, O., publishing house is sending out circulars offering inducements to agents to solicit for their books and among the things noted upon which the agent is to rely for success are—"the help of God, and the power of truth!" The first person called upon however would pray: "The d——l take you!"

The enterprising proprietors of Hood's Sarsaparilla are the first in the field with a Campaign Card giving an excellent lithographic portrait and sketch of James G. Blaine, the Republican Presidental candidate. The back of the card also gives the last electoral vote, the new apportionment, and other valuable information. Copies may be had by sending stamp to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

We record with sorrow the death of Mrs. Maria Brewer which took place very suddenly, from appoplexy yesterday at one o'clock. She was well as usual up to half past 11, when she was taken and was unconscious almost from the first. Our sympathy is extended to those who have been so unexpectedly bereaved. The funeral services will be held at the house tomorrow at 4 P.M.

Dr. John Webster of N. Y., has been making an extended tour of the west. He is a nephew of Mrs. Ann Finch and John Garlinghouse of this vicinity. He will probably settle down to practice his profession in Bath, N. Y. If as good a physician as he is a fellow, he will in our opinion have a successful life. On his return to N. Y. he was accompanied by Mrs. Finch who will visit her sisters at Bath, N. Y. She will be gone two months, probably.

Dr. Snyder has eclipsed them all in wall and ceiling decorations, and he now has the nobbiest room in town.—Daglish did the work.

We are glad to see Seaton Anderson about again. He is rapidly regaining his health, and will soon take his accustomed place in the store again.

Round trip tourist's tickets to Traverse City, Petoskey, Mackinac Island, Mackinaw City, Sault St. Marie, Marquette and Duluth via the Michigan & Ohio Railroad, are now on sale at the Depot Ticket office at this station, where full particulars may be obtained as to rates, routes &c.

There is an atmosphere of summer all through the July HARPER'S, which is nearly ready for publication. The opening paper deals with the Nile, now in the season of its inundation, and another with the St. Lawrence and its summer resorts; while the approaches to New York, a London suburb, "Harrow-on-the-Hill," and one of the suburbs of Washington, Kendall Green, are the subjects of other articles. Both the serials are very summery; the paper on Bismark gives a pleasant account of his summer life, and one on "Professional Beauties of the Last Century" includes a graphic description of a summer night's party at Ranelaugh Gardens. There is also a paper on cattle-farming at the West, and a poem by Philip Bourke Marston sings of Roses and Nightingales."

The Alumni Reunion will be held at the Lilley House to-morrow evening. A full program of exercises will be presented, which bids fair to be more than usually interesting. The program will consist of the usual literary exercises, to be followed by supper and toasts. Below is the literary program:

Prayer—Rev. J. Phelps.
Music—High School Choir.
Oration—Has No Name—P. S. McKinnon.
Poem—Life's Opportunities—Miss Eunice Davidson.
Music—Scenes that are Brightest—Miss Molly Keip.
Essay—Our Words—Miss Clara Waldron.
History—Classes of '75 and '76.—Miss Julia Snell.
Music, Duet—A Night in Venice—C. F. Field, Miss Molly Keip.
Welcome to Class of '84—Pres. Abner Wilson.
Response—Pres. of Class, B. F. Lamkins.

Dr. Hamilton has in a measure renewed his youth this spring. He went down to Medina on the 28th of last month and took part in the observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of that village. He was one of the speakers of the occasion, as was also Rev. M. E. Hayne the previous pastor of this church. During the services the fact came out that Dr. H. taught the first school in that section, and Mr. John I. Knapp of Adrian, set himself to collecting the scholars of that first school in Medina, and succeeded in finding some 8 or 10, and when they were arranged in a row they were a very patriarchal looking lot of scholars. He also attended the annual meeting of the State Medical Society at Grand Rapids, June 11 and 12, and had the pleasure of voting for Donald Maclean for president. We are told that he himself was the dark horse that was to come out in case Maclean or French could not be elected. This week he went to Kalamazoo to attend Kalamazoo College commencement and the laying of the corner stone of the Ladies' Hall. Who of our young men act younger?

BASE BALL.

Tuesday's game of base ball between the Tecumseh club and the Experts of Detroit, was won very easily by the home club by a score of 22 to 10. Owing to the rain in the forenoon the game was not called until four o'clock instead of two as advertised. The game was characterized by poor playing on both sides, as will be seen by a glance at the error column. Chapman was on the diamond for the first time this season, and was consequently a little out of practice. McKinney done the firing in good shape and was credited with but two errors, while "the poor Dutch boy" stood behind the bat and took them in with all his old time cleverness. Anderson captured two flies over in left field very neatly, but was no good at the bat. The grounds were not in very good shape for good playing, being wet and slippery. Attendance light.

To-morrow afternoon the Ypsilanti club will play our boys a game, at 3 o'clock P.M. Following is Tuesday's score:

FROM THE BAPTIST ITEMS.

Emma Morse is still feeble.

Mrs. Aaron Aten is dangerously sick.

Mr. J. Cook's people are improving in health.

Mrs. Osborn and Carrie have both been sick.

Mrs. J. H. Heck's health is very much improved.

Mrs. J. Elliott has enjoyed a visit from friends from Homer.

Mrs. Dr. Ferguson has gone to her old home in Coldwater for a short visit.

Miss Edith Webster has returned from Ohio. Her health is very much broken.

J. H. Osborn is now on his spring trip. He reports business better than last winter.

Bro. Coad, the new Associational Superintendent, is pastor of the Clayton church.

Willie Des Antels expects to visit us during his summer vacation. Shall be glad to see him.

Mrs. Dr. Fisher is enjoying a visit from friends from Battle Creek, Mrs. Rue and Mrs. Gregory.

Mr. A. S. Clauharty and wife, of Adrian, attended the Anniversaries and the Association also.

Allie J. Coddington has attained the distinction of editor. His paper is "The Shelby Enterprise."

Mrs. H. Miner has been suffering again from a long period of illness.—Her health is now measurably restored.

Miss Kate Yawger, member of the Portland Baptist church, is spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. A. Yawger.

The annual sermon before our Public Schools was delivered on the 22d inst., in the Baptist church by the pastor.

Miss Lucy J. Bruner, member of the Baptist church in Springfield, O., is visiting her sister, Mrs. D. M. Zellars, of Tecumseh.

Dr. B. F. Steinhoff and wife expect to leave town about July 1st for a few week's rest, at his old home in Canada and Northern Michigan.

Mrs. H. G. Coleman, member of the Kalamazoo Baptist church, has been visiting her old friend and classmate, of this church, Mrs. H. Brewer.

Miss Mary Sweet, teacher in Riga, spent the 7th, 8th and 9th with her parents. She was in her accustomed place at church and S. S., of course.

Mr. and Mrs. Long, members of the Baptist church at Eaton Rapids, worshipped with us Sunday, the 15th inst. They were visiting Mr. and Mrs. F. Horton.

Of our delegation to Kalamazoo College for the past year, two are home this week, viz: J. O. Heck and Eva Daglish. The other two are expected next week.

We regret to hear that Rev. F. L. Patterson, of Hudson, has resigned. He is an earnest and efficient minister, and we shall be sorry to have him leave the Association.

Rev. M. E. Hayne and family hope to spend a few days in Tecumseh.—His old friends will be glad to greet him, and sincerely hope he can stay over Sunday and preach for us.

Of the members of the church the pastor and wife, Dea. J. Margeson and wife, J. Fisher and wife, Mrs. O. B. DeWolf, Dr. Geo. Furgeson, and Mrs. Joanna Hope attended the anniversaries.

Peter Waldron, Sr., is very low. It is feared he will not recover. It is to be sincerely hoped that these fears may not be realized. That all that can be done will be done for his recovery is certain from the fact that he is under the care of Dr. Hamilton.

Quite a company attended the Association at Hudson, viz: The pastor, Dea. J. C. Clough, J. W. DePuy, Mrs. Maria DePuy, Mrs. J. H. Heck, Mrs. Dr. North, Mrs. Dr. Fisher, Mrs. C. McNeil, Mrs. Rufus Adams, Mrs. S. Bryan, Miss Mary Herring, Mrs. A. P. Coddington and J. H. Bramble and wife.

Dr. Mark Fessenden of Dundee, was in Tecumseh a few hours last Tuesday. He reports himself and family well. Has been having trouble with his eyes but they are better now. He came and returned via. the M. & O. Says there is no intoxicant on sale in Dundee except on prescription of a doctor.

On account of increasing Sunday headaches Dr. Steinhoff has been compelled to relinquish his S. S. class. The mantle has fallen on Dr. Geo. Ferguson, whom we feel confident will wear it with credit to himself and with benefit to the class. Dr. Steinhoff's leadership has extended over a period of more than four years of faithful and efficient labor.

Mr. Wm. Daglish, son of J. T. Daglish, who has for several years made Cleveland, Ohio, his home is visiting his father and relatives in Tecumseh. He belonged to S. S. class No. 13, ten years ago. He will find several members of the class still in Tecumseh, but it is doubtful if they ever all meet again. We hope Will's stay may be pleasant, and we feel like saying come often, Will, and stay long.

MR. G. P. SPARK'S LETTER

In the Tecumseh Herald of the 22d ult. appeared a letter from G. P. Sparks, entitled "The Saloon Bond Question," in which, in a most courteous way he reviewed an editorial in the last number of the Items. In the main it was an explanation of his action as a member of the Common Council in voting for the acceptance of saloonists' bonds, in opposition to the expressed wish of 178 voters in and 555 other residents of the Corporation of Tecumseh. For a representative of the people to disregard the earnest prayer of so many of his constituents, the most satisfactory and weighty reasons would naturally be expected.

His reasons are substantially expressed in two sentences. First—"If I had believed it right to vote for the rejection of the bonds I would have done so."

It occurs to us that we would have hesitated to oppose our individual opinion as to the right in the case against the declared opinion of 723 of our fellow townspeople, whose interest in the matter could be certainly no less than our own, and whose known character for candor and conscience is certainly equal to that possessed by the average citizen. True, we would adhere to our own convictions of right in a matter purely personal irrespective of the convictions of all others. But we sincerely believe were we filling an office of trust, placed there by the suffrage of the people, that we ought to carry out the wishes of those who infrust their interests to our keeping, although such action might be in opposition to our own conviction. To do otherwise would be an unwarranted usurpation of power, that would be intolerable in a popular government. But, then if the action required at our hands were so radically opposed to our moral sense, that we could not perform it, the only thing left for us to do would be to resign. This would save us from wrong doing and usurpation alike. Certainly Mr. Sparks will agree with us here, for he is an upright and patriotic citizen.

Second—"My action in this matter was based on equal justice to all men, on the broad platform of humanitarianism."

We fail to see the consistency between this statement and the following: "I hate the liquor traffic in all its horrid details, from the bottom of my heart, and believe it to be the curse of the world, the source of nearly all the crime and poverty in the land. I would strike as hard blows at the right place, the source of the evil, for its abolition, as any man living."

If this last statement is correct, and we believe it is, how could Mr. Sparks base his action on "equal justice to all men, on the broad platform of humanitarianism?" Is it equal justice, is it humanitarianism to deliberately and wilfully perpetuate a traffic that is the curse of the world and the prolific source of so much crime and poverty? Suppose, as may be the case, there be found on our streets the body of a murdered man, killed by a man made drunken in our saloons. Would Mr. Sparks stand over that lifeless form in the midst of the heart-broken family, and repeat "my action was based on equal justice to all men, on the broad platform of humanitarianism?" We believe he would see his error under such circumstances.

At the close of the letter he makes this statement: "The Council are determined to prosecute any saloonkeeper that violates the law, if sufficient evidence can be obtained to make out a case."

While the carrying out of this pledge would not satisfy the petitioners, yet it seems to us that it would allay the suspicion that the Council are not acting in good faith. We hope it may be done, we would rejoice in it.

But two rumors have reached us. We give them for what they are worth. If in any way we misrepresent the facts, it is because we have been misinformed.

Rumor 1—A man was seen to come out of a certain saloon after midnight. The fact was reported to one of the councilmen by one who is willing to step forward as a witness.

Rumor 2—The sound of reveling was heard in another saloon after 10 P. M. This fact also was promptly reported by the man who heard it.

We asked Mr. Sparks if these rumors were true. He replied, "I suppose they are." Yet, fully three weeks have passed away and we have heard of no prosecution. We sincerely wish this matter could be satisfactorily explained. But we do not see how it can be done.
C. E. CONLEY.

Rev. J. W. Payne has resigned the pastoral charge of the Clinton Baptist church. The church positively declined to accept his resignation at first. But he made it imperative and consequently will go. The complimentary resolutions that were unanimously passed, and published in the Christian Herald and also in the Tecumseh papers, were deserved. He is an earnest, conscientious, hardworking pastor. We very much dislike to lose him as a neighbor, and are sure that the church that secures his services will secure a prize.

FIRE, FIRE.

ONE OF TECUMSEH'S MOST IMPORTANT MANUFACTORIES DESTROYED.

The Tecumseh Lumber Company's Mill in Ruins.

As we commenced printing our paper we heard the cry of fire and soon learned that The Tecumseh Lumber Co's Mill was all ablaze, having took fire from the shavings in the engine room. The alarm was given at 2:15 and in less than thirty minutes the entire structure was in ruins, together with a large amount of lumber which was piled in the rear of the the planing mills. By the exertion of our firemen, who done nobly, the dwellings surrounding the fire were saved, although in a damaged condition. Some of the men at work in the second story of the mill had merely time to make their escape, leaving everything except the clothes they had on. Morris Primrose had both of his arms very badly burned. It is impossible to estimate the loss at this writing, as it is not only the intrinsic value of the mill property, but it ends one of Tecumseh's best and most flourishing manufactories.

Wm. Kennedy's house next to the mill was damaged by fire and water about $200 dollar's worth. The furniture was saved, though in a damaged condition. The residence of John Temple west of the mill was cleared of its contents, but was saved also.

LATER.—Mr. Smith was seen and said he estimated the loss at about $15,000 covered by about $7,000 insurance. Mr. Koch, the manager, is in Toledo, but is expected home on the 7 o'clock M. & O. train.

Don't!

DON'T Think, just because you have been suffering terribly with Rheumatism or Neuralgia, that you must always continue to suffer.

DON'T Think that a cure is impossible, just because the physicians have been unable to cure you.

DON'T Think that because ATHLOPHOROS has not been known ever since the foundation of the world, it will not cure Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

DON'T Neglect the testimony of the thousands of sufferers who have tried ATHLOPHOROS and are now sound and hearty.

Nor think that because you have tried fifty other things that failed, that ATHLOPHOROS is like them.

Don't be discouraged! The very thing that will cure Rheumatism and Neuralgia is ATHLOPHOROS.

Don't be Skeptical! ATHLOPHOROS has cured others. It will Cure YOU.

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it, express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

ZOA-PHORA

Is a Sovereign Remedy for all complaints peculiar to

WOMEN.

MISHAWAKA, Ind., Dec. 1, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY
Dear Sir—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zoa-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during almost those painful, weary years; but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. Yours truly,
JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 26, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY
Dear Sir—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I can not afford to let what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,
MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression.

From Mrs. Jonas Silber.
[illegible] Will St., Fort Wayne, Ind.
I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head and general nervous [illegible] Monday I had a severe attack of [illegible] in my head, caused by weakness and [illegible] exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora [illegible] He gave it to me according to [illegible] for severe cases, and in less than [illegible] hours I had complete relief. I advise all [illegible] who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness, to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

HAY-FEVER

Cream Balm is a remedy founded on a correct diagnosis of this disease and can be depended upon. 50 cents, at druggists; 60c by mail. Sample bottles by mail 10c.
ELY BROTHERS, Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

Hay Fever is a type of Catarrh, the peculiar symptoms. It is attended by an inflamed condition of the lining membrane of the nostrils, tear-ducts and throat affecting the lungs. An acrid mucus is secreted, the discharge is accompanied with a painful burning sensation. There are severe spasms of sneezing, frequent attacks of blinding headache, a watery and inflamed state of the eyes. Ely's —Silver dimes of 1867 are worth thirty cents each. Ah, dear, it seems to us we last dime we had must have been somewhere along in that year. But it was only worth ten cents then. Just our luck.—Burlington Hawkeye.

—A colored man came into a Galveston newspaper office and wanted to subscribe to the paper. "How long do you want it?" asked the clerk. "Jess as long as it is, boss; if it don't fit the shelves I kin t'ar a piece off myself.—Texas Siftings.

—A ragged little girl in a London school was recently asked why Adam and Eve were turned out of Paradise. She promptly answered: "Because they didn't pay their rent." Her parents had been evicted for non-payment of rent several times within a few months.

—"Boy!" he called as he snapped his fingers at a post-office boot-black, "are you the lad I handed a dollar bill to yesterday to get changed, and you beat me out of thirteen cents?" "No, sir." "Look out! "How do you know you ain't?" "Cause; do I look like a boy who'd beat you out of a shilling when I could walk off with the dollar? Stranger, you must have got hold of some poor lootle kid who's just begun bizness."—Detroit Free Press.

—A well known oil producer told us yesterday of a rather good thing which occurred when he was a boy. He and several other chaps heard a poor woman in a miserable shanty praying for bread, and it was suggested that they procure a dozen loaves and throw them down the chimney. This was done, and after awhile the boys knocked at the door and asked, "Well, auntie, did the Lord send you any bread?" "Yes, indeed," was the reply, "and he made the devil's children bring it."—Oil City Derrick.

—Crushing a serenader.—

A youth went forth to serenade
The lady whom he loved the best,
And at her house his footsteps stayed
Until the moon had gone to rest.

He warbled till the morning light
Came dancing over the mountain's rim;
But no fair maiden blessed his sight,
And all seemed dark and drear to him.

With heart aglow and eyes ablaze
He drew much nearer than before,
When, to his horror and amaze,
He saw "To Let" upon the door.
—Hoosier Republican.

Hired Help.

Mrs. Jophlewizzle had hired a new and a very green errand boy and she sent him with a basket and some money to get some groceries. When he came back he did not report and she called down stairs to him.

"John, did you get the cabbages?"

"That's wot you tole me to git," he answered, with a lazy drawl.

"Did you get the potatoes?"

"That's wot you tole me to git."

"Did you get the starch?"

"That's wot you tole me to git."

"Did you get the soap?"

"That's wot you tole me to git."

"Did you get the sugar?"

"That's wot you tole me to git."

"I know that," she shrieked after the same monotonous reply floated up to her for the fifth time, "but did you get them?"

"No, ma'am. I lost the money, and some dang thief uv a boy stole the basket."—Merchant Traveler.

Excited Thousands.

All over the land are going into ecstacy over Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their unbooked for recovery by the untiring use of this great life saving remedy, causes them to go nearly wild in its praise. It is guaranteed to positively cure Severe Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Hay Fever, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Loss of Voice, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs. Trial Bottles free. Large size $1.00.

The Proper Way.

To attach a stamp to an envelope is to moisten the envelope and then stick the stamp. Try this. If we did this the proper thing we would use Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic for dyspepsia, costiveness, bad breath, piles, pimples, ague and malaria diseases, poor appetite, low spirits, headache, or diseases of the kidneys, stomach and liver. Price 50 cents, of Baker & Hall.

Without pretending to give an editorial opinion of a remedy of which we know nothing personally, we desire to ask those of our readers who are afflicted with scrofulous or other diseases of the blood, to examine and test the claims of Hoodie's Sarsaparilla. It comes to us with high individual endorsements, is compounded by practical druggists, and is made of materials recognized as valuable by all physicians.

Boats, Bicycles and Hay Fever.

With the opening of the season of outdoor sports comes the time of trouble for the poor victims of Hay Fever. For them flowers have no odor, and the summer little of no beauty. To snuff, sneeze and wipe their weeping eyes for three or four successive months:—this is their pitiable portion. There is no help in sea-voyages, there is no help in high mountain air. These only lighten the pocket and leave the disease unabated. But there is a positive cure in Ely's Cream Balm. Try it. If you continue to suffer it is because you neglect a remedy as sure as it is cheap and pleasant.

FOUR POINTS
Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD.
Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS.
WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC.
WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing; use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes in to soak, rubbing plenty of soap in the most soiled parts. Be sure that the soaking water is hot; soak the clothes half an hour; stir them occasionally so that they may get the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them mightily out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil 10 to 20 minutes, rinse well, blue and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boiling by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Fannels and prints should not be boiled, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the wash-board, and being the best disinfectent known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury; the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press water out with the hand; boil 3 to 5 minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press carefully between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron between pieces of old flannel. Soak curtains 10 to 30 minutes and boil 5 to 20 minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, or pin every scallop to carpet over a sheet to dry, no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

Sold by leading wholesale and retail grocers everywhere. Dealers may obtain our goods upon application. ELECTRIC SOAP MANUFACTURING CO., Indianapolis, Ind., and 262 S. Water St., Chicago, Ill.

CATARRH IN THE HEAD

TRADE MARK

Can positively be cured by using DR. P. HALL'S CATARRH REMEDY. A new compound, entirely different from all other preparations. It is in the form of a fine ointment which is easily applied in the nostrils and ears, and reaches the seat of the disease by absorption. Pleasant to the smell, and most efficient in operation. For Hay Fever, also, unequaled. Hearing, Sight, Smell and Taste impaired by Catarrhal disease, it is a positive cure. The most noted Physicians and prominent Druggists all over the land have given it their endorsement. We have the unsolicited testimonials of hundreds of a prominent and reliable nature, who have been permanently cured. Do not be humbugged by nostrums, prepared by the inexperienced and unreliable, but insist upon having this Excellent Remedy, compounded by a Physician who has made this disease a study for 30 years. Two to four bottles generally sufficient to effect an entire cure. Satisfaction guaranteed or Money refunded. It is a positive cure for Ear-ache. For sale by Druggists. Also sent by mail, postpaid, upon receipt of 50c. a single bottle, package of two bottles, $1.00. Circulars and testimonials free.

THE GROWTH OF THE TWIN RELIC.

Mormon Missionaries Arrive from Europe With a Large Number of Converts.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Twenty-five Mormon missionaries, with 301 converts, forty-one Scandinavians and one hundred English, arrived via the steamship Arizona, en route for Salt Lake City, under charge of Chief Elder C. H. Nye. As the steamer reached the dock a roll call was held, and each elder was detailed to his respective post. The young women looked listless as the elders rushed among them giving orders. Elder C. H. Nye said: "The converts I bring are not all recent accessions, some having been members of the church over thirty years who, through lack of means or other causes, have been unable to come here sooner. I am now going back to Utah to remain there, and within a short time of our arrival, a further relay of elders will be sent to Europe to keep up the work. I consider I have been very successful." Referring to the arrest of Mormon missionaries in Vienna Nye said: "I do not contemplate any serious outcome from it. Austria is very intolerant. I look upon the trouble as only temporary, and it is doing our church more good than harm." Nye, on being questioned in regard to the number of each sex he had with him, was very reluctant. Women formed the majority of his party.

Wagner, the Mt. Gilead Murderer, Refused Another Trial.

MT. GILEAD, O., Jvne 24—Wagner, the condemned murderer, received the news of the action of the Supreme Court, refusing him another trial, with his usual stolid indifference. He remarked that a power higher than that of man would take him out of the way before the day of execution arrived. When asked if he meant by that that he would commit suicide, he replied: "Certainly not." Sheriff Modis still allows him the privilege of the jail, and although he does not care to converse much with other prisoners, he can do so if he choose. It will be very strange, with the chances he has of obtaining material to destroy life, if he lives to be hung. His attorney will make a last appeal this week to Governor Hoadly for a commutation of the sentence to imprisonment for life, but will hardly accomplish the desired end.

The Oil Market.

PITTSBURGH, June 24.—The oil trade has not yet recovered from the terrible shaking up it received Friday and Saturday. The feeling yesterday was a trifle better but the undertone was weak and panicky. The refusal of the banks to loan on certificates has had a demoralizing effect on the business and frightened many buyers from investing.

There were no failures on 'Change yesterday, and rumors of financial embarrassment of prominent operators proved groundless. The market opened with sales at 56, advanced to 57, but suddenly broke on reports of a grain failure in Chicago, coupled with a weak stock market and bearish field news, and amid great excitement declined to 53½, when the trade took courage and the market rallied to 55. At one o'clock this afternoon during the decline several large blocks were offered with no takers.

A Cloud-Burst Does Considerable Damage in Montana.

HELENA, Mont., June 24.—Manday a cloud-burst occurred on the mountain side near Corbin, twenty miles south of Helena. A breast of water eight feet deep rushed down the gulch toward Jefferson City, in its course washing away a Chinese house and drowning three occupants, Yay Lany, Hay Wah and Lee Dew. An alarm was telephoned down to Jefferson from Corbin, and part of the people found refuge on a hill near by, while others sought the second floors. The water spread before reaching town, and when it passed through the streets, was not deep enough to sweep away any but a few small frame houses, and nobody was drowned. A quarter of a mile of the Helena & Jefferson Railroad was washed out. Much damage was done to goods in stores and crops on ranches.

Berner's Accomplice to Hang.

CINCINNATI, June 24.—The jury in the case of Joseph Palmer, accomplice of William Berner, yesterday returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. This verdict only emphasises the iniquity of the Berner verdict. Berner and Palmer together killed William H. Kirk, their employer, in his stable, for his money. They both confessed. The proof in both cases is practically the same, yet Berner's jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter. It was this gross travesty of law and justice that produced the excitement which led to the riots and the burning of the court house. Berner has twenty years in the Penitentiary. Palmer must hang.

A Disputed Roadbed.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 24.—Trouble is anticipated at Point Marion, a short distance from this place, between the forces of the Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania Central and Pittsburgh, McKeesport & Youghiogheny Railroads. There is only room for one track at that point and the three roads are fighting for it. One hundred Irish and Italian laborers are already at the scene and by to-day it is thought that between four and five hundred men will be gathered there, and when the opposing factions meet trouble is sure to ensue.

Treaty With Canada.

OTTAWA, June 24.—It is reported the Government has arranged a reciprocity treaty with the United States which will shortly be made public. The new treaty will follow the lines of the former reciprocity treaty, admitting natural products and some articles in earlier stages of manufacture. The defeat of the Morrison Tariff bill in the United States House of Representatives is alleged to be largely due to a renewal of negotiations.

The Son Responsible for the Father.

ELKTON, Md., June 24.—A crowd of Italian workmen at Principis attacked, imprisoned and threatened to lynch John Wallace, Jr., son of John Wallace, a sub-contractor on the Baltimore & Philadelphia Railroad, who last Friday received $900 due the workmen and absconded, leaving his son in charge. Sheriff Smith with a posse left to rescue young Wallace.

Stevens' Big Trip.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 24.—Thomas Stevens, a bicyclist who started from San Francisco two months ago for a bicycle tour around the world, arrived here yesterday afternoon in good health and spirits. He will continue his trip to-morrow morning.

FRAIL FINANCES.

Embarrassment of C. J. Kershaw & Co., the Heavy Grain Operators of Milwaukee.

CHICAGO, June 24.—The Secretary of the Board of Trade announced on 'Change this morning that the firm of J. C. Kershaw & Co. had evened up all their trades and would settle all differences at their office. The firm has done a very heavy commission and export business and are reputed as having been on the "long" side of the market, principally in wheat and corn. The firm began paying all differences in full and claim they will be able to meet all demands. The house is a Milwaukee one, and it has constituted a factor in what has been known as the "Milwaukee crowd" in various heavy transactions in the past on the Chicago and Milwaukee Boards of Trade. The effect of the announcement and decline in stocks caused the price of wheat to decline nearly one cent.

Kershaw denies that he has failed. He claims his trades were in an unsatisfactory shape and he desired to close them. He says he will be able to meet all demands promptly. The markets are badly depressed by the effects of the Kershaw announcement and there are rumours of more trouble in New York.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Exchange is 483 to 484½ for long, and 484½ to 485 for short. Money is stringent at 20 to 15 per cent per annum.

General Palmer has resigned from the directory of the Rio Grande.

Huntington says: "The installments of the Morgan Railroad & Steamship Company purchased by him and associates, have been promptly met. The next payment will not mature until July when it will be paid in cash, as every other obligation for which he and associates are responsible."

Return of Ira D. Sankey.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Ira D. Sankey, the evangelist and fellow-worker of Mr. Moody, arrived here on the steamship Britannic, of the White Star Line, yesterday. He is looking hale and hearty, and as brown as a frontiersman. He was accompanied by his wife and two children. Several friends met Mr. Sankey at the pier and hearty greetings were exchanged. In conversation Mr. Sankey said: "I'm feeling a little worn out, but pretty well, as you can see. All I need is a few weeks' rest. We have had on an average three meetings a day for seven months. It was wearing on me. We did not go outside of London. Mr. Moody? O, he's well, but in need of rest. He will be here week after next, I think. We will begin work together here; but just where I cannot say. That will not be decided on until fall. My voice is just as good as ever it was, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. That much you may say for me emphatically."

Mr. Sankey will leave for his home in New Castle, Pa., Monday. His father, Mr. David Sankey, died during his absence in London, and he was called home at this time by matters connected with the estate.

A Serious Fire in the Oil Regions.

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 24.—The oil refinery of George Allen & Son was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire was caused by an explosion of gas in the boiler room and before assistance could be rendered the flames spread to adjoining buildings, which were speedily consumed. The loss is $15,000, on which there is a small insurance. The track of the New York, Pennsylvania Railroad for a distance of a hundred yards was destroyed and passengers between this and Oil City have to be transferred. Hugh Carr, superintendent of the refinery, barely escaped an awful death by being enveloped in the flames.

Perishing at the Post of Duty.

NEW YORK, June 23.—A disastrous fire occurred Sunday in the large wholesale backery establishment of A. D. Haseman, in Williamsburg. The wall of the burning structure fell into an alleyway where the firemen stood, and three were buried in the ruins. Their names are Henry Tyeck, George W. Haight and Stephen Allen. Allen was the first taken out. He was burned and mangled, but alive. The others were dead. The building was entirely destroyed. Loss $100,000. A stable in the rear of the building was also burned, with eight horses.

Fire at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, June 23.—A fire in the paper warehouse of Chatfield & Woods, No. 25 West Fourth Street, started in the cellar, burned the stock stored in the cellar, and caused the first floor to give away and dump its contents into the cellar, but was prevented from extending further. The loss, which is almost wholly on the stock, is $40,000; insurance $100,000. It is not known how the fire originated.

Shot by His Playmate.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 23.—About ten o'clock yesterday morning a serious shooting affray took place between two boys, at Martin's Ferry, just over the river. Joseph Rennard, a boy of eight, and a companion of ten named Graham, were playing, and getting into a scuffle, Graham took a revolver he had and shot Rennard in the left side, inflicting a wound which may prove fatal.

Imprisonment for Life.

CINCINNATI, June 24.—Emil Trumpeter, indicted for murder in the second degree some time ago, pleaded guilty and left to the Court to fix the grade of the crime. The Court heard testimony and yesterday announced in his judgment that it was murder in the second degree. This involves a penalty of imprisonment for life.

Five Prisoners Escape.

FARGO, Dakota, June 23.—Five prisoners escaped from the Clay County, Minn., jail Saturday night. They sprang upon the turnkey, gagged him and secured the keys and fled. They have not yet been captured, and are believed to have fled into Dakota.

Funeral of General McCandless.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 23.—The funeral of General McCandless Sunday afternoon was full of military honors. It was in charge of the Pennsylvania Reserve Volunteer Corps, and the services of burial were under Masonic conduct.

Death of S. F. Hopkins.

DETROIT, June 23.—Samuel F. Hopkins, of St. Clair, eldest brother of the late Mark Hopkins of San Francisco, Cal., died Sunday morning, aged eighty-one.

He Changed His Mind.

MONTREAL, June 24.—Walter Wilson, who left Montreal suddenly on February last on the evening of his wedding has returned. He intends to remain.

Extreme Tired Feeling.

A lady tells us "the first bottle has done my daughter a great deal of good her food does not distress her now, nor does she suffer from that extreme tired feeling which she did before taking Hood's Sarsaprilla." A second bottle effected a cure. No other preparation contains such a concentration of vitalizing, enriching, purifying and invigorating properties as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

CONSIGNMENT OF GOODS—ATTEMPTED FRAUD OF BUYER—REPLEVIN BY CONSIGNEE.

Wagons were made in Cincinnati and then sent to Michigan. The bill of lading to the purchaser was attached to the draft sent to the local bank for collection. The purchaser applied to the bank for leave to examine the wagons and then removed them to his store, where he undertook to sell them. The President of the bank attached the goods in the name of "makers, but it being shown that the wagons were done without authority, the suit was discontinued, the attachment dissolved and the property returned to the purchaser. The bank then paid the draft and brought an action of replevin, and upon that got judgment. The purchaser carried the case to the Supreme Court, where the judgment was affirmed. Judge Campbell, in the opinion, said: "The payment of the draft was not made upon behalf of the defendant, and we see no reason why the bank has not the same right now that it would have had if the draft had been cashed by it on receipt. It represented the debt on the payment of which the bank was authorized to deliver the property, and it was practically a bailee of the property to obtain the payment and hold it until paid. We think that whether it paid the makers of the draft in advance or no could not concern the defendant who could not lawfully hold the property sold against it or the manufacturers of the wagons. In our opinion the transaction is such as to give the bank all the rights the owners of the wagons had in them. Such dealings can not be subjected to any technical niceties but must be decided on common sense grounds."—West Michigan Savings Bank vs. Howard, Supreme Court of Michigan.

TRADE MARK—INJUNCTIONS—USE OF LIKE NAME.

Manufacturers of hair pins did business under the name of D. F. Tayler & Co., and the pins were well known and had a ready sale as "D. F. Tayler's Hair Pins," and as D. F. Tayler & Co.'s Hair Pins," and the device on the packages, which were made up in pins and yellow papers, were exclusively used by them. Other persons who also made hair pins, got the use of the name of one L. B. Taylor to put on their wrappers and printed on them "L. B. Taylor & Co." adding the words, "Bethlehem, Conn.," and using the same colored papers. In a suit brought for an injunction to restrain the latter the Supreme Court of Errors, of Connecticut, decided in favor of the plaintiffs. Judge Pardee, in the opinion, said: "Though the defendants adopted the label and device and used the colored papers in good faith, believing that they were not infringing plaintiffs's rights, yet an injunction must be granted. Purchasers who read the entire trade mark could not be misled, but it is a matter of common knowledge that many persons are in a greater or less degree careless and unwary in the matter of purchasing articles for their own use, still their patronage is not for that reason less profitable to the manufacturer, and when such persons have knowledge of the good qualities of the plaintiffs hair pins an desire to purchase them the law will not permit the defendants to mislead them. Now, the use of a like name, which was purchased solely for use in this connection, with the other adjuncts, are well calculated to deceive these careless and unwary purchasers, to the serious injury the plaintiff, and they should have the injunction they ask for."

SALE—WARRANTY OF THING SOLD.

A bought from B. two horses, and they died of Spanish fever, or Texas mange. He sued upon an alleged warranty that the horses were "all right, sound and free from disease," and he complained that they were infected with the disease of which they died when they were delivered to him. The defendant said that he had only expressed an opinion as to the health of the animals. The plaintiff was beaten, and he carried the judgment to the Supreme Court of Nebraska, where he was again defeated. The Chief Justice Lake, in the opinion, said: "In determining whether a warranty was intended to be given a decisive test is whether the vendor assumes to assert a fact of which the buyer is ignorant, or merely states an opinion or judgment upon a matter of which the vendor has no special knowledge and on which the buyer may be expected also to have an opinion, and to exercise his judgment. When the language of the warranty is such that it amounts unquestionably to a warranty, its legal effect can not be defeated by any secret intention of the seller, and where the evidence bears no doubt of the legal force of the representation the court may and should declare its effect, but should there be a doubt the jury must determine the meaning and effect of the words."

LIABILITY FOR INJURY.

L. & G. were the owners of 200 pieces of timber, which they caused their servant to pile on a vacant lot, in such a manner that the top of the pile fell off and killed the son of B., who, as administrator, brought suit and was awarded judgment in the lower courts. An appeal to the Kentucky Court of Appeals the lower court was reversed in the following opinion: "The owner of land may retain to himself the sole and exclusive use and occupation of it, but a due regard for the welfare and rights of others makes the owner liable for the negligent use of his property, whereby the person or property of another is injured."

LIFE INSURANCE—WARRANTY OF TITLE—FRAUD.

The implied warranty of a validity of title imputed to one who sells a note will not enable the assignee of a fraudulent life insurance policy to recover on such implied warranty when he himself has been a party to the fraud or cognizant of it.—Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

SURETYSHIP—DEFALCATION.

A surety can not be held bound by any failure of his principal after the discovery of his defalcation, unless he is informed of it.—Court of Appeals of Kentucky.

DIED.

LEBARON—At Tecumseh, Michigan, Wednesday, June 18, 1884, Hon. Sirrell C. LeBaron, aged 76 years.

Mr. LeBaron was born at Woodstock Vt., Jan. 25, 1808. He lived in his native state until he had passed his majority, and engaged at an early age in teaching. The 3d day of June, 1832, he was married to Miss Maria P. Tribon, of Woodstock, Vt., and started at once with his bride for the far west, the then territory of Mich. In a record of his journey he says, describing his ride from Monroe: "Adrian is a pleasant new settlement, 2 taverns, 2 stores and mills, constituting a village." "Tecumseh is a pleasant little village, contains 6 stores, 2 hotels and several mills, one extensive grist mill now building, county town of Lenawee Co. There seems to be considerable enterprise in the place." This pleasant village became his future home and he was identified with its future growth and progress. He was the second clerk of the county under the territorial government and the first one of the county under the state government, after Michigan had been admitted to the union. In 1840 he was chosen to a seat in the Legislature and the same year was appointed a county Judge.

On making their home in Tecumseh Mr. and Mrs. LeBaron connected themselves promptly with the Presbyterian church which had been organized four years previous to their arrival in 1828. He was made clerk of the society at the ensuing parish meeting and for 30 years continued to hold the position, which he resigned on account of ill health Jan., 1884. For 21 years he was teacher of a Bible class, until infirmities constrained him to relinquish that. Such was his connection with the church.

In the cause of education he was prominent and useful. The first grammar school of the county was taught by him from 1832—6. He was closely identified, as director with the High School, when it was connected with the state University and labored hard for its prosperity. Though not a thoroughly bred lawyer, he made himself familiar with the laws of his state and his opinions in legal matters were held in high regard. He was a man of fine commanding appearance, and of strong natural constitution. In disposition he was active and social, fond of wit and humor. Among his papers are found copies of addresses given in his youthful years, on religious moral, and social themes. He was an ardent, outspoken friend of temperance and of prohibition, even in those early days. He gives as a low estimate of the annual cost to the state at that time of the liquor traffic, the sum of $1,250,000.

Some 16 years ago, Mr. LeBaron, after exposure to a hot sun was affected by what seemed a sun stroke, which permanently impaired his health. For the past two and a half years he has been confined to the house. On Thursday, June 13, as he was trying to walk across the floor, his limbs gave way and he fell in spite of helping hands, and fractured the bone of his left thigh. He was borne to his bed and never moved from the position in which he was laid, until death came to his relief, and he sank like an infant, to his rest.

Thus has passed away another of the fathers who deserve so well to be honorably remembered on account of their valuable services and their excellent example. It would not be right thus to let their memory perish. Their sacrifices and their successes should be recorded and recalled. Happy will it be for us, if those now coming on the stage of action shall be as faithful in the discharge of their duties to family and society, state and church, as these, their fast departing fathers were.

OBITUARY

On Sunday June 1st, 1884, Mr John Skinner of Macon, aged eighty eight years buried his wife, Phebe. Mrs. Skinner was born in the state of New York, February 9th, 1804.—Early in life she yielded to the influence of religion and united with the Baptist church. In 1845 she came with her husband to Macon and they both joined the Baptist church at Mooreville and together partook of its communion for nearly forty years. Mr. and Mrs. Skinner were married in 1822 and walked the long walk of life together for a little more than sixty one years. On that quiet June Sabbath afternoon he laid her to rest in mother earth to be a companion of Prophets, Priests, and Kings, soon to lie down beside her. Standing around the coffin and looking upon the peaceful face of the dead, were the husband resting on his cane and bowed with the weight of years, daughters now passed by the meridian of life, sons in the full strength and vigor of manhood grandchildren full of hopeful vigors and great grandchildren in quiet playful innocence. The minister chose an apt selection from the forty ninth chapter of Genesis, "Then they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife, then they buried Isaac and Rebecca his wife, and then I buried Leah."

OBITUARY.

John S. Butterick departed this life on the 21st inst. aged 76 years. He was counted among the early settlers of Franklin, having lived in the township about 35 years. He was a man of very marked business energy, and whether building a house or cultivating his farm, was generally considered the equal of two average men in the visible accomplishments of his ordinary day's work. He had maintained a reputable religious character for a long time, having been an honored member of the Methodist church in this place during the last thirty years. Mr. Butterick came to the close of life with startling suddenness, for after he had passed through the regular routine of his daily business, and in apparent good health and vigor had borne to the house the usual evening product of his dairy, he was instantly prostrated with a powerful stroke of apoplexy on the 19th inst., and remaining perfectly speechless and entirely unconscious until the evening of the 21st. inst., when he quietly passed over to the tearless land where life is not as the hasty dream or as the fleeting shadow, but is a perfected, an enduring and a glorious reality. The funeral services were held at the late residence of the deceased on the 23d inst., and were conducted by the Pastor of the M. E. church, and numerously attended by the sympathizing community, after which the remains were tenderly laid to rest by gentle hands, while the falling tear drops of farewell betokened the severance of such affection and endearing ties as words fail to express, and tho' irreparable here, they are surely restorable in the life which is to come.

ESTATE OF SIRRELL C. LE BARON.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 23d day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

Present: Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Sirrell C. Le Baron, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Delos C. LeBaron, a son of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Edgar A. Lyon, the executor in said will named, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 21st day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

How Watch Cases are Made.

A plate of SOLID GOLD 14 2-10 karats fine is soldered on each side of a plate of hard nickel composition metal, and the three are then passed between polished steel rollers. From this plate the various parts of the cases—backs, centers, bezels, etc. are cut and shaped by dies and formers. The gold is thick enough to admit of all kinds of chasing, engraving, and engine-turning. The composition metal gives it needed strength, stiffness and solidity, while the written guarantee of the manufacturers warranting each case to wear twenty years proves that it contains all the gold that can possibly be needed. This guarantee is given from actual results, as many of these cases have been worn perfectly smooth by years of use without wearing through, the gold.

DUBUQUE, IA., Dec. 14, 1880.

"I have used one of your James Boss' Gold Watch Cases for seventeen years. I bought it second hand and know of its having been used before. I got it, but do not know how long. It looks good for ten years longer. Did not suspect it was a filled case until so informed by a jeweler a short time since. I most cheerfully recommend your cases to be all they are represented to be, and more.

Cover Your Heads!

One week ago we opened our new Hat and Cap Department, and although we felt sure of the support of the public in our new venture we were not prepared to see our sales for the week fully double our expectations. Everyone should see our celebrated $1 Hat, which is sold by other dealers at $1.50. This Hat we make our specialty. We purchase such large quantities to supply our different stores that we can well afford to sell them at $1, and still have a fair profit. Our $1.50 Stiff Hats in all the latest shapes, other dealers price $2. Our $2 and $2.50 Hats, from the best makers, and our $3, $3.50, $4 and upwards, are all fine imported English Stiff and Soft Hats. Every line we sell at 50 cents less than elsewhere in the city.

Confirmation Suits!

We are showing a Large Stock of Suits for boys to wear when taking their first communion. We are offering special bargains in Boys' Dark Suits in all prices. The assortment of styles and patterns is the most varied and extensive we have had for years. Intending purchasers will save themselves time and trouble by coming direct to our store, for they not only have the advantage of our large stock to select from, but will find our prices lower, our goods better made and trimmed, and our styles newer than you can find elsewhere.

JERSEY SUITS!

We have just received a large consignment of imported English Jersey Suits for boys and children. They are durable and stylish. Every mother is invited to call and inspect them.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

Say gone to sleep, if anybody asks after us.

The fall that preceeds 4th of July and harvest, beclouds business, and not even a bee buzzes, unless its the pet ones in bonnets.

Long sunny days have come, fraught with repose for all save the sick; and they might get a share if nurses could be induced to swing them in hammocks under the trees, and brighten dullness with a glimpse of green; instead of caging them in bed-rooms to study the everlasting array of bottles, cups and spoons. An invalid's imprisonment is worse than all the diseases ever christened. The half darkened room, selected because of its far off stillness, is too suggestive of being put away, to hold much invigoration. The doctor who prescribes out of door cure, and a robins whistle in place of rhubarb, is the fellow to vote for.

Doctor Palmer has returned from the west, but if the new schoolmaster has been commissioned, his name has not been told yet.

I believe it is expected this year's teachers will teach their pupils the effect of alcoholic stimulant on mental and physical organization. When the plan was first spoken of it seemed like adding the last feather to the weight of their responsibilities. It did not seem probable that children would learn readily, what parents fail to remember, and scientific names, that make physiology a bug bear to advanced students, must be a meaningless jumble to street arabs. One was caught however, and questioned. His ten years of experience was sampled by layers of smut on hands and face, but he answered promptly: Do you mean how it makes 'em do? Cussed, of course: There is no tinge of irreverence about him, you could not add many shades to those on hand, and he shows up most anywhere not wanted. His manners are in keeping with his language, but it is evident, object lessons learned in the home Kindergarten will not require much explanation regarding effects, and the task is but a name.

MACON MOLECULES.

Miss Addie Crittenden closes her school in the East district this week. The patrons of the district speak highly of her school.

Prof. David Howell and son Morris, of Lansing, visited in Macon last Sunday and Monday.

Sumner Collins came home last week to remain a few days.

"Lank" Smith has started a meat-market in Joe Sage's building. This is just what the "Corners" needed, and we wish him success.

"Al" Hendershott is now home from the University, looking as though the study of medicine agreed with him.

We understand that the Enumerator of Macon completed his work last week.

Children's day was observed at the M. E. church last Sunday. As this was the first time children's day was ever observed in Macon, considerable interest was attached to it. The church was handsomely decorated. The exercises consisted mostly of singing, and recitations by the children.

Rev. Mr. Kerridge delivered a lecture Sunday evening on "Sacred Music."

ONSTED ODDS.

Road work nearly all done and the farmers are busily engaged in making hay.

F. Parsons and men are at P. O. Maxwell's, finishing his barn.

Wilmer Knapp commenced working at carpenter work for J. Hand last Monday. This makes John's crew consist of eight men, and still he turns away many jobs.

Frank Jenkins and two assistants are here painting. They are working on Mr. Glen's new store, and Dr. Ross' house and barn.

The fence gang of the M. & O. R.R., which have been here for some time, leave to-day for Iowa. The remainder of the fence is to be built by the other gang, so this town will be the last to be finished.

The Good Templars' ice cream festival at Springville last Friday evening was well attended, and all seemed to enjoy themselves very much. J. H. Gibbs, of Onsted, furnished the ice cream for the occasion.

John Onsted has entered into a contract with the M. & O. R. R. Co., to construct and run a grain elevator at this place. It will be located nearly opposite the dépot, and is to be finished about the first of September. The side track will be extended across the road thus giving more room for cars.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Smith spent last Sabbath at Monroe.

The regular church official Board meeting takes place next week Monday evening. Business of importance needs attention.

Miss Mazey Kelly now takes her turn with the mumps.

Miss Luella Wilson returned to her home at Morenci last Friday. She promised her friends here a visit this fall.

Enoch French and Alfred Mosier were on deck Saturday. Enoch returned without seeing his dulcina while Alfred took his to Addison to spend the fourth.

Dr. D. W. Loree and some of his friends made the prairie farm a visit last week.

The ice cream lawn social last Friday evening was a success in every respect but the cream would have sold better but for the cool wave that was in attendance. Proceeds $10.

Some of the boys have taken a fishing excursion to the lakes this week.

The Union Club meeting at the Free Methodist church Tuesday evening was a good one for the cause. All the speakers announced to speak responded and were listened to with marked attention. The Club received quite an addition to its membership and much encouragement from many who acknowledge the movement to be in the right direction.

FLASHES BY C. T. LINE.

A. Derby had a raising yesterday, Wednesday.

F. C. Rector is building a new stock barn.

Haying is progressing finely and an excellent crop is being secured.

David Reed, of Franklin is moving his family to Holloway this week.

Susie Fisk, of Clinton, has a class in music in the Newburg neighborhood.

Milburn Keyser has purchased a Texas pony and has ordered a telegraph instrument, so if the pony can not disappear fast enough he can resort to electricity.

Not many from this section went to Adrian last Saturday to attend the ceremony of laying the corner stone to Lenawee's new court house. The farmers being too busy in their hay fields at present to attend.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Ray Blanchard, of Saginaw, is visiting in this village.

Thomas Roper has a new barber. This is the third one he has tried during the last three months and he hails from Jackson.

The band will hold a ten cent dance Friday afternoon and evening. Good music, good time. Everybody invited.

The Methodist social was held at the parsonage last Wednesday eve.

Dr. J. W. Burchard spent Tuesday in Detroit.

The committee claim that they have made a very good selection of fireworks for Friday evening.

D. Keyes was taken quite ill Sunday and has been unable to be on our streets as yet this week. We are glad to report, however, that he is improving.

Everyone should witness the grand parade Friday morning. Come early and stay all day.

Mrs. Chas. Fisk, is home with her mother, Mrs. Dorr, and will spend a few weeks here this summer.

Ed. Clark is clerking in his father's bank.

A Leap Year party from this town spent Tuesday at Wampler's lake. A good time is reported.

The double quartette that will assist in the exercises at the grove next Friday, will consist of, Mrs. E. VanDeMark, Miss Laura Clark, Miss Sadie, and Miss Nellie Kishpaugh, and Messrs Kerridge, E. VanDeMark, Smith and Field.

Mr. A. H. St. John drove over from Jonesville Wednesday afternoon and will spend the 4th., in this village.

The band have purchased the uniforms that they had here on trial last week. The suits were very reasonable in price and the boys were lucky in being able to secure such a bargain.

Rev. J. W. Payne started for Chicago last Tuesday and intends to remain in that city about a month.

Mrs. McMaster intends soon to remove her Milliner's stock across the street into the rooms recently occupied by Dr. Recoes.

Miss Ida Fullerton, assistant in our schools, will spend her summer vacation at her home in Ypsilanti.

Dr. Reeves has been visiting friends here the past few days.

The band boys have made arrangements to serve dinner the 4th inst., in D. H. Silver's building on the south side of Main street.

Dr. J. W. Burchard timed the Lake Shore train after it left Woodward Avenue Tuesday evening coming out of Detroit and says that one mile was made in 53 seconds.

McCOLLUMS MOTTOS.

15 reasons why McCollum sells clothing cheaper than other dealers:

1st. Because he adopted the "strictly cash" system in his business.

2d. He never misrepresents his goods.

3d. He avoids the expense of "clerks", by doing his work himself.

4th. He "sports" no horses, carriages, guns or dogs.

5th. He devotes his entire time to the management of his business.

6th. He meets his "bills" promptly at 100 cents on the dollar.

7th. He buys no more goods than his trade demands.

8th. He has no bogus "closing out" sales.

9th. He considers one man's money just as good as another's.

10th. He can be found at his place of business every day in the year.

11th. He buys the best goods in the market.

12th. He sells for one price, to all his customers alike.

13th. He has had eleven years experience in the clothing trade.

14th. He always keeps the latest and best styles.

15th. He sells honest goods, at honest prices, in an honest community, and receives an honest verdict from his customers in return.

Please give me a call. McCollum, Clothier, Clinton, Mich.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Children's day was observed at the M. E. church of Ridgeway, June 22d., 1884, with appropriate exercises. The floral decorations were elaborate and in most excellent taste; the rich profusion of flowers was so arranged and blended, as to combine order and harmony in such perfection that the most pleasing effect was produced. A number of beautiful pictures adorned the walls of the church, and twenty-four canaries added the glee of their sweet songs to the splendid music of the choir and congregation.

The morning exercises consisted of music and an address to the children by the Pastor, which was listened to with close attention and evident interest. In the evening the children came to the front and acquitted themselves admirably in executing a very excellent program, consisting of music, readings and recitations. Rev. Peter Sharp delivered a short appropriate and very interesting address, and was followed by the Supt., Dr. Loree, with a few very appropriate closing remarks. The success of the day exceeded all expectations, and was highly gratifying to all—specially so to those who worked so industriously to make the occasion one of pleasure and profit.

A delightful entertainment was enjoyed at the beautiful home of Mr. & Mrs. Robert Houseman in Ridgeway, on Friday evening June 27th ult. By invitation the Ladies' Church Social held an ice cream and lawn social there, which was largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The evening was beautiful and the accommodations ample and convenient. Mr. & Mrs. Houseman seemed intent on contributing to their utmost, to the pleasure of all present, and they succeeded to the satisfaction of all present.

Purify Your Feathers.

Double the bulk of your beads by getting them purified by the Cold Air Process, of which Messrs. Henry & Varson are the sole proprietors in this state. These gentlemen have lately come from Albion, where they purified over two thousand beds. They guarantee satisfaction in every particular, and the way the feather beds are moving back and forth is a positive guarantee that the people are more than pleased with their work. We are assured that by this process moths or insects of any kind cannot inhabit the feathers after they are purified by the above process, an advantage which is worth more than double what these gentlemen charge for the work.

John Conlin's new bore well at Franklin Center is both a curiosity and a convenience. It is 37 feet in depth from which a stream of clear cold water constantly flows. Mr. Conlin will soon build a good water trough at the well for the benefit of the traveling public. A drink of the water will be a treat for both man and beast on a hot day.

The L. S. & M. S. railroad will sell tickets to Chicago and return, to the Democratic National Convention, at one fare for round trip, tickets good going from July 3 to 8, inclusive, and returning not good after July 18.

Attend the Japanese Wedding at the Opera House this evening.

COMMUNICATION.

The Rev. C. E. Conley and the Saloonists once more and finally.

If you will kindly allow me space in your columns to reply to the Rev. Mr. Conley in last week's issue of HERALD, I will make a finality of this discussion. I dislike newspaper controversies and should have shrunk from it in the first place had not the editorials in the Baptist Items, by insinuation and accusation placed the council in a false light before the community. I stood it as long as my make-up would allow, then reluctantly came to the front, no one appearing to take it up. After receiving a courteous call from Mr. Conley, and making a full and candid statement of facts, I supposed from the apparent candor of the gentleman, that the matter would end with a retraction in his next paper of some of his former misstatements. But in this I was mistaken. He devotes a column to me, voluminous in words, sparse in ideas, and no retractions. Mr. Conley seems to be so permeated with the one idea, temperance, and that the whole curse and responsibility of the liquor traffic rests upon the liquor-seller, that he looses sight of everything else, and cannot grasp the idea of equal rights to all men, that one man's rights are just as sacred as another's, no matter what his position or business. Mr. Conley is a representative temperance man of the day. His error, and that of ultra temperance people generally, lies, in judging their fellow-man from their own stand point. To judge another justly we must place ourselves in that person's position. The reason Mr. Conley is a minister of the gospel and not a saloon keeper, is simply because his education and surroundings placed him in the pulpit. Reversed, George Keyser would be an evangelist and Mr. Conley a saloon-keeper. Had Mr. Conley been born and raised in Turkey he would have believed in the Koran and Mohammed, just as sincerely as he now believes in the Bible and Christ. Seeing then that we are wholly creatures of education and circumstances we should exercise the broadest charity. By nature we have nothing to boast over our brother, be his social position or business what it may. Consider if you were brought into the world under the same conditions as the man you judge, and followed up by the same chain of circumstances, your life and actions would be identicle with his.

I am charged with inconsistency, and made to stand on the lifeless form of a victim of a saloon, midst the heart-broken family, and asked if I would repeat, "my action was based on equal justice to all men, on the broad platform of humanitarianism."

I say emphatically yes. The saloon-keeper is only accessory to that crime. The Government is the murderer of that man. For revenue it has appointed that saloon-keeper, virtually, to perform that very act, and made it legal. Has a city council a right to say he shall not by refusing to accept his bond? I say no. Therefore, I claim to be consistent and that this case is not in point. Is Mr. Conley consistent? I think not. He preaches brotherly love, charity, forgiveness, and passes the saloon-keeper with unconcern and indifference, and suffers him to go down to hell uncared for. If you would meet him with an open hand and heart, you would win him over and your rejoicing would be of a more lasting nature than in his prosecution. As to rumors No. 1 and 2, He says he asked me if they were true, and that "I supposed they were." Now, Mr. Conley's memory must be exceedingly treacherous. I told him in language plain, that they were true, gave him the names of two saloons, the person seen coming out of the saloon, the name of my informant, and further more, that the two cases were reported by the Marshal to the council, and referred to the village attorney with recommendation to prosecute if a case could be made out, and there is where the matter now rests. Mr. E. B. Wood, doubtless, will give you any other information you may desire on the subject. Upon investigation I am of the opinion that the Common Council has no jurisdiction in the matter. It is made the duty of the Marshal to enter complaint before a Justice for the violation of the law. If a case can be made out of the complaint as I understand it, it would then have to be placed in the hands of the Prosecuting Attorney, for action. Any citizen may make complaint. Now as Mr. Conley would rejoice in a prosecution, it seems to me that he is just the man to watch the saloons and work up a case. I believe there is honor enough among the saloon-keepers of this place to respect public sentiment by strictly conforming to the law, in the future. If they will not, however, I will render all the aid in my power to compel them to do so.

MISUNDERSTOOD.

A Fable.

I hold it is a solemn truth which bears a lesson good,
"Tis better not to speak at all than be misunderstood.
In silence there may be a balm, in speech a sting
Perhaps a sin.
Therefore, 'tis best to silent be and always
Be a woman.
And lest you doubt the fact which I so darkly
Only decave,
Please call to mind the story of the Lamb kin
and the Bear.

A lamb kin sported gay and free, he was a
[illegible]
When in his pathway there appeared a Bear morose and grim
"Good lay," quoth Brum, with a grin, "how [illegible]
The Lam kin trembled with affright, and only answered "Ba a."
"And so you dare say 'Bah' to me?" the monster
here [illegible]
"I'll eat you up" and so he did, and thus the Lamb kin died.

So, I hold it is a solemn truth which bears a lesson good,
"Tis better not to speak at all than be misunderstood.

WHY HER HAIR TURNED GRAY.

"I could an' if I would," said John, "tell you why that young woman's hair turned from brown to white in a single night."

Our eyes followed the slender retreating form of a young woman as he spoke.

"Her lover was drowned?" asked Louise.

"A rain fever," said Robert, as he lighted his cigar.

"She saw a ghost" whispered I.

"Wrong, all of you. Do you want to hear a strange bit of truth?"

Of course we did, so John began:

"It was in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that there once lived a man—the man who married our heroine. He was tall and lithe and strong and handsome, and she was young and dark and beautiful and gay—for Massachusetts. The tall man wooed and won her, and married her, all within six short months. They nestled down in a farm-house and lived in down east fashion—and baked beans and brown bread on Saturdays or Sundays—which is it?"

"Baked beans on Saturday night and brown bread on Sunday morning," said Louise, with decision.

Yes, and a little talk of Faneuil Hall and Wendell Phillips now and again, an occasional quotation from Emerson, a semi-occasional allusion to Margaret Fuller, daily thoughts of the cousins on Beacon street, etc., etc. These slight occupations, and their great love for each other which was indeed boundless, filled much of their time. There were, to be sure, other business moments when Alicia had I said that her name was Alicia made the cakes, for they lived very simply in the country, and when Nathan was away on his work of collecting, for he combined the duties of County Collector with his legal work in the nearest village, some mile or two away.

It was a very pretty sight to see those two at tea. Alicia wore a blue gown that Nathan much admired, and poured the tea from an old pot brought back by a Salem ancestor from China. The caddy was its mate, that came with it, and Alicia lifted its cover tenderly to reach the mysterious weird dried-leaves that her fairy touch and the warm flame were to transform into a potent charm. On these nights—for it was late in the winter—there would be a fire burning on the hearth, the kitten would purr in the pauses, and Hetty, the girl, as maid servants are called in New England villages, could be heard through the wide chinks of the kitchen door, taking the upper C, with the freedom and ease of a prima donna. Alicia would smile quickly as she heard her, and Nathan would smile more slowly. So, with the sipping of tea and the crackling of toast, the evening meal would progress. Afterward, Nathan's pipe and Alicia's knitting gray stockings always filled up the evening. At nine o'clock a glass of cider and red apples; at 9:30 lights out, and only an old-fashioned dark house loomed against the night. A monotonous life, but a happy one, and happier as time went one. But at last time seemed to stop for Alicia. Nathan was called away on business: would be gone a week, he said. Alicia need not be afraid with Hetty. There was really no danger, if she would be careful in one particular. No stranger was to be admitted into the house on any pretext whatever. Here Nathan whispered: "For my strong box is under the bed in our room, you know, full of county money. I am in the midst of collecting now. Leave the box there. It is safe, but promise that no one shall come in, and now, dearest, I must say good-by." But we draw the veil.

Imagine—or remember a lovers' parting. In these two were lovers only three months wedded, kisses, a tear or two, words, kisses again. Ah, well, the description is like the tea-leaves, stupid, dry, until the fire of love and the fairy touch of affection metamorphose the story of a parting into real separation.

After Nathan was gone Alicia sighed and read poetry, and sang a little to herself, and so the first two days slipped by. On the third day there came up a bad storm, one of those early spring storms, with thunder and hail and other elemental disturbances attached.

In the midst then of this appropriate tragedy music, there tottered to Alicia's door an old man. One arm hung helpless, his limbs trembled he seemed very harmless and weak. But Alicia remembered her husband's words. She gave him the shelter he begged for, in the barn only, although her gentle heart smote her. This was at four in the afternoon. At eight in the evening the storm having settled down upon the lonely land, the lonely farm-house, and the two lonely women, the old man appeared again at the kitchen door. He was old and chilled and hungry. Alicia's heart smote her so hard this time that she opened the door. She bade the old man enter. She gave him food. She sent him up the ladder to the attic for, in spite of the cousins in Beacon street, this was the simple "lift" in the country house, and then she and Hetty took away the ladder in pride and security. The old man was safe, thank Heaven, and so were she and Hetty and the money-box.

But the thought of the money-box worried her. She looked under the bed to see if it were all right. There is something in the mere act of looking under the bed that is disorganizing to the feminine mind. After Alicia had looked, she began to feel a trifle timorous. She went out and listened at the ladder-hole. The old man snored. That sound should certainly have encouraged her, but it didn't.

The combination of a snoring man in the house, a stranger, even, though maimed and halt, and a money-box under the bed, of all places, and a storm raging, and alack and alas! a broken promise to one's husband! this combination was very disagreeable.

Moved by an irresistable impulse, Alicia took from a drawer a pistol belonging to her husband. She had found it accidentally but a few days before in an old trunk of his filled with lachelor belonging. She was glad now that she had moved it down from the attic where the old trunk stood in one corner and the old man snored in another. The sight of the pistol did not perhaps restore her courage, as she had hoped it would, for she put it back with a shudder, threw a hasty glance around the rooms, and with a shrug at her own fears went to the window, pulled up the shade, and looked out. The moon was struggling through the clouds; the long line of roads leading past the house up to a distant hill shone out white from between the dark fences on either side. Up on the hill, a quarter of a mile distant, there was a moving spot—some belated neighbor on his way home to the village probably. Alicia felt comforted. She wondered, idly, who it might be. 'Squire Roberts, perhaps, coming from Widow Hobart's. There was little doubt that that would be a match, though how a widow could ever remarry! She shuddered, then thought of Nathan, and smiled.

Alicia stood at the window to watch the neighbor pass. She had taken down her hair, and it fell in a long braid down her back. She looked very young and girlish, and as she stood she hummed to herself, partly by way of keeping up her rising courage, I dare say—the quaint words of the old Scotch English, and which Nathan, being Scotch himself, was fond of:

He came to his bedside in a shake,
And he found his dame on the floor,
With A kiss for evermore, my love,
Adieu for evermore.

By the way, the spot on the hill-side was growing nearer and clearer. It was not 'Squire Roberts, after all, but men on horse-back—three of them. The woman's country curiosity was piqued. Equestrians on a Massachusetts highway at nine p. m. were an unusual a sight as hobgoblins. As the riders came nearer she saw they were muffled in long black cloaks. A straggling moonbeam strikes across their faces. Great Heavens! They were masked.

For a second there was a wild confusion in Alicia's mind. The money-box, the lonely house! These men had come to rob the county in her husband's absence. Could she resist them? Ah!

Adieu for evermore, my love,
Adieu for evermore.

But then her thoughts grew calmer, she watched the men turn in at the gate. They did not speak or look to right or left. They rode in; they dismounted.

Alicia flew, first for Hetty, and then both of them—women do the last—for the one man within reach. It was all the work of a moment. Down came the old-fashioned bit of male humanity. To him appeals the young, live woman. His brain seemed alive at least. He grasps the situation. Daring thieves knowing of the husband's absence have come for the strong box full of county money. There are three of them.

Says the old man: "Have you a pistol?"

"Yes," replies Alicia.

"Give it to me. Is that the box under your bed?"

"Yes," replies Alicia again.

"All this time the men have beat on the door, but no word has been spoken by them.

"You must trust me," says the old man.

"Yes," replies Alicia bravely. It is all she can do, even though he should play her false.

"Light a candle and bring me the cartridges. I will keep them and reload your pistol if necessary. Stand here at the top of the stairs, so. I am just behind you. Blow out you candle. Soon they will speak and ask to be let in. You must not reply. They will beat in the door. They will break it open. There will be one man who will dart ahead up the stairs—the ringleader, you know. Wait until this man is within three steps of you. Wait until I say 'Fire,' then pull the trigger. That man will fall. The others will run off—that is, they may. It is our only chance. Do you understand it?"

"Yes," replies Alicia again, in a clear, firm tone. All fear has vanished. She is calm and quiet now.

The robbers were beating at the door. The old man was crouched behind her. Hetty in the background moaning out her "Holy Joseph's" and "Blessed Mary's." Alicia erect at the head of the stairs with her husband's pistol in her hand. Ah, her husband! Her heart beat at that thought. Should she ever see him again?

Adieu for evermore, my love,
Adieu for evermore.

The strain was over at last. All went as the old man had prophesied. The door burst open. Up the stairs came a strong man's tread, close up to within three steps of her. Must she shoot? Must she kill? Yes, for her husband's sake.

"Fire," said the old man, in a whisper. Alicia fired. The strong man fell with a groan to the floor below. There was a rush for the door. The others had fled. Through the silence Alicia heard the sound of horses' hoofs on the highway. They were gone. She was saved: so was the money-box. But below in the hall lay that silent, heavy form, no sound after the first moan. "Blessed Mary!" Hetty's voice broke the ghastly stillness again.

"You have killed him," said the old man. "Light your candle and go down and see who he is."

Alicia lighted the candle, and holding it over her head walked firmly down the stairs her black hair, loosened now, fell about her like a mourning veil. As she walked she kept her eyes fixed on the corner of the hall at the foot of the staircase, where the silent figure lay on its back, its hands outstretched under a picture on the wall, a picture of the Christ on the cross. It flashed through the woman's mind then that at least this villain died at His feet.

"Blessed Mary!" began Hetty again.

"Lift the mask," called the old man's voice.

Alicia lifted the mask from the face of the dead man, and saw her husband!

"My God!" said Robert, and threw away his cigar. "The husband! That is a story worth hearing."

John continued: "She did not even faint, poor girl. She sat there by his side on the floor all night without a tear, with her eyes on his face and the sorrowful Christ on the cross above them. But when the neighbors came in with the morning light her hair fell about her ashen face in a white veil, as you see it to-day."

"But how?" asked Louise.

"He had come to rob the county of its money," said John, calmly, lighting his cigar with Robert's stub; "that's all."

"And the old man wasn't a rascal in league with the husband, then?"

"No, no: a worthy tramp. Of course, you thought he was to be a villain," said I explaining.

"And John, afterward?"

"No anti-climax," said John. "Look at her hair and her eyes, and her heart-[illegible] smile, and remember her

An Idyl of Hate.

"That horrid Mrs. Sawyer!" said Mrs. Jones, the other day. "I wish she would move out of the neighborhood."

"Well, what do you run there all the time for? I told you how it would be," retorted Mr. Jones.

This was not the kind of sympathy Mrs. Jones expected, and she became ominously silent.

"What has she said about you now?" inquired Jones.

"Oh, it's nothing about me," said Mrs. Jones indifferently.

"Who is it about?" asked Jones with evident anxiety.

"It's about you," resumed Mrs. J. "She says you're no more fit to run for office than a brindle cat, and if Sawyer votes for you she'd never speak to him again; she says—"

"Never mind," said Jones loftily. "I'm not the least interested in anything a feeble-minded, gossipy woman says."

But the flat-iron had struck home, and Jones left the table with a look on his face that boded no good.

It was hasting day at the Sawyers. If there was anything Mrs. Sawyer prided herself upon, it was the tender, flaky quality of her pastie. Jones knew this.

Mrs. Sawyer was just rolling that tender pie-paste into great sheets of transparent dough, when there came a knock at the door. Mrs. Sawyer answered it, rolling pin in hand. It was Willie Jones who had knocked.

"Please, Mrs. Sawyer," said the innocent child, "pa would like a piece of your pie-crust."

"Certainly, Willie," said Mrs. Sawyer, much flattered, "but it isn't baked yet."

"He doesn't want it baked."

"But he can't eat raw pie-crust."

"He isn't going to eat it."

"Then what is he going to do with it?"

"He said he wanted to mend the harness, an' make hinges on the barn door with it, and—"

The rolling-pin hung fire, and the boy escaped, but the barrier between the houses of Jones and Sawyer can never be broken. It is tougher than the pie-crust.—Detroit Free Press.

Progress in North Carolina.

That there has been considerable progress in North Carolina is beyond question. Prior to the war no money crops were planted in the southern part of the State, except a few ground-peas and a little rice in New Hanover, and some cotton in Anson. There was some cotton grown in Edgecombe. Heavy black tobacco was cultivated in Warren and in half a dozen counties to the westward. These were all the "money" crops. Now rice is grown in the northeast. Cotton is cultivated from Catawba along the South Carolina line and up to Halifax, covering one half of the State. Tobacco is grown in nearly all the rest of the State. The mines of the west are greatly developed. Our money crops are worth fully ten times what they were before the war. And yet we accumulate no wealth.

Farming is hardly more profitable than it was before the change. One of the reasons is to be found in the high rate of interest which the farmers pay on their advances. To correct this evil the farmers ought to make their own supplies, buy no provisions, live on the products of their farms, and have the proceeds of their cotton and tobacco crops as their surplus. If they will do this, they will lay up money. Until they make such change they will be poor. They can not be prosperous while paying heavy interest. The question—does farming pay—has been intelligently discussed all over the country, and the answer is invariably the same, it does pay more certainly than any other business if one is prudent and does not permit his substance to go for interest. Government bonds bearing three per cent. are above par; but the farmers pay fifteen to twenty-five per cent. when they buy on credit, and give a lien on their crop. To be sure, under these circumstances they are only working that others may reap the fruits of their toil.—Raleigh (N. C.) News.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Imitation always follows a successful article, and imitation is one of the best proofs of real honest merit, and thus it is that the James Boss Gold Watch Case has its imitators. Buyers can always tell the genuine by the trade-mark of a crown, from which is suspended a pair of scales. Be sure BOTH crown and scales are stamped on the cap of the watch case. Jewelers are very cautious about endorsing an article unless they not only know that it is good, but that the character of the manufacturers is such that the quality of the goods will be kept up to standard.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA., Feb. 13, 1883.

The James Boss Gold Watch Cases go like hot cakes. Everyone I sell sells another. Don't need to recommend them; they sell themselves. One of my customers has had a James Boss Gold Watch Case in use for 20 years, and it is as good as ever. With this case I do not hesitate to give my own guarantee, especially with the new and improved cases, which seem to be everlasting. JESSE T. LITTLE, Jeweler.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J., Jan. 9, 1883.

This gold case, No. 6066, known as the James Boss Gold Watch Case, came into my possession about 1858, has been in use since that time, and is still in good condition. The movement is the one which was in the case when I bought it, and its condition shows that the case has really outworn the movement, which is played out. MARTIN A. HOWELL, that HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the field of its usefulness is quite an extended one, and we are warranted in recommending it for all derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

WE DO NOT CLAIM

Why Suffer with Salt-Rheum?

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.—

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt-Rheum on my limbs, for a dozen years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack open, bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (in the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured. I used one box of Hood's Olive Ointment, to relieve the itching. Hoping many others may learn the value of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I am,

Very truly yours,

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Gathered from All Quarters.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE, June 25.—Consideration of the Legislative Appropriation bill was resumed. After debate the amendment proposed by the senate committee striking out the clause consolidating the customs collection districts was agreed to. Without further action on the bill the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE.—A bill was passed authorizing the establishment of a branch of the Soldiers' Home in Arkansas, Colorado, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, or Nebraska; the location will be determined by the Board of Managers of the Soldiers' Home. The Hewitt Committee on Ways and Means reported a bill to modify the existing laws relating to the duties on imports and collection of revenue; referred to Committee of the Whole. The Chalmers-Manning contested election case was taken up, and the majority resolution declaring Chalmers entitled to a seat as Representative from the Second District of Mississippi, was adopted without division. Mr. Chalmers then appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office. Adjourned.

SENATE, June 26.—The bill extending to water transportation routes the provisions heretofore extended to land routes only, regarding the immediate transportation of dutiable goods, was passed. The Legislative bill was proceeded with, and the amendment proposed by the Senate Appropriation Committee to strike out the House clause permitting distilleries mashing ten bushels or less of grain per day to run without storekeepers, was agreed to. An amendment was also adopted providing that reports in the Congressional Record shall be an accurate transcript of proceedings and debates in the two Houses of Congress, and that no speech shall be published therein which was not spoken in the Senate or in the House. The bill was then passed. The River and Harbor bill was reported from the Committee on Conference, and ordered printed and recommitted to the Committee. The Senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE.—Mr. Bingham, from the Committee on Postoffices and Post roads, reported a bill fixing at two cents per ounce or fraction thereof a rate of postage on mail matter of the first-class; placed on calendar. The bill to forfeit the land grant of the "Backbone" Railroad of Louisiana was taken up. A vote on its passage resulted—yeas 77, nays 121. Pending a motion to reconsider the vote the House adjourned.

SENATE, June 27.—Mr. Mitchell introduced a bill to incorporate the National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic; referred. A bill was passed granting the right of way through the Indian Territory to the Southern Kansas Railway. The unfinished business was then laid before the Senate, being the bill providing for the forfeiture of the unearned lands granted the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad Company. A long debate ensued pending which the Senate went into executive session and adjourned.

HOUSE.—The conference reports on the Pension bill and the bill granting the right of way through the Indian Territory to the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe Railroad, were agreed to. Mr. Forney submitted the conference report on the Army Appropriation bill. The report announces agreement upon all the items except upon the Senate amendment striking out that portion of the bill which regulates the compensation to subsidized railways or army transportation. The report was agreed to; the disagreement to the amendment indicated was insisted upon and conferees were appointed. The "Backbone" forfeiture bill was taken up, the question being upon a motion to table the motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was defeated yesterday. The motion to table was agreed to—yeas 124, nays 114; so the bill was lost. Bills were passed: To relieve certain soldiers from the charge of desertion; for the relief of Myra Clark Gaines. At the evening session a number of pension bills were discussed, but without action. The House adjourned.

SENATE, June 28.—The General Deficiency bill was taken up, and an item of $3,500 was added to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to reimburse the amount paid for expenses of the commission appointed to go to Louisiana in 1877; an item was also added authorizing the Attorney General to pay Charles H. Reed for services as counsel for the late Charles J. Guiteau, such sum as he may deem just, not to exceed $3,000. The bill was then passed. The House bill was reported favorably upon granting a pension to the widow of General J. Steedman; placed on calendar. A message was received from the President transmitting a communication from the Secretary of the Interior calling attention to the omission of an appropriation for the Bureau of Labor. The River and Harbor bill was taken up, but without action the Senate went into executive session and soon adjourned.

HOUSE.—The Senate amendments to the Legislative bill were non-concurred in. Majority and minority reports on the Fortification Appropriation bill were submitted from the Committee on Appropriations, and referred to the Committee of the Whole. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the business reported from the Committee on Labor. The first bill considered was one providing an adjustment of the accounts of Government laborers, workmen and mechanics, arising under the eight hour law. After a long debate without reaching a conclusion on the bill, the committee rose and the House adjourned.

WASHINGTON.

CONSIDERATION of the Fortification bill has been completed by the House Committee on Appropriations, and it will be reported to the House at the first opportunity as agreed upon by the majority of the committee. The bill appropriates $3,070,000. Members of the House Committee are of the opinion that the bills now in conference will be ready for final action by July 3 or 5, and that the House will be able to adjourn on the 7th at the latest.

FOLLOWING are the original numbers embraced in the call for $10,000,000 bonds issued by the Secretary of the Treasury on the 26th ult.: Fifty dollars, No. 315 to No. 444, both inclusive; $100, No. 2,363 to No. 2,795, both inclusive, and No. 9,484 to 9,513, both inclusive; $500, No. 1,151 to No. 3,388, both inclusive, and No. 3,904 to No. 4,008, both inclusive; $1,000, No. 11,089 to No. 12,374, both inclusive, and No. 22,813 to No. 22,857, both inclusive; $10,000, No. 20,302 to No. 21,179, both inclusive. Total, $10,000,000.

THE President has approved the acts granting letter carriers leave of absence and establishing a Labor Bureau.

THE Postoffice Department has been informed by the Italian Government that in view of the outbreak of Asiatic cholera in France mails from this country intended for delivery in Italy must be enclosed in tarred sacks. This precaution is regarded as necessary because the Italian mails from this country pass through England and France. The postmaster at New York has been instructed accordingly.

THE imports for the fiscal year ended June 30 includes over 2,000,000,000 pounds of sugar, about 5,000,000,000 pounds of coffee, and over 150,000,000 eggs. The sugar manufactured here amounted to about 250,000,000 pounds.

THE Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that he will redeem prior to maturity the bonds embraced in the one hundred and twenty-ninth call to an amount not exceeding $1,000,000 per week, paying interest to the date of presentation.

THE Washington monument is now four hundred and seventy feet high. There is one more shift in the iron work to be made, and it will require about a month to complete the work the height of five hundred feet. The work of roofing in will then begin.

THE President appointed E. C. Ferguson Commissioner to represent the Territory of Washington at the New Orleans Centennial Exposition, with A. P. Sharpstein as alternate.

THE vacancy in the Adjutant General's Department caused by the death of Colonel Platts will be filled by the appointment to that position of Assistant Adjutant General Captain Thomas Ward, First Artillery.

THE EAST.

AT a meeting of the Independent Republican Committee at New York on the 25th, Carl Schurz presiding, an executive committee was appointed consisting of Carl Schurz, Horace E. Deming and E. H. Doty, to be increased by two other members, whose duty it shall be to prepare a document addressed to the Republican voters throughout the country, setting forth the reasons why they should not vote for Blaine and Logan. A circular previously issued has been widely distributed.

HORNBECK & Co.'s planing mill, at Greenfield, Pa., was struck by lightning on the 25th and entirely consumed. Loss $80,000.

W. H. JESSUP, assignee of W. H. Cooper, the banker of Montrose, Pa., recently shot by Joe Drinker, reports the assets of the bank to be $235,000; liabilities $400,000.

A SUIT has been begun in the New York Superior Court against James B. Keene for $250,000 on some of his privileges held by W. E. Scoville.

DURING a storm on the 27th ult. nine Italian laborers attempted to cross Carson's Inlet, New Jersey, when the boat was upset and six were drowned.

AN explosion of gas in the Rankin Coal Mine, near Monongahela City, Pa., on the 26th, fatally injured John Pepkie and badly burned Duncan McPherson.

THE four-mile race between Harvard and Yale at New London, Conn., on the 26th, was won by the latter.

YALE has conferred the degree of LL. D. upon Governor Hoadly, of Ohio, and Ellis H. Roberts, editor of the Utica Herald.

AT Bethlehem, Pa., on the 27th ult. a hundred-yard foot race between Fred Rodgers, of Trenton, and Harry Wheatley, of Canada, for $1,000 a side was won by Rodgers in 9⅞ seconds.

THE property of the Penn Bank at Pittsburgh has been appraised at about $150,000, and the liabilities are $1,500,000.

THE Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers announce that a National convention will be held at Pittsburgh, August 5. Delegates will be present from all parts of the country where lodges of the association exists.

H. H. BANGS, doing business as the Bay State Casket Company, at Boston, Mass., failed on the 27th ult. Liabilities, $400,000.

A CONFERENCE of colored Democrats, representing the different States, was held in New York on the 27th ult and delegates appointed to the National Democratic Convention at Chicago to endeavor to secure representation for the colored Democratic voters of the country.

E. K. HYNDMAN, for many years a prominent railroad man in Pennsylvania, died at Pittsburgh on the 27th ult. of consumption.

FOR the seven days ended June 27, business failures reported were: In the United States 171, Canada 28, total 199; against a total of 205 last week—a decrease of six.

STATEMENT of the New York associated banks for the week ended June 28: Loans increase, $397,800; specie increase, $469,300; legal tenders decrease, $2,700; deposits increase, $5,460,200; circulation decrease, $14,900; reserve increase, $3,101,550. The banks held $13,119,000 in excess of legal requirements.

O. C. BARROWS, a prominent citizen of Bristol, R. I., and book-keeper of the National Rubber Company, has admitted a defalcation of $5,000. He has been in the employ of the company twenty years.

THE depression in the coke trade and the restriction of the output is seriously affecting the miners and coke drawers in the vicinity of Connellsville, Pa., and Hungarians are rapidly returning to their native country. From twenty to forty of these people leave Connellsville every day for Europe.

WEST AND SOUTH.

NEARLY six thousand applications for press seats at the National Democratic Convention have already been received, only a small proportion of which can be accommodated with desk privileges. Full and complete accommodations for reporting the proceedings will be given the United Press Association.

THE Supreme Court of Ohio have affirmed judgment of the lower court for $4,000 damages against the city of Steubenville in favor of George Metlill, injured several years ago.

NEVIL STEVENS, the river pirate and desperado, who was confined in jail at Leredo, Wayne County, W. Va., and whose companions stormed the jail in hopes of rescuing him, escaped on the night of the 27th ult. His wife had smuggled a small saw into his possession, with which he cut his way out.

ON the 29th ult. the Midland Virginia morning express train ran at great speed upon the bridge over the James River near Lynchburg, Va. The corner of the smoking car struck the upright girders, throwing it from the track, and the Washington and New York sleepers plunged through the bridge into ten feet of water. About forty passengers were in the sleepers, but all were saved. Most of them were taken out through holes cut in the ventilators in the top of the cars. Conductor King was thrown into the river and had two ribs broken, but he swam to the cars and helped the passengers through the windows.

Two horse-thieves named Ed Owens and Si Nickerson, stole eight horses from the Benton & Billings Stage Company at Rock Springs Station, M. T., a few days ago. They were pursued and overtaken by fifteen cowboys and during the fight which ensued Nickerson was shot dead. Owens was captured and hung. Two of the cowboys were wounded.

THE glass works throughout the West shut down on the 28th ult. for their usual two months' vacation. They employ 8,000 men.

THE distillery of Fairbanks & Duenwig at Terre Haute, Ind., burned on the 27th ult. The machinery and 15,000 gallons of liquor in the still and tanks were destroyed. Loss $100,000; insured in fifty-two companies for $65,000.

BY the shutting down of the works of the Illinois Watch Company at Springfield on the 28th ult. one thousand persons are thrown out of employment. The works are to resume September 1. Two reasons are given for the suspension—over-production and the necessity of making some repairs and additions to the machinery.

WHILE a man named Daniels was digging a well at Auburn, Geauga County, O., on the 28th ult. at a depth of forty feet the earth caved in upon him burying him alive.

LEWIS MURPHY, Marshal of Huntsville, O., and his wife, were buggy riding behind a vicious Texas pony in that village on the 29th ult. when the animal ran away. Murphy, who is a cripple, was first thrown out receiving injuries which will prove fatal. The horse dashed on until a heavy gravel wagon was struck, when Mrs. Murphy was thrown to the ground alighting on her head. Her neck was broken and death was instantaneous.

THE residence of the Mayor of Danville, Ill., was entered by burglars on the 28th ult., who stole $500 in money and considerable jewelry.

FOREIGN.

THE Franchise bill passed its first reading in the English House of Lords on the 27th ult.

TWENTY-FIVE deaths from yellow fever were reported at Havana during the week ended June 29.

A MOB attacked the Protestant Mission, at Celaca, Mexico, on the Central Railroad on the 28th ult. and destroyed the furniture and effects. Rev. A. W. Greenman and others escaped to neighboring houses. They were pursued, fired on, and returning the fire, killed one and wounded several of the mob, which then dispersed. The mission party was then protected by Federal soldiers. It is said the Mayor of Celaca encouraged the attack and refused protection.

THE various trade organizations of Toulon have petitioned the Minister of Commerce to extend the dates of acceptance of bills, owing to the general collapse of the local trade caused by cholera.

MORRISON, the telegraph operatory who swindled the Traders' National Bank of San Antonio, Tex., out of $2,200, has been arrested at Monterey, Mexico. His extradition has been referred to the authorities at Washington. The bank has recovered the money.

THE lacrosse match between the Toronto and Shamrock clubs, of Montreal, Canada, on the 28th ult. for the championship of the world, was won by the Toronto, who took the first, third and fourth games.

ADVICES of the 26th ult. received at Paris from Honoi state that the fighting near Langson between the Chinese garrison and the French forces continued two days. Ten Frenchmen were killed and thirty-three wounded. The Chinese Generals Vuon-Gly and No-Ny have 10,000 regulars between Bak Le and Langson. It is reported at Paris that Admiral Courbet has been instructed to demand a public apology of China, as well as indemnity, for the violation of the treaty by the Chinese at Langson, and in case China refuses to grant this a French fleet will bombard Chinese cities.

ALL vessels arriving at Trieste, Austria, from Mediterranean ports are placed in quarantine ten days if the crews are in a healthy condition, and for twenty days if there is any suspicion of sickness aboard.

THE election in Portugal on the 28th ult. for the Chamber of Deputies resulted in a large majority for the Government. The opposition gained thirty-five seats.

LATER NEWS.

AT Brier Hill, near Youngstown, O., on the night of the 29th ult. four children of Mrs. Ann Murphy retired to bed about nine o'clock. About eleven o'clock smoke and flames were seen issuing from their bed-room windows. Neighbors came to the rescue and put out the fire, but not before three of the children, boys, aged five, eight and nine respectively were burned so that they died within an hour. The fourth child, the oldest, jumped from a window and escaped with a few slight burns. The origin of the fire is unknown.

AT the conference of colored Democrats, representing several States, held at New York on the 28th ult., Isaac H. Hunter of New York, Daniel Davis of Connecticut, and James Winnie of Virginia, were chosen delegates to the Democratic Convention at Chicago to represent the colored Democratic voters of the Union.

TEN THOUSAND miners in Staffordshire, Eng., have struck against a reduction.

THE decrease of the public debt for June was about 19,000,000. The reduction for the fiscal year, ended June 30, is about $101,000,000. The reduction for the last fiscal year was $137,823,252.

THE coinage executed at the United States Mint in Philadelphia during June aggregated $1,771,455, including 1,140,000 silver dollars, 200 half dollars, 200 quarter dollars, and 250,200 dimes.

MR. SLATER presented in the Senate on the 30th ult. a majority report of the Committee on Public Lands in favor of the bill to forfeit the unearned lands of the Northern Pacific Railroad. Mr. Morgan, from the same committee reported favorably the bill forfeiting the lands granted certain States to aid in the construction of railroads; he also reported adversely from the same committee the bill granting 320 acres of land to each of the survivors of the Mountain Meadow massacre; placed on calendar. The House bill limiting the time within which prosecutions may be instituted against persons charged with violating the Internal Revenue laws to two years, was amended by extending the time to three years, and the bill passed. Consideration of the River and Harbor bill was resumed, and pending debate the Senate adjourned. In the House, Mr. King of Louisiana introduced a bill appropriating $200,000 to be expended by the National Board of Health in preventing the introduction of Asiatic cholera. The conference report on the Indian Appropriation bill appropriates $6,859,402. The House provision for the abolition of the office of inspector and a detail of five army officers to act as inspectors, was stricken out. The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Fortification bill. After debate, without action the committee rose and the conference report on the bill to provide for the disposition of abandoned and useless military reservations was agreed to. Adjourned.

ESTATE OF SIRRELL C. LE BARON.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 23d day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

Present: Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Sirrell C. Le Baron, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Delos C. Le Baron, a son of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Edgar A. Fitting, the executor in said will named, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the first day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ALUMNI REUNION.

THE ANNUAL SESSION OF THE HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI SOCIETY HELD AT THE LILLEY HOUSE.

A Full Programme of Music and Literary Exercises Followed by Supper and Toasts.

The executive committee of the Alumni Society adopted a new method this year. The exercises were held in the evening and at the Lilley House, the spacious dining room being set apart for the ceremonies. The literary part of the program was of superior merit, all the appointees being "on time". The essay, history and poem are herewith printed in full, and need no word of commendation from us. The oration was equally good and nothing but Mr. Mc Kinnon's modesty prevents the publication of that. Following is the program as given.

Prayer.—Rev. J. Phelps

Oration—Has No Name. P. S. Mc Kinnon

Duet—Mrs. L. P. Tribou and Miss Jennie Root.

Poem—Life's Opportunities, Eunice Davidson.

Music—Scenes that are Brightest, Miss Molly Keip.

Essay—Our Words. Miss Clara Waldron.

History—Classes of '75 and '76, Miss Julia Snell.

Music—Duet—A Night in Venice, Miss Molly Keip and C. F. Field.

Welcome to Class of '84—Pres. Abner Wilson.

Response—Pres. of Class, B. F. Lamkins.

Supper was then served and this part of the entertainment was well sustained by Landlord Passmore, who seems to have the knack of getting up first class suppers for special occasions. At the conclusion of supper Toastmaster L. P. Tribou assumed charge and presented the regular toasts of the evening which were appropriately responded to.

TOASTS.

Our Alma Mater—Response by Prof. D. A. Hammond.

Our Alumni Association—Response by O. P. Bills.

Class of '84—Response by E. L. Shepard.

Sweethearts and Wives—Response by S. C. Stacy.

Our Absent Members—Response by Miss Condiet.

Our Bachelors—Response by P. S. McKinnon.

The committee then announced the list of officers for the ensuing year which was adopted by the meeting. At a late hour the session adjourned and all who were present voted it one of the best reunions ever held by the Alumni.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—P. S. McKinnon.
1st Vice President—A. W. Mills.
2d. " " —Miss May Farley.
3d. " " —Miss Mable Gniwits.
Secretary—L. P. Tribou.
Treasurer—F. B. Wood.
Orator—Dr. Geo. Howell.
Alternate—D. McNair.
Poetess—Miss Alice Wimple.
Alternate—Miss Leila Doty.
Essayist—Miss Condiet.
Alternate—Mrs. S. W. Anderson.
Historian—Mrs. S. P. Hosmer.
Alternate—B. F. Lamkins.
Toast-master—Abner Wilson.
Executive Committee—Chas. Waldron, Benj. F. Lamkins, Miss Julia Snell, Miss Clara Waldron.

LIFE'S OPPORTUNITIES.

BY EUNICE DAVIDSON.

In this beautiful world, on every hand,
Are given us treasures, rich and rare,
And we as stewards are given our charge
To till, and prune and watch with care,
To scatter seeds with a liberal hand;
To scatter them broadcast day and night
When the earth with dewdrops is overcast,
Or when with sunshine it is bright.

And as we scatter day by day,
Some by the wayside off may fall;
And some upon stony ground be cast,
And some midst weeds both dense and tall.
And some may be scorched by the burning sun,
And some by the briars and thorns choked,
Till to the weary sower's heart,
E'en nature seems provoked.

And as he sows with a moistened brow,
A weary frame and a faint'ring heart,
His soul with a shadow is overcast,
And sorrow and labor seem his part.
No sun casts forth for him its beams,
Around him are shadows dense as night,
And while in his labor he pauses to rest,
In the skies above there seems no light.

If his thoughts could only be read to us,
He would say in tones of dire dismay,
"With an aching frame and an anxious heart,
The seeds I have scattered day by day,
I have scattered freely on every hand;
I have scattered all of my scanty store,
And what shall be gathered in to me
When the long bright harvest days are o'er.

"Many of the seeds that I sowed in pain
Were scorched and dried by the withering sun,
The fowls devoured the larger part
Ere the sowing was scarce begun.
I can see no reaping before me now,
My labor is ended, my seeds are sown:
With faith in the heart I did my best,
And, must I say it—not one seed has grown."

Mistaken man—in a corner far
From the noise and din and toil of strife,
One little seed in the good ground fell,
That will bring forth fruit unto life.
And there alone far hid from sight,—
Shall we say, with none to care at all?
When God with kind and watchful care,
Knows when to earth the sparrows fall.

There buried in the rich brown earth,
And warmed by the genial rays of the sun;
Who from his dome in the heavens above,
Sees that His work is faithfully done.
The autumn rain this warm earth bathes,
And freshens and strengthens the little grain
Which now is blessed by the sun's bright rays,
And cheered by the warm and soothing rain.

And thus encouraged, upward it grows,
Its roots go deep in the loose rich soil;
Its leaflets point toward the heavenly dome,
The little seed has begun life's toil.
Fanned by the autumn's chilling breeze,
And touched by the autumn's hoary frost,
And covered o'er by the winter's snow,
That little seed indeed seemed lost.

And there it nestles the winter through,
Unknown, unsought beneath the snow,
While o'er it storm and winds rage,
And the winds of winter fiercely blow.
Content to fill this lowly place,
Why, the to watch and love and care,
That little plant in night lies
And passes its winter patiently there.

When spring returns with its sun's warm rays
Melting the snow from the hills away,
Its nourishment around the rootlets sink,
Again that plant sees the light of day.
More leaflets to the surface bring,
More rootlets in the earth press down;
Till bye and bye in the harvest time,
That little plant shall gain a crown.

A beautiful crown of golden grain,
Wafted forth in the summer breeze;
When the earth is radiant with flowers,
Ladened and plundered by busy bees.
Then the warm and weary sower comes,
And gathers with joy this golden grain,
And wonders anew in his thankful soul,
If his heart will ever grow weary again.

Now he thought of the weary sowing,
The aching frame and the fainting heart;
His soul with joy is overflowing,
And peace and rest are now his part.
The sun sheds forth for him its beams,
Around him the earth is glad and bright;
And as he gathers this stalk of grain,
The skies above are filled with light.

With a heart rejoicing in love and praise,
He bows him down to the Father of love;
With not a thought of sorrow or pain,
He sends his prayer to the throne above.
Lord, I thank Thee for this golden grain,
For all thy mercies rich and rare:
Help me to scatter more bountifully now,
E'en though in pain I sow my share.

The clouds that darkly o'er him hung,
Are shining and radiant, bright as day;
His troubles and sorrows, and sighs and tears,
To the winds of Heaven have flown away.
In the glad reaping from that little seed,
Hope and courage and peace did find;
And besides, has found to his sweet surprise,
That all the clouds were "silver lined."

And who can tell how many seeds
From this stalk of golden grain,
Another season may bring forth,
When the sower goes out again?
How much good on earth be done,
And strength to the weak they gave;
How many poor and famished ones,
From want and death they save?

How many kindly deeds of love,
How much of truth be said;
How many be comforted and cheered,
Whose hearts within seemed dead?
How many who labor in this world
To uprow the thick sown weeds,
Owe all their life, their health and strength,
To these tiny little seeds?

And who can tell from one stalk of seed,
How many seeds from earth will spring;
How many garners will be filled
With the grain which the harvests bring?
'Tis vast, 'tis hopeless, none can tell
How many sheaves of bright gold grain
Will the worn and weary reaper bring
When he comes from the harvest field again.

In these fields we all are toilers,
Working and watching day by day;
Some days most faithfully sowing,
Other days idling our time away.
And thus we waste our precious spring,
While joy and pleasure fill the day;
Until at last the harvest comes,
And our reaping, time has passed away.

But if with joy we would gather sheaves,
Seed we must sow with a liberal hand;
Sow in sunshine and sow in shadow,
Till thick with seed we have covered the land.
Then patiently, carefully, prayerfully,
Must the thorns from the seeds be thrown;
Must how be tended in their resting place,
Where so long in peace they had grown.

Then must we labor patiently sow,
Day by day, though with a sinking heart;
Though with bending heads and aching brow,
Still we must valiantly bear our part.
For if we work and watch and wait,
How can we in our weakness know
Of the many seeds sown here and there,
Which of the many are sure to grow?

That if the seed in the winter cold,
With none but the Father above to care;
Was covered over by the pure white snow,
And hid from the chilling blasts of air.
And will not He our efforts bless,
Though, 'tis they are clad with pain;
Though we sow the seed with a faltering heart,
And never hope to reap them again.

And though the clouds hang dark above,
And though we sow in the raining rain,
Ours is to sow and to watch and to wait,
Anxiously hoping for golden grain.
And though our hopes fall fast and cold us,
Like the wind toss'd autumn leaves;
Who knows but we in the harvest time
May gather many golden sheaves?

And when we are done with our sowing,
Will we, with doubts and fears,
Look back on our battle of labor and pain
With eyes overflowing with tears?
Will our hearts grow sad within us,
At the sorrows and labor we have?
Will we with joy hail that glad time
When all sorrows and labors are o'er.

Methinks that with joy we will count our toil,
When we strike glad hands on the other shore:
And not one sorrow and not one pain,
Would we take from the heavy load we bore.
But there where sighs and tears never come,
Where an aching head and a weary heart;
Where death and sorrow never are known,
For in this home they have no part.

There will we in gladness dwell,
Secure from all the chilling blasts;
Our weary frame and aching heart
Are now for us, forever past.
And nevermore will we with tears,
Sow seeds in the falling rain;
Our labor is ended, our seeds are sown,
We have reaped our golden grain.

May we at last with our toiling done,
And free from all sorrow and sin;
Rest safe at last in that blest abode,
With our garner well filled in.
And there with the Father of light and love,
And our golden harvest won;
Hear Him in love and mercy say,
"My weary child, well done."

OUR WORDS.

BY CLARA A. WALDRON.

A word is a single part of speech, consisting either of one syllable or more than one; and is the principal medium for the communication of our thoughts and wishes from one to another.

The number and variety of our words have always been a cause of much trouble to those foreigners learning our language. But a rich and varied language may be considered as one of the conclusive proofs of civilization.

Our nation stands first among the nation's of the world; and where can be found a people, who can express their thoughts in more variety of ways than can they, while on the other hand the uncivilized Indians have a very limited number of words, one doing duty for several.

One reason for the variety of terms is, that while we speak what is called the Saxon language, nearly every race on the globe has contributed to the list of words, until one cannot be sure whether he talks Persian, Greek, Chinese, or Choctaw.

Our people need a new word. Instead of making it from roots and stems, as is natural for other nations to do, one is borrowed from our neighbors; and, as is the case with other foreigners, wears for a time a distinctive dress. After a while it becomes naturalized and is admitted to full rights of citizenship. Our music is Italian, our fashions and cookery French, and good old fashioned Anglo-Saxon words have been crowded out to make room for the strangers. It is thought by many that if a person uses short, plain words he must be a man of little thought and education; but it seems to me, if they will give the subject careful consideration they will see where their mistake lies. Why is it that so many of our books and papers are filled with long words and foreign phrases? Because it is thought to be a mark of superior education, and people unwilling to own their ignorance make up in pretense what they lack in reality: never using a common word if they can find one of many syllables, whether it be proper or not. What is more pleasant than to find a selection composed of words one can understand without the aid of a dictionary, or word book close by? Ask a Dr. to explain some disease, or even simply the action of the heart, and in many cases how much wiser is the listener when the explanation is finished than before? Why do so many well educated people fail to interest a company of children when they are talking? Simply because they talk over them, not to them. Their words are so far above what the little ones can understand that they might as well talk Latin or Greek to them in the first place. It requires a person with a large vocabulary to talk plainly to the common people, and they are the majority, as many of the long words, which slip so easily from the tongue may be far-fetched. At the present time unless a person is proof against criticism he had best carefully weigh every word he utters, for how often do we hear a word that is in common use mispronounced or used without reference to its exact meaning. In the last few years there has been quite a revolution in the pronunciation of words, until it has often been said, "one cannot use a last year's dictionary more than an old almanac." This may be reaching a little too far; but it is a fact, that one can be behind the times in pronunciation as well as in other matters; for in some districts the country "school-marm" is expected to be quite as accommodating in this respect as was a certain applicant for a school in regard to the shape of the earth, round or flat, just to suit the parents.

But our language is not losing strength from the introduction of foreign words, from incorrect pronunciation, or from the use of long words; but from the large number of exaggerations, shortened words, and so called slang expressions constantly heard. Slang may not sound so very shocking when heard spoken by loafers on the street corner, but when introduced into conversation every few moments by an accomplished lady it seems 'out of place. The "awful's" and the "splendid's" of our schoolgirls might perhaps be passed over, if we only could be sure that with school-days this form of talking might end. On the contrary, if we listen to the conversation of the youth, we will find everything that pleases them handsome, elegant, or beautiful. If the opposite, horrible, awful, or dreadful. The common occurrences of life are told in a manner befitting a thrilling adventure, until it would seem that if they really had something of importance to relate their vocabulary would be exhausted. But while they are adding to the length of their sentences in one way, they shorten them by clipping the words. I can't is used for I can not, I don't for I do not, and so on for a long list of terms. This is excused by saying that brevity is the aim of the America people. So it is, but while the demand at the present time is for short, pointed sayings and writings, all should remember that the loss of a few adjectives is better than a few letters. But our people are very apt to rush from one extreme to the opposite in all things. While much writing can be omitted, we should not adopt the Spartan rule, which made the use of an unnecessary word a crime. There is a happy medium, and for this all should seek, both in talking and writing. The Saxon language can not alone express our modes and combinations of thought, but never use a Romanic word if a Teutonic one will do as well. Let all our words be strictly moral, grammatical, and pure, free from anger or resentment, for many a word unconsciously spoken lives long after the speaker is forgotten.

"Earth can forge no keener weapon,
Dealing surer death and pain,
And the cruel echo answered
Through long years again.

I have known one word hang starlike
Over a dreary waste of years,
And if only shone the brighter
Looked at through a mist of tears.

While a weary wanderer gathered
Hope and heart on life's dark way,
By its faithful promise shining
"Clearer" day by day."

HISTORY.

BY JULIA SNELL.

Class of '75.

Eugene Wilson. Tom Temple,
Ida Peters. Jennie Root,
Allie McCowen. Hattie Clark.
Julia Anderson, Della Whitenack.

Eugene Wilson continued his studies at the Normal. After completing his course, he went to Mt. Pleasant and taught three years. Aug. 29, 1882, he married a Miss Kittie Fessenden. Since then he has been teaching in Vassar and as his salary is to be increased next year, we conclude that he is a successful instructor.

Tom Temple, after graduating went home and lived at his father's in Ridgeway. In 1878, he married Ella Remington, and at present he is living at the old homestead, with his wife and two children.

Ida Peters, in the winter succeeding her graduation, went to Albany for the purpose of studying music. She stayed three months, then returned to Tecumseh where she remained till May of '77, when she married Mr. Frank Marks, and went to Cleveland. At 824 Scranton Ave. you will find the Marks' family, four in number, nicely situated in their own new house.

Jennie Root pursued her studies at the Normal one year, devoting her attention mainly to music. Upon her return to Tecumseh she commenced teaching music, and her success is proven by the number of pupils continually on her list. She has also had charge of the organ in the Episcopal church for several years.

Allie McCowen, like all the other girls, declares that she has no history. She studied music one year. Spent one year with friends in Grand Rapids, and the rest of the time has been at home or in her father's store.

Hattie Clark. All the information that we have been able to obtain concerning this member of the class is in this postal:

CONSTANTINE, June 25.

Miss Snell—Since receiving yours have been unable to write you on account of ill health, and did not know until to-day that the history of which you spoke was to be of '75 particularly. After graduating I taught two years—then married Prof. J. R. Miller in '77. Have taught one year since my marriage. Have kept house the remainder of the time and by "economy of time" and concentration of study have secured the degree of M. S. from Hillsdale College, beside pursuing my work in painting in oil which I began in '76. I wish I might meet the dear old classmates of '75, but this year will be impossible. Trusting that these few facts may arrive in time to aid you somewhat, I am sincerely yours, MRS. J. R. MILLER.

Julia Anderson showed a desire to be independent and earn her pocket money by clerking for one year, in Adamson's jewelry store, and the three succeeding years in W. & S. W. Anderson's dry goods establishment. In October 1880 she married her cousin John Anderson and now devotes her time to her two children.

Della Whitenack stayed at home till 1880 when she went to school at Ypsilanti, but her strength proved insufficient. She was taken ill and brought home to her father's where she died in September of '81.

Class of '76.

Manie Monaghan. Ada Snell.
Allie Collins. Charles Fisher,
Ada Peters. Mary Frazer,
Chas. Fitzsimmons, Livie Wimple,
Arthur Burnett.

Manie Monaghan commenced teaching soon after leaving school, first in the country, afterward in the primary grades of the public schools of this town, under Prof's Fairfield and Hammond. The past year she has filled a position in a grammar school at Lake Linden.

Ada Snell lived at home until her marriage, Feb. 27th, '76, to Mr. James C. Murray. They lived in Tecumseh till the next December, when they moved to Jamestown where they now reside. The death of their only child, a few months ago, was a severe affliction.

Allie Collins has kindly sent a sketch of her life, as we cannot improve it we give it as it is: "A sketch of my life since '76?" Well it has been very common-place indeed, and I can recall nothing in it that would be of interest to the Tecumseh Alumni, yet such as it is I will endeavor to give:

Like most young graduates upon leaving the Tecumseh High School, I had lofty aspirations and thought nothing would satisfy my ambition but a college education, but my parents thought differently, consequently my school days ended in '76. I then gave my attention to what had been in my career a neglected and untried branch of education, but which was nevertheless of the highest importance, namely—the study of Domestic Economy. To break the monotomy of my daily life, I taught school occasionally, having spent six terms in that vocation. I have also taken several trips but none of them very exensive, having never gone farther east than the Japan Islands or west than the Pacific Ocean. The one event which has most affected my life since '76 was the death of my father in 1880. A loss which I have felt mostkeenly. At this writing I am at my home in Macon with my mother and brother, where—Providence permitting—I expect to remain for the next half century. Unlike the majority of the "class of '76" I still maintain a life of single blessedness, preferring it to one of double wretchedness, and so go to swell the ranks of that vast multitude of females who dote on lap-dogs, white cats, cork-screw curls and purple ribbons.

Chas. Fisher passed the vacation on the farm. Then went to AnnArbor, entered the classical course a freshman. Toward the close of the second year his health failed him; he was obliged to leave school and return to his home near Clinton, where he died September 12th, '78, and thus closed what promised to have been an unusually bright career.

Ada Peters went to Detroit in the winter of '76 and received instruction in vocal and instrumental music, and in '77 she entered the M. E. choir of Adrian. In April '78 she married Mr. Mumford, kept her position in the Methodist choir two years, then went into the Episcopal choir for one year. Is now singing in the M. E. church again.

Mary Frazier decided to become a teacher and devoted the most of her time to that occupation till July 19th, '82, when she married Augustine Wright and retired to domestic life.

Mr. Chas. Fitzsimmons lived in Tecumseh till '82, when he went onto a farm near Lansing. In '81 he married Delia Dingman, and from all accounts is a happy man, a proud father of two children.

Livie Wimple in the winter succeeding her graduation, successfully filled a vacancy in a school near Dundee. In '77 she devoted some time to vocal culture and sang in the Presbyterian Church choir. Nov. 27th, '78 she married Lavern Ridwell, and in the winter of '79 sang her first heart felt lullaby. She is living in a pretty new house on Pearl street, and expects to remain there indefinitely.

Arthur Burnett entered AnnArbor college in the fall of '76 graduating in class of '80. The following three years he filled the chair of English Literature in the Mt. Morris College, Ill. Since then he has been in Europe studying, and is at present in Strassburg, Germany.

Where are you going to celebrate?

Sid Curtis of Dundee, was in town on Friday last.

Health in this vicinity, in spite of the intensely warm weather, is quite good.

The Tecumseh post office will be closed after 12:30 P. M., Standard time, July 4th.

The next meeting of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 69, F. & A. M., takes place on Friday evening July 11th.

The Free Methodists of Ridgeway will hold their fourth District Quarterly meeting in their church near Ridgeway village beginning July 3rd and continuing over the sabbath. All are invited to attend.

Baker & Hall have just purchased for Dr. Hamilton a set of prescription scales which for beauty and accuracy cannot be surpassed. They are so accurate that the breath of a fly will throw them out of balance.

Adrian Press: Miss Elida James, of Tecumseh, presided at the organ at the class-day exercises, Wednesday at the college, and her effort was very warmly commended and highly appreciated. The young lady is a daughter of Supervisor James, and has musical talent of a high order.

LAST WEEK'S BIG BLAZE.

The conflagation last Thursday afternoon which destroyed the Planing Mill of the Tecumseh Lumber Co. was the most disastrous fire that has visited Tecumseh in many months. The total loss will probably approach $20,000, and the insurance is $9,000. This will probably be paid in full, as the total loss is fully double the face of the policies. The adjusters of the companies holding policies all meet the proprietors of the companies here to-day and the loss will be definitely adjusted. The question of rebuilding will then also be decided. The business will undoubtedly be continued here, but whether the company will rebuild on the same corner or buy other property has not been determined as yet. Several of the workmen in the building were injured, two of them seriously. Mr. Morris Primrose and Mr. W. F. Kennedy were both very badly burned. They were in the back part of the shop, and the dense smoke so suffocated them that they reached the stair case with much difficulty and only after tumbling over sash and piles of lumber. All the workmen lost their tools and many articles of clothing. The fire company did valiant service, and saved two or three dwelling houses which would have otherwise been destroyed. Had Mr. Kennedy's house burned it might have taken four more houses South on the same block. The engine was at work from half past two until dark, which gave the capacity of the water tank a thorough test. The water supply was ample, and the tank was probably one third full when the engine ceased work. The property saved from destruction that one afternoon would pay the entire cost of the fire apparatus.

The fire Department have appointed a committee consisting of S. W. Bordine, H. E. Stout, Wm. DeMott, Geo. S. Kies, Fred Rosacrans and W. W. Frasier to interview the Common Council with reference to procuring new hose and with regard to some other matters to promote the efficiency of the Department.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 3, 1884.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Do not get drunk to-morrow.

This is rather catching weather for hay makers.

V. B. Crane of St. Louis Mo., is enjoying a brief visit in Tecumseh.

Wool has been marketed here quite freely during the past few days.

The Tecumseh stores will be closed after 11:30 A. M., to-morrow, July 4th.

C. J. Moore, formerly of Tecumseh, now of Detroit was in town over the Sabbath.

Rev. Geo. W. Hudson, accompanied by his family, is taking a short vacation in Ohio.

James S. Hunt's red, white and blue house on Shawnee street attracts much attention.

Will Tray will pitch for the Mutuals, of Jackson, at the game of base ball here to-morrow.

B. L. Baxter arrived home last week and he will be at home and in Deerfield during the present week.

Miss Lizzie Smith went to Toledo on Wednesday morning for a few days' visit with relatives and friends.

Mr. & Mrs. Frank Wiley, of Chicago, and Mrs. Austin Herrick, of Bangor, are visiting Mrs. James Osborn.

Major Bowen, wife and daughter, of Ypsilanti, were the guests of Capt. A. D. Lawrence two days this week.

The census enumerators have completed their work and are now making their returns to the county clerk.

The Japanese Wedding Ceremony was given in Cincinnati some time since and repeated yielding a net profit of about $1100.

We have received a communication from "A Subscriber," in Macon. If subscriber will give us his real name we shall be pleased to print his item.

Fred B. Wood our census enumerator has completed his task and finds the total population of Tecumseh to be 2325. A very good increase during the last four years.

The next annual meeting of the Southern Michigan Medical Association will convene at the Court House in the city of Hillsdale, on Tuesday, July 8th at 10 A. M.

We were glad to meet Mrs. Thos. R. Lovell, of Chicago, one day last week, who was busily engaged for a few days visiting her many friends in Tecumseh and vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lewis returned from their trip in Iowa last Saturday. Mr. D. T. Lewis accompanied them but he remained to spend the summer with his son, Lorengo.

The weevil, that pest of the wheat crop, after an absence of several years, has again made its appearance, and are sufficiently numerous to cause some uneasiness among the farmers in this locality.

Frank Baxter passed the Sabbath with old friends here. He is now engaged as canvasser for R. L. Polk & Co. and expects to begin work in a few days on a new volume of the Michigan State Directory.

A special train will go over the Branch to-morrow to accommodate persons who wish to celebrate at the towns along the line. It will leave Adrian at 7:20 A. M., and will leave Jackson at 6:40 P. M.

There will be a Union service of the Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian churches in the Methodist church next Sunday night. Preaching by Rev. W. H. Babbitt, of the Presbyterian church. All are invited.

Dr. Stewart and Gus Slayton are attending the semi annual meeting of the Michigan Flooring & Handle Manufacturing Co., at Summit City. They will also visit Slayton's peach farm at Muskegon on their return.

The first number of the Addison Courier is on our table. It is a neat five column quarto, with a fine show of home news and advertising. Bro. Marvin is bound to deserve success and we have no doubt he will receive it.

Jim Cole, the boss butcher, has donned the white apron and can now be found behind the blocks at the old Headquarters meat market ready to attend to the wants of all. He knows the wants of this community and studies hard to supply them.

Wm. Chiverall met with a serious accident while at work in Brewer's foundry last Monday afternoon. He was engaged in pouring melted iron into a mold, when a spark flew out, striking him in the eye and inflicting a very painful burn. In fact it made him Chiverall over with pain.

The Bills mansion was the scene of a happy family gathering on Tuesday, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Hattie V. Bills and Mr. George Brooks, of East Saginaw. Col. Saviers and family, and Col. Church and family were present, and the old homestead was the scene of a most enjoyable party. The many old friends of Miss Hattie Bills will join us in extending our hearty congratulations. The bridal pair go from here to Saratoga, thence to the sea shore and the White Mountains, for their wedding trip

THE GRADUATING CLASS.

SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT OF THE TECUMSEH HIGH SCHOOL.

The Program in Full as Given at the Opera House on Thursday Evening of Last Week.

The class of '84 numbered six members, four gentlemen and two ladies, of whom May Farley, Mabel Guiwits, and Frank Lamkins graduated in the English Course; Will J. C. Hastings and Earnest L. Shepard in the Latin Course and Edgar L. Ide in the Scientific Course. The program of exercises was fully up to the usual standard and the attendance was larger than usual, if that be possible. As the weather was cool, the immense throng crowded into the Opera House were not half suffocated as frequently happens.

The stage was neatly trimmed with flowers, and the class motto "Step by step we win the heights" appeared on the scene in the rear of the platform. The essays were all well delivered and the musical portions of the program were admirably selected and executed. The floral offerings to the graduates were profuse and beautiful. The task of the ushers in gathering the bouquets was no easy one. The audience retired at ten o'clock in the best of humor, and impressed with the excellence of the evening's entertainment.

Music—A Night in Venice, Miss Mollie Keip, Mr. C. F. Field.

We present a brief synopsis of the essays as our limited space precludes their publication in full.

FANCY'S RAMBLE.

BY MABEL GUIWITS.

The thought of the essay was an imaginative delineation of life. Infancy was represented as a sylvan lake. Then came the banqueting hall ruled by the goddess of fashion. The next vision was the castle of learning, with three roads leading therefrom, experience, study, and a third which was a combination of the other two. The different travelers on these roads were portrayed. Lastly was old father Time, with his scythe, and a glimpse into the world beyond.

LAW AND LIBERTY.

BY WILL J. C. HASTINGS.

Law and Liberty are terms which might seem opposite in meaning, but this is only apparently so. The character of law and the degree of liberty enjoyed by the people constitute the kind of government. There are three general forms of governments, the despotic, the oligarchic and the republican. The essay illustrated these different forms by historic examples, showing the latter to be the most perfect form in which good law and liberty of the citizen prevail.—Liberty, the encourager of literature, science and art, the promoter of civilization, and the stimulator of patriotism cannot exist unless supported by a code of just law. Those governments, which guarantee full political liberty, are likely to be the most peaceable, orderly and permanent.

STRUGGLES.

BY EDGAR L. IDE.

Sir Joshua Reynolds was such a believer in the force of industry that he believed that excellence in any art might be acquired. Certain it is that many of the most distinguished men in history have begun life in a humble sphere. The greatest men are not those who despise the day of small things, but those who improve their opportunities. The speaker drew historic examples of eminence achieved only after years of struggles. How Columbus discovered America, how our forefathers threw off the British yoke; how Whitney evolved the cotton gin; Robert Fulton the steamboat; Morse, the electric telegraph, and Field the Atlantic cable. The honors are taken by those who succeed. No enemy, no honor. Then let us fight earnestly to gain a name that will live after we are gone.

FREE TRADE VS. PROTECTION.

BY ERNEST L. SHEPARD.

Until within the last half century the protective policy has ruled the world. Free trade has hardly had a chance to try its experiment. Its practical workings may be found to the fullest extent in the trade between the states of our Republic. By constitutional provision no tax or duty can be laid on any article exported from one State into another. The two principles are radically opposite. There can be no compromise between them. The great question now agitating our people is which one will be for the best interest of the land.

HAPPINESS.

BY MAY FARLEY.

We all desire to be happy. It is the aim of every life. Wealth, power, fame and every earthly good are sought because the seeker believes that their possession will bring happiness. The business man, the politician, the scientist all seek the goal of their special ambition expecting to attain happiness beyond. Thus the means of happiness are sought in various directions, and we all look forward to the enjoyment of happiness by and by. All believe in a to-morrow which shall be better than to-day, and "much more abundant." Is it not better to regard the present as the accepted time and make our lives happy while we may. The trivial affairs of life make or mar its happiness, and they come to-day. Whatever comfort and happiness can be obtained from the present, we should thankfully accept and build not upon the hopes of the future.

WEALTH.

BY B. F. LAMKINS.

The tendency of the present time is toward the concentration of wealth. Landed estates are becoming fewer in number and larger in extent. Great railroad monopolies and other like organizations have grown up which control enormous amounts of capital. This concentration of money is an evil, and yet wealth brings many blessings. It is a necessary element in all improvements. It is the foundation on which all business affairs rest. It builds our great cities, erects our schools and colleges, constructs our railroad and steamship lines. There is scarcely a desire of man but what wealth can help to gratify. Pleasure, happiness, and the possession of wealth are with most people synonymous terms. No one can be happy in poverty. How true it is that the love of money is the root of all evil. The speaker then touched upon the evil effects of vast wealth upon public officials, and the corruption that exists in official life. Also the evil resulting from huge moneyed monopolies. The essay closed with a few parting words to teachers and classmates.

LAYING THE CORNER STONE.

The formal ceremonies of laying the corner stone of the new court house took place at Adrian last Saturday afternoon. So far as the literary part of the program was concerned the celebration was a success. Judge Cooley's address was a splendid effort, and the other papers read were both interesting and exactly appropriate to the occasion. The repository in the stone was filled with a large number of interesting documents and copies of all the county newspapers of the current issue. Adrian furnished a fair crowd to witness the exercises, but the surrounding towns were slimly represented. The procession consisted of the Adrian band and the members of the bar, one 2 seated spring wagon and four top buggies.—There are more than a dozen masonic lodges in the county but they were not present. The G. A. R. Posts and military companies did not materialize. The brass bands of the county were detained at home on business.—The Odd Fellows of Lenawee did not appear. The supposition that a committee of citizens had been selected nearly a month beforehand to work up a fitting celebration was evidently erroneous. Such an opportunity for a grand gala day has not occurred since the settlement of the county, and may never occur again, unless some second Silas Doty shall apply the torch to the present building after its completion. Adrian certainly has reason to congratulate herself on the magnificent and elaborate manner in which the celebration as a whole was carried out. Judge Cooley's masterly address, Judge Geddes' interesting sketch, Judge Howell's pleasing "laying of the stone" were worthy of presentation to the largest crowd ever seen in old Lenawee. The people of the county would certainly have responded to the courtesy of an invitation, and a proper effort to accommodate them.

We herewith give a list of the articles deposited in the corner stone and also Judge Geddes' address. Lack of space prevents our giving the other items of the program.

Following is a list of articles which the stone contains:

1. Historical sketch of the Public Schools of the city, compiled by Prof. Wm. H. Payne.
2. Early history of Lenawee county and city of Adrian, by Hon. A. L. Millard.
3. Pamphlet and papers relating to the city of Adrian.

JUDGE GEDDES' REMARKS.

The first register of probate was George Spafford (known to all the older residents of the county as cousin George) of Tecumseh.

The second was Dr. Michael A. Patterson, also of Tecumseh.

By virtue of his office the register of probate was also register of deeds; the law at the time requiring deeds or conveyances of land to be recorded in the office of the register of probate of the county in which the lands are located, and the law providing for establishing the office of register of deeds being of later origin.

The first deed on record was recorded February 1st, 1827.

Musgrove Evans, of Tecumseh, was the first judge of probate of Lenawee county, having been appointed to the office by Gen. Cass, then governor of the territory, upon the organization of the county in 1827. At that time the county was embraced in three organized townships—Tecumseh, Logan and Blissfield; Tecumseh at the north, Logan in the center, and Blissfield at the south, extending across the entire county from east to west.

The first probate business performed by Judge Evans, so far as can be ascertained from the records, was an order, made upon application of the late Dr. Michael A. Patterson, praying for the appointment of an administrator upon the estate of Howland Greenhill, deceased, and bears date October 20, 1827.

Nearly a year intervened before a second petition was made, and that was upon estate of William Kedzie, of Blissfield.

Judge Evans held the office seven years, and was succeeded January 1, 1833, by Hon. Seneca Hale, who held the office four years until January 1, 1837. He was succeeded by Alexander R. Tiffany, who held the office from January, 1837, to January, 1845, eight years.

Judge Tiffany was a lawer of learning and ability. He had pursued his legal studies with Hon. John C. Spencer, one of the ablest and best lawyers in New York, and who was subsequently chief justice of the supreme court of that state. Judge Tiffany had some judicial experience before coming to Michigan, holding for some years the office of county judge of Wayne county, N. Y. In 1832, he came to Michigan and settled in the village of Palmyra, which then had every promise of being the future great city of the county. In all the relations of life Judge Tiffany was an honest and true man. He held while living various offices of honor and trust. Among them that of prosecuting attorney, member of the constitutional convention of 1850, was a member of the legislature in 1855, and was the author of several valuable law books. He died in Palmyra, January 14, 1868, having lived a useful and honored life.

He was succeeded by Hon. Consider A. Stacy, who brought to the discharge of the duties of the office, not only talents of the very highest order, but a knowledge of the law, and kindness of heart eminently fitting him for the position. Among the members of the bar of this state very few have occupied a more prominent position than Judge Stacy. Admitted at the age of 20, he commenced the practice of his profession in 1837, in company with Hon. Peter Morey, who afterwards became attorney general of the state. And from the time of his admission to the bar up to the present, has always held a front rank among the lawyers of the state. Among the distinguished men with whom he has been associated as partner, may be mentioned Hon. Fernando C. Beaman, Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, Hon. E. B. Wood, and William A. Underwood, Esq. After his nearly half a century of hard work, he is still engaged in the active practice of his profession. That the people of this county appreciated Judge Stacy, is apparent from the fact that he was three times elected as judge of probate, holding the office for 12 years.

In 1857 he was succeeded by Hon. F. C. Beaman, who, after four years of service, was succeeded by Hon. Robt. R. Beecher. Of all the men who have occupied the position, perhaps Judge Beecher was best known in the county. Of a genial, kindly nature, he made friends wherever he went; sympathetic and warm hearted, he was by nature and habit eminently fitted to counsel those in affliction. He brought to the discharge of the duties of the office, qualities and qualifications rarely found combined in any one man. Nearly all the people of the county personally knew and loved the genial, kindly, jovial and learned Judge Beecher. That this is true, is plainly evident from the fact of his being three times elected judge of probate of the county. He held the office from January 1, 1861, until his death, in 1871. Judge Beecher died in the prime of manhood. For nearly eleven years he was judge of the probate court of this county, by reason of a practice which has, as it were, become settled, in this county, was the counselor and friend of all who had business in his court, doing the work not only of the judge, but counselor as well.

It was to him that the widow in deep distress, the orphan left alone in the cold world, came for counsel, and in their dire distress. It was to him that executors, administrators, guardians, and all, came for instructions and advice. The pressure was too great, the draft upon his sympathies too wearing, and as a result Judge Beecher died before his time. He will always be remembered lovingly by those who knew him.

Judge Beaman, like Judge Beecher, was of a warm hearted, sympathetic nature.

He could but listen to the tales of distress and sorrow that were so often poured into his ears, and his generous heart went out in sympathy to the bereaved orphan and widow, who in their utter inexperience in matters of business and law needed a counselor and friend, as well as legal adviser. And, too, he was an intense worker. The duties of the office had become such as to require constant application and labor. This together with the draft upon his sympathies destroyed his health, rendered him prematurely old, and, he, too, died before his time.

Honest, pure, noble, generous-hearted all man—acting well his part in life's drama.

Upon the death of Judge Beecher, what would be more fitting than that his lifelong friend, that eminent lawyer, a statesman, Hon. Fernando C. Beaman, who had been his predecessor, or should, become his successor, Judge Beaman, who had been judge of probate from January 1, 1857, to January 1, 1861, and in the interim had represented his district and state for ten years in congress, with distinguished honor, was appointed to succeed Judge Beecher, and was elected in 1872 and 1876, and continued to hold the office until the failure of his health rendered him unable to discharge its duties, when, having resigned, Norman Geddes, the present incumbent, was on the 16th day of April 1880, appointed his successor, and at the election in November following, was elected for a term of four years.

Last Friday a game of base ball was advertised between the Ypsilanti and Tecumseh clubs on our grounds, but the Ypsilanti boys failed to come to time. A good crowd had assembled to see the game who were not a little chagrined at the fizzle. To-morrow afternoon a game will be played between the Mutuals, of Jackson, and our club. The Mutuals never back water. People can rely on their being present and can expect a good game.

Quick Relief!

When a man has suffered from Rheumatism only a little while, and is relieved from his pain, he is happy and delighted. But suppose he has Suffered for more than a third of a century.

Alvin Grim, of Vale, Iowa, writes: "ATHLOPHOROS has helped me much. The pain in my limbs is all gone, but some lameness is left yet, and will there might be, for I have been troubled for thirty-five years with Rheumatism."

Mrs. A. B. Baker, of Chicago,

Had rheumatic pains in her back for fifteen years, and Mr. Baker had been the victim of rheumatism until his head was drawn down over his left shoulder. Mr. Baker writes: "That a bottle of ATHLOPHOROS made me as good as new. My wife has taken up the other half, and has not complained of her back since. She says her back never was so free from pain and ache as it has been since she has taken the ATHLOPHOROS."

There are many people who think that because they have suffered so long, and have tried so many medicines in vain, they must "suffer on their three score years." But you see what ATHLOPHOROS has done.

However Old your Case;
However Severe your Pains;
However Great your Disappointments,

Try Athlophoros

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he has'n't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

ZOA-PHORA

Is a Sovereign Remedy for all Complaints peculiar to

WOMEN.

MISHAWAKA, Ind, Dec. 1, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—Overwork has done for me what it does for many. Desiring to benefit suffering women, I add my testimony to the value of Zo-Phora. For five years I suffered greatly with Prolapsus, being obliged to use a supporter during all those painful, weary years, but, thanks to your medicine, I wear it no more. I laid it off after using one and a half bottles. I am not well, but I work all the time, and am better than I ever expected to be. You may use my letter, and if any one wishes to write me for more information, give them my full address. MRS. J. G.

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., April 25, 1882.

DR. PENGELLY:

Dear Sir—I am more than pleased with the effect of your Zoa-Phora in our daughter's case. I am surprised to see how she has improved. She is gaining in weight and color, and I think feels better than she ever did; her nerves are steady, and the distress in her chest is entirely gone. I firmly believe that Zoa-Phora is all that has saved her life. I am willing you should use my letter, for I am not afraid to tell what a wonderful cure your medicine is. Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH RANDOLPH.

N. B.—This was a case of suppression. From Mrs. John Spitler.

No. 28 Wills St., Fort Wayne, Ind.

I have suffered for sixteen years with spasmodic pain in my head at a general nervous debility. Recently I had a severe attack of pain in the head, caused by weakness and nervous exhaustion. I thought I should die. My husband said we would test Zoa-Phora. He gave it to me according to directions for severe cases, and in less than an hour I had complete relief. I advise all women who suffer from nervous or sick headache, or any form of female weakness to use Zoa-Phora. There is no medicine to compare with it.

Dogs and Curs.

"Fritz" Emmett, the actor, gave, so the free advertisements of that distinguished comedian state, $1,000 for his new dog "Victor." To him who, in the love of nature, holds a boundless reverence for dogs, this may not seem a large price to pay for the biggest dog in the world. And since there must be dogs, it must be owned that the larger, better bred and higher priced dogs are to be preferred. There is a great deal of nobility about a big, well-bred dog. If he does not like you, he does not conceal his dislike. If he growls at you, he walks straight up to you, meets you half way, and shows his teeth right in your face. If he attacks you, he springs at your throat. He will maim you if he can. He may kill you. But he will do it in a brave, direct way. He won't sneak about it. And if the fates have decided that you must take yourself with a dog you rather prefer using a $10 dog. Of course very few men can afford a $1,000 dog, even for his own private biting.

Then there is another kind of dog, which could probably be bought in any market at the rate of about [illegible] dogs for $1. It is a living emolem of utter and contemptible worthlessness. It is a cur, hated by every man save its owner, and the owner is usually as "cornary" as the dog. It is mean, and scurvy, and noisy, and cowardly. If it bites, which it rarely does, it runs after you in the dark and bites your heels. The cur, in his abject vileness, never aspires higher than your heels. If you turn on him and he can not get away, he will kiss your foot, but if you do not see him, he will bite it. His bark is shrill, high-keyed, and can be heard at all hours of the night. He is especially vociferous when a man goes by. He hates as much as he fears anything man or dog, bigger than himself. He always barks from behind the fence and always knows a hole under the house, where he can run and hide. He is hard to hit; if you kick at the dog, you only strain your leg. If you stoop, he will yelp and run and still run and yelp, as though he already felt the stone you did not reach. He is, as it were, raw proof. But he is comparatively harmless. He is base, vile, dirty, and irritating, but his native cowardice keeps him from getting close enough to a man to bite him unless the night is very dark. Everybody hates a cur.

My son, there are curs who wear the raiment of civilization and go upright on their hind legs. If you were a cur, the dog would love you. The moment you begin to rise above them, and they see you are a man, the whole pack will yelp and snarl at your heels. Do not waste time on them, my son. You mustn't kill them, and they don't hurt you. Move on in your own way, mingle only with men, and let the cur yelp for the mean pleasure of the cheaper cur that owns him. Don't waste time on the dog, my boy. There are none in heaven "or without," saith the Good Book, "are dogs," and the fiercest kind of a man is the meanest kind of a dog.—Bardette, in Burlington Hawkeye.

Alexander Dumas, the Elder.

Dumas was a great school-boy, who hid under his good humor and boisterous gayety more common sense and true wisdom than fell to the lot of ninety-nine out of every hundred. He was the type of a free lance, who proved the rules of conventionality to be stupid, of a pleasure seeker who might serve as a model to all industrious workers, of a knight-errant ever in quest of the adventures of chivalry, politics and war, who had studied, for his share alone, more than three convents of Benedictines. He was the image of a prodigal who, having squandered thousands in reckless liberalities, left behind him, unconsciously, the heritage of a King. His was the radiant face of an egotist who devoted his whole life to his mother, his children, his friends, his country; of a comrade and easy-tempered father, who threw the reins on his son's neck, and who, nevertheless, had the exceptional good fortune to see himself reproduced while living by one of the best and most illustrious men whom France has ever applauded. His books will be read after his comedies and dramas shall have been withdrawn from the stage. For an age and longer his entrancing stories, wherein life's action never languishes, the style is limpid and brilliant as the crystal of a spring well, and the dialogue crackles like green wood on a fire, will continue to be the joy of the young, the distraction of the old, a refreshment for the wearied, a consolation for the ailing, a delight for all. I have known mature men passably occupied myself, for instance—forget themselves an entire night in the company of the "Chevalier de Maison-Rouge" or the "Mohicans de Paris." I still hear my children quarreling in friendly guise because one has not yet finished the second volume of "Monte Cristo," when the other, who is awaiting his turn, has arrived at the end of the first. From this I conclude that Dumas has lost nothing of his freshness since the days gone far in the by-gone now when he nearly caused the death of one of my school companions. He was a little Spaniard, an interne at the pension Massin; he was sleepless, had lost his appetite, and was gradually wasting away as if stricken with home-sickness. Sarcey, who was in the same class and had conceived a friendship for him, asked him one day: "Is it your mother you wish to see?" "No," answered the child, "she is dead." "Your father, then?" "He used to beat me." "Your brothers and sisters?" "I have none." "Why, then, are you so anxious to get back to Spain?" "To finish a book I began reading in the vacation." "What is the name of it?" "Los Tres Mosquieteros." The poor child had the nostalgia of the "Trois Mousquetaires."—Tinsley's Magazine.

—Dr. Handsmith, of London, has discovered a process by which color on marble may be rendered imperishable.

Deep or Shallow Plowing.

The great difference of opinion which exists as to the proper depth to plow land is caused mainly by the fact that no rules can be laid down that will apply to all soils; the fact is, no two fields are alike, therefore every field must be judged by itself; hence the importance of always having the plow guided by a hand that is controlled by intelligence. There are some general principles which, if the farmer would make himself familiar with, he would be able to judge more correctly as to what depth each lot of land should be plowed. It is well to ever keep in mind the fact that nature puts the richest soil at the top, and gradually increases the depth of the richness by adding to the surface. Man, being impatient at nature's slow ways, takes the work into his own hands and attempts to do in one year what it would require nature hundreds of years to do; he does not adopt nature's method, but instead placing the richness on the surface, he puts the plow in and turns the surface under, and at the same time mixes with the soil some fertilizing materials; the result of this at first is to make the upper portion of the soil poorer than before, so that by thus deepening the soil it is done partially at the expense of the surface richness.

It must be evident to every thoughtful person that in our efforts to deepen the soil we ought, if possible, to avoid doing it at the expense of the surface, but should endeavor to increase its richness rather than diminish it. To do this the plow should be run only a trifle below the soil made rich by nature, or by the application of fertilizers. To attempt to deepen a soil more than two inches a year is to attempt what, as a rule, will prove to be an injury to the crop, unless the first six inches of the soil has been made very rich by previous heavy dressings of manure. A soil that has but a few inches on the suface that is rich enough for plant growth, should be plowed very shallow, and deepened but very little at first, if it is expected to get even a fair crop, but land that is already very rich to the depth of more than six inches, may be plowed quite deep, not only with safety, but to advantage. Much depends on the condition of the land and on what the farmer desires to do; if he does not care to enrich his land beyond what its present condition is, he will not attempt to plow the enriched soil, whatever may be its depth, but if his aim is to get his farm in a better condition, he will not only apply more manure than his crop requires, but he will also plow a little deeper each year.

The great mistake is often made by plowing a light soil eight or ten inches deep, when the depth of the soil rich enough for plant growth is not more than four inches; the result of such operation is to turn four to six inches of dead soil to the top, where the roots of the young plants are expected to get their food, and to bury all of the prepared plant food below where it will be united with the air to be conveyed to the growing plants. Thus the crop fails to get as much food as it would if the land had not been plowed more than five inches in depth. Even a liberal application of manure, mixed with the dead earth, will not bring the soil into that condition best adapted for plant growth, because there will not be that fine vegetable mould which plants require to make a vigorous growth, and the manure applied does not decompose rapid enough to furnish plant food as soon as required by the young plants. To prepare the subsoil for rapid plant growth requires time; the simply mixing of small or large quantities of manure with it will not change it at once, but it will be very gradual, requiring several years, therefore it is important that only a very small quantity of the subsoil should be brought to the surface in any one year.

In deepening a soil that is shallow to start with, if economy is to be considered, only such crops should be grown as are adapted to a shallow soil. To attempt to grow a crop of beets or carrots on a soil that is to be plowed only five inches deep, would be very poor management, but Indian corn might be grown on such soil with success. Farmers who have a thin soil that has never been worked deep, are generally opposed to deep plowing, because whenever they plow a field deep it has resulted in a less crop; while farmers who have a deep rich soil believe in deep plowing, they get a much larger crop than their neighbors do by shallow plowing. The reason of this difference is very plain when we understand the different conditions of the soils, and also the different requirements of the crops to be grown.

If the farmer with a poor thin soil would begin in earnest to enrich it by liberal applications of manure, and a very gradual deepening of the soil, he would in time become an advocate of deeper plowing, because he would find that his crops were better than when he plowed light. That there is a depth beyond which it is not profitable or desirable to plow, there can be little doubt, nor is there any doubt but some crops require the land to be worked deeper than others, therefore the farmer has many points to learn before he can know just how deep each field should be plowed, as well as to know how many years he should occupy in deepening the soil and enriching it to the proper depth.

Only a thorough knowledge of plant growth, and of the character of the different soils, together with close observation and long practice, will enable him to plow each field the depth which may prove to be the most profitable for the particular crop it is desired to grow.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

—A Philadelphia dispatch says the recent association of superintendents of insane asylums passed resolutions declaring that one-third of our insane people are brought here by foreign immigration, and urging Congress to give attention to this subject, that immigration laws may be enacted, which, while not measurably obstructing the immigration of healthy and self-dependent persons, will effectually prevent the immigration and exportation to our ports of the defective classes of Europe and Asia.

How to Make Ice Cream.

The secret of making good ice cream of any grade, lies in the freezing. The old way of freezing cream, which is still in use among small confectioners, consisted of occasionally stirring the cream while it was freezing in a tin can, set in a tub of ice and salt. A more easy and expeditious method is within the reach of the average housekeeper in these days of patent freezers. The same principle underlies all the best known patents, i. e., the mixing of the cream by a wooden beater, which revolves inside the can by the same motion that slightly changes the position of the can in the outer tub of ice and salt. This freezing mixture should be composed of three parts of crushed ice to one of coarse salt, of which care should be taken that it does not reach high enough around the sides of the can to penetrate to the interior, and so spoil the cream: the water formed in the outer tub by the melting of the freezing mixture need not be drawn off while the cream is being frozen unless it is likely to get into the can, because the water is intensely cold. If it is desired to pack the cream after it is frozen, the water may be drawn off and enough more ice and salt placed around the can to reach nearly to the top. Ice cream packed in this way can be kept over night, or longer, if the freezing mixture is properly renewed. When ice cream is "molded" or packed in the molds of fancy shapes all the openings should be closed with butter, or oiled paper fitted about the apertures of the mold with paste or gum tragacanth.

Ice creams of the most ordinary sort are made with milk thickened with arrowroot or corn starch, in the proportion of a table-poonful to a quart, dissolved in cold water, and then boiled in milk, which is cooled, sweetened and flavored before it is frozen. The sort of ice cream usually made at home is composed of milk, with a small proportion of cream, with eggs and sugar added to it; for instance, dissolve half a pound of sugar in a quart of milk; place it over the fire and let it heat to boiling point; meantime beat three eggs to cream, pour the boiling milk into them and then return to the fire and stir until it begins to thicken; then at once remove it from the fire; stir until it is smooth; then flavor it, cool it, and when it is cool freeze it according to directions given. Frozen custard is made in the same way, only five eggs at least are added to a quart of milk.

French ice cream, thick and yellow, is made by boiling a quart of cream with a long vanilla bean, and then cooling and straining it; then the yolks of two eggs are beaten smooth with three-quarters of a pound of sugar; the flavored cream is then mixed with the eggs and stirred over the fire until it begins to thicken; directly the cream begins to thicken take it from the fire, and stir it for five minutes then cool it and freeze it. —Juliet Corson.

How Ben Hardin Fooled a Literary Society.

"Ben Hardin was a brilliant fellow, and he had a strong sense of humor. When he was elected to Congress in 1815 he had already served several terms in the Kentucky Legislature, and was noted throughout the State as a lawyer. He started, however, for Washington dressed in the rough clothing of a frontier State, and he wore the slouch hat and the long buff overcoat of the West. As he was passing through Virginia two young smart-looking fellows overtook him and fell into conversation with him. Hardin saw at their first words that they took him for a greenhorn, and he put on such manners and accent as to confirm their illusion. The meeting took place within a few miles of the town where they were to stop for the night. In the course of the conversation the young bloods told him there was to be a literary society meeting that night, and that if he would attend he might hear some fine speaking, and at this point one of them slyly winking to the other, said: "And perhaps, stranger, you will join the debate yourself?"

"I don't know," replied Hardin. "I have spoke some in old Kaintucky. What mought your question be?"

The question was not new to him. It was one of the leading ones of the day—a political issue upon which he was thoroughly posted. As old Ben Hardin heard it, however, he shook his head and said: "Boys, you will hev to excuse me on thet. I ain't up on thet subject. Now, if it was whether pursuit was better than possession, or some of our old subjects, I allow I'd tackle ye. But about this yere politics I don't know."

After much persuasion, however, he promised the young men that he would attend and he "would say suthin' anyhow." The party separated at the hotel, and the young fellows went off laughing at the fun they expected to have that night. They told their friends, and in a short time the whole town knew of the green Kentuckian's arrival, and when the literary society opened every seat was filled. The exercises went off quietly until the debate commenced, when every one looked at Hardin. He sat quietly until the close. The two young fellows made their speeches, and very fair ones, too. As the second one closed and Mr. Hardin arose, each one in the audience nudged his neighbor, and every face was ready to smile. Their expressions changed however, as old Ben took up the subject and treated it most eloquently. He tore to pieces the speeches of the young fellows who had tried to play the trick on him, and as he was finishing the two were so bored that they got up and left. He referred to them as they went and closed a terrible eloquent peroration by telling the society that he was a Kentucky member of Congress on his way to Washington. At this the society gathered round him and wanted to shake his hand. He chatted with them for a while, and the remainder of his visit was an ovation. The whole town came out to the hotel the next day to see him off, and the smart young fellows were the laughing stock of all. —Cleveland Leader.

—Dr. Wilson, in the Medical News, claims to have obtained much better results from the use of the internal membrane of hens' eggs for healing large surfaces in wounds than from either human or rabbit skin.

—Two cases have been reported to an English medical society in which the electro-magnet has been successfully used for removing pieces of iron from the eye. Without the magnet it is thought that the sight of the injured eye must have been lost in each case.

—An exchange says that "by means of an ingenious instrument invented by Dr. Lombard of New York, it is ascertained that a woman's body is warmer than that of a man by three-fourths of a degree, and sometimes as high as one-half a degree, while in no instance has the warmth of a male's body been found to be greater than that of a female."

—The time required for the formation of mineral veins appears to be much less than has been generally supposed. A ditch which was filled up two years ago with common clay containing iron, has just been opened again by Dr. Fleitman, who has found, to his great surprise, that the clay has become white and is permeated by racks filled with compact iron pyrites, these veins being from a twenty fifth to a sixth of an inch in thickness.—N. Y. Mail.

—A model of a novel canal-boat has been placed on exhibition by a Cleveland inventor. The boat is to be propelled by a screw, so geared that it can be made to turn by horses or mules traveling in a circle in their stable in the boat. The inventor claims that abundant power can be had in this manner, and that a large saving can be effected, particularly in river towing bills and by the reduction of help; that it would be cheaper than the present method of towing even though no better time were made, but he is confident that four or five miles an hour can be accomplished.—Cleveland Leader.

—Hitherto it has puzzled eminent surgeons to account for sudden death caused by apparently inadequate wounds in the heart, such as those made by the pick, without penetration even of a needle. Herr Schmey, a student of the Physiological Institute, Berlin, has, however, discovered that when a needle pricks a certain small spot on the lower border of the upper third of the septum cordis, quite instantaneously the movements of the heart are arrested and forever set motionless in death.

—If any one doubts that the Americans are an inventive people, let him examine the Patent Office reports, which few, however, will do, as they would rather accept the newspaper statements as veritable than wade through a library of shelved and dusty volumes. The patents granted by the Government reach to the enormous number of nearly 300,000. There have been no less than 6,680 patents obtained on the plow alone, about as many on the harvester, and over 8,000 on stoves and furnaces. It sounds singular, in this connection, to hear that 809 separate and distinct ways have been discovered of making a corset.—Washington Star.

—Dumley came into the dining-room and, casting a sweeping glance over the table, ambled down into his chair, and muttered under his breath, "Liver again, of course. We've had liver every morning for two weeks." "What's the matter, Mr. Dumley?" asked the landlady, "aren't you feeling well this morning?" "No, madam," he replied, shortly. "I am suffering with liver complaint.—Pittsburg Call.

—"Bridget," said Mrs. Wigglesworth to the new kitchen lady from Messina, "you may lay the table." "Is thy servant a hen that he should do this thing?" queried Mr. Wigglesworth, facetiously, as the door closed. "Why not?" returned his wife, for once coming to time, "she is a Biddy." And Mr. Wigglesworth said "H'm!" and went out to see if his sweet peas were coming up, and found that with the assistance of the neighbor's hens they were.—Rockland Courier-Gazette.

HUMAN BLOOD.—On the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system. Disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause. A remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as Hood's Sarsaparilla undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use. ELECTRIC LIGHT SOAP

FOUR POINTS

Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD.
Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS.
WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC.
WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing; use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes in to soak, rubbing plenty of soap in the most soiled parts. Be sure that the soaking water is hot; soak the clothes half an hour; stir them occasionally so that they may get the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them lightly out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil ten to fifteen minutes, rinse well, blue and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boiling by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Flannels and prints should not be boiled, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the washboard, and being the best disinfectant known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury; the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press water out with the hand; boil ten minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press carefully between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron between pieces of old flannel. Soak curtains ten to fifteen minutes and boil ten minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, starch every scallop to curl, cover with a sheet to dry; no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

Sold by leading wholesale and retail grocers everywhere. Dealers may obtain our goods upon application, ELECTRIC SOAP MANUFACTURING CO., Lockport, Ill., and 26-28 South Water St., Chicago, Ill.

CONGRESS.

The Committe on Public Lands Submit a Report Forfeiting Unearned Lands Granted to Northern Pacific.

The Retirement of the Trade Dollar—A Bridge Across the Missouri at St. Paul—Violating the Internal Revenue Laws.

CONGRESSIONAL.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Mr. Slater, from the Committee on Public Lands, submitted to the Senate a report to accompany the bill forfeiting unearned lands granted the Northern Pacific Railroad. The report, he said, was not unanimous and the minority would submit its views.

Mr. Morgan, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported adversely the bill to grant public lands to the survivors of the Mountain Meadow massacre. Mr. Morgan said the committee was satisfied if a valid claim existed against the Government arising out of the massacre, it was not a claim that should be compensated in public lands, but in money. Calendar.

Mr. Cameron, of Pa., called up his resolution heretofore submitted, discharging the Finance Committee from further consideration of the bill for the retirement and recoinage of trade dollars. On motion to agree to the resolution Mr. Morrill called for the yeas and nays, which resulted—yeas 21, nays 28—and was not agreed to.

The Secretary of the Sen to was directed to ask a recall from the House of the bill to grant the right of way to the Southern Kansas Railroad Company through Indian Territory, in order that the Senate may order a committee conference on it.

In the House Mr. Washburn submitted the conference report on the bill authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi at St. Paul, agreed to.

Mr. King introduced a bill appropriating $400,000 to prevent the introduction of cholera in the United States.

In the Iowa contested election case of Frederick vs. Wilson the House Committee on Elections, by a vote of 6 to 5, decided to report in favor of Frederick.

Mr. Randall introduced a joint resolution providing that all appropriations for the necessary operations of Government under the existing laws, which shall remain unprovided for after June 30, 1884, shall be continued and made available for a period of five days from and after that date unless the regular appropriation bills now pending shall have been previously enacted and passed.

In the conference report on the Indian Appropriation bill to appropriate $6,500,000, the House provision for the abolition of the office of inspector and detail five army officers to act as inspectors, was stricken out.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Fortification bill.

The Senate took up the House bill to limit to two years the time within which prosecutions may be instituted against persons charged with violating the internal revenue laws. It was amended by substituting three years for two and passed.

Bills reported favorably and placed on calendar: To provide for the sale of land belonging to prairie bands of Pottawattamie Indians, Kansas, for the erection of a public building at Akron, Ohio, increasing from $100,000 to $175,000 the amount heretofore allowed for the public building at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the River and Harbor bill.

A reduction proposed by the Senate Committee in the amount for continuing the improvement of the Kentucky River from $250,000 to $172,000 was disagreed to and the original sum restored.

The debate was then suspended while the House joint resolution was passed providing for the continuance of the present appropriations for five days from June 30.

Forest Fires Doing Great Damage in New England.

BANGOR, Me., July 1.—Heavy forest fires have been raging in the woods at Brownville along the line of the Katahdin Iron Works Railroad. The fire is in the woods prostrated by the gale last fall, and is spreading rapidly. Fires are also reported at Forestville on the European & North American division of the Maine Central.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., July 1.—A fire is raging on Gaylock's Mountain near Adams. Many acres of valuable woodland have been destroyed, and the fire threatens the houses near the boundary line.

QUEBEC, Ont., July 1.—Heavy bush fires are raging in Saguenay district. Fourteen houses were burned at Bale St. Paul.

Burning of an Orphan Asylum.

CINCINNATI, July 1.—St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, situated six miles south of Newport, Ky., caught fire before noon yesterday from a defective kitchen flue and burned to the ground. The church near by was also demaged. The loss to the asylum is $15,000, two-thirds insured. The asylum was in charge of eight sisters of Notre Dame, with fifty-four boy inmates. Although the flames extended rapidly, the boys saved most of their personal effects and walked into Newport this evening, where they are temporarily cared for. The asylum will be rebuilt.

Drowned While Drunk.

ALLIANCE, O., June 30.—A colored man named William Barrett was drowned Sunday in the Mahoning River. He was about forty-five years old and was a resident of Salem. A flask of whisky was found in his boat, indicating that he was probably drunk. The body was soon recovered and an inquest will be held to-morrow.

Breaking Through a Temporary Bridge.

KEOKUK, Ia., July 1.—A construction train on the Chicago, Burlington & Kansas City Railroad went through a temporary bridge over Grand River, near Sumner, Mo., last night. The engine, five cars and the caboose are in the bed of the stream. Ten men are reported missing and others injured.

A Burning Oil Tank.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 1.—A tank containing 20,000 barrels of benzine, at the Crystal Oil Works of the Standard Company, caught fire at nine o'clock last night and is still burning. Several large tanks of oil surround it and it is feared the flames will spread. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

Embezzlement.

BALTIMORE, July 1.—Charles Daughrty, for the embezzlement of money orders in the postoffice, was held for trial in September.

Overcame With Shame.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1.—John Caldwell shot Mary Kelly dead yesterday for reproaching him with drunkenness. Caldwell was arrested.

GORED BY A BULL.

An Erie County Farmer Torn to Pieces by a Vicious Animal.

SANDUSKY, O., July 1.—A farmer named John Cruise, aged about sixty years, and who resided near Port Clinton, was gored to death on his farm by a bull yesterday. Cruise had only recently purchased the animal, and did not suppose that it was vicious. Having occasion to go from one portion of his farm to another, he started to go "across lots," entering the pasture where the bull was kept. Cruise was simply attired, having on nothing but a straw hat, a red undershirt and a pair of dark red overalls. It is supposed that the bull became enraged at the sight of the shirt and overalls and commenced furiously attacked Cruise, rushing madly upon him from behind, one of the animal's horns striking him just above the left hip and penetrating his body the full length of the horn. Cruise was thrown to the ground, and was then gored and mangled in a terrible manner, the bull using its horns and feet alike. When the body was recovered, a few minutes later, it presented a sickening sight. The deceased leaves a wife, two sons and a daughter. His funeral took place to-day.

Railroad News.

PHILADELPHIA, July 1.—The main lines of the Pennsylvania Railroad cleared the obstructions caused by the storm and is again open.

The Central Division of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Railroad reopened yesterday afternoon.

The Reading Railroad officials announce that they will pay the interest due to-morrow on the general mortgage loan, in other securities, but the payment of the interest on convertible and debentures bonds, the adjustment scrip and junior bonds of the Susquehanna Canal Company have not been considered.

Feared Mob Violence.

FORT WORTH, TEX., July 1.—Charles Herring, the murderer of Dr. B. W. Barradan, was captured Saturday night about five miles north of Fort Worth, and brought to the city. Immediately after crowds began to congregate about the corners and talk of lynching Herring. At twelve o'clock the Sheriff telephoned from the jail that he feared an attack. The jail is heavily guarded, and if an attack is made there will be some bloody work.

Life Sentence for Shooting His Son.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., July 1.—John W. Bremer, who was convicted of shooting his son while intoxicated, near Port Washington, in February last, was sentenced by Judge Pearce yesterday morning to the penitentiary for life. John Lawrence, who had just finished a seven years term for burglary, was sentenced by the court for five years for a similar crime.

Dying to Prevent a Mother's Suicide.

HELENA, M. T., July 1.—Yesterday afternoon Mrs. C. E. Kemp, while ill and in great pain, attempted to shoot herself. Her daughter Ella, twenty years old, tried to take the pistol away, when it was discharged, the bullet passing through the daughter's brain, killing her instantly.

Melting Snow in Colorado.

DENVER, Col., July 1.—Reports from the mount in districts throughout the State show all the streams higher than ever before known, caused by the melting snow, which is in some places still five to ten feet deep. The railroads are the principal losers.

An Evangelist Killed by Lightning.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 1.—A thunder storm of great violence visited this city yesterday morning. Evangelist Gaynon was killed by lightning in bed, and other members of his family were injured in the same room while asleep.

—All the feminine ignorance is not monopolized in this country. It was a London girl who asked if an apiary were not a place in which they kept monkeys.—N. Y. Mail.

—The young woman of the period has a deal of responsibility. Dr. Howard Crosby says: "If all young ladies were what they should be, we'd never see a dude or a dog cart."—N. Y. Graphic.

—Patent benches which can be closed and locked at night, are favored for public use in the down-town parks in New York, where the old benches were used as beds for tramps and loafers. Commissioner Weil favors charging a cent or two for the seats, after the custom in Paris.—N. Y. Sun.

—The Black Butte and Moccasin "Round up," Montana, have offered a bounty of $8 per head for all bears killed on their ranges. This, in addition to the regular territorial bounty of $8, will make bear killing a profitable industry, as a good large bear will be worth, besides the bounty, about $75.

—A man, during a life-time of fifty years, according to a paper recently read before the Academy of Sciences, Paris, sleeps away an aggregate of 6,000 days, works away the same period, eats away 2,000 days, walks away 800 days, and amuses himself the remainder of his half century on earth.

—The most successful counterfeit of the dime is said to be made of glass mixed with some base metal by a process unknown to ordinary workers in metal and glass. The counterfeit looks exactly like the genuine ten-cent piece, but on being struck with a hammer it is crushed to pieces.—Chicago Herald.

—Dried leaves of the bitter orange tree are much used by the inhabitants of South America as a household remedy. An infusion of the leaves is regarded in Brazil as a specific for sick headache, flatulence, indigestion, hysteria, spasms, recent colds and chills and fever. Its free use is considered to promote perspiration.

DIED.

BREWER—Suddenly at Tecumseh on Wednesday, June 25th, 1884, Mrs. Maria K. Brewer, widow of the late Horace Brewer, aged 66 years.

Mrs. Brewer was well known and will be long and affectionally remembered in the community where, for so many years she lived. She was retiring in her disposition, but warm hearted and loyal in her friendships. As a professing Christian she was consistent in her deportment and ever ready to lend a helping hand in promoting the welfare of the church with which she was connected. The loss of a beloved husband and, while that bereavement was still fresh, the loss of an only daughter to whom she was devotedly attached, cast a shadow on her closing years. She was bearing bravely her sorrows however and engaged in useful occupation when the stroke fell which closed her life. Up to the hour of eleven A. M. of the day she died she seemed well and cheerful and at one o'clock P. M. she had ceased to breath. Thus was a desire she had expressed not to live to be a helpless invalid, fulfilled. The children who survive her are her two sons Albert and Charles, both of them well known in this community. They, with their families, have the sympathy of many friends in this and other places.

Popularity and Usefulness of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. A Thrilling Letter from a Master Mechanic.

Master Mechanic's and Superintendent's Office, Lowell Repair Shops of Boston & Lowell R.R.
LOWELL, Mass., March 25, 1884.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir.—I think it is due to you that I should make the following statement, and I make it voluntarily and willingly. On the 4th day of June, 1881, I was taken with what was called paralysis of the bowels. The attack was unexpected and terrible. The stomach and other organs seemed to sympathize with it and to have lost all power of action. For a long time my life was despaired of, but at length I recovered so far as to be able to ride out. By the advice of my physician I visited Poland Springs, Me., hoping to benefit from the waters. But they did me no good. Neither were the best physicians of Lowell and Boston, whom I consulted, able to afford me more than transient relief. I gained no strength and my case appeared almost hopeless. In the fall a friend advised me to try KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, and although opposed to patent medicines I made the trial. To make a long story short—Favorite Remedy, in my opinion, saved my life. I consider it the best preparation in the world for Stomach difficulties, as well as of the liver and other organs. I am glad to say it is in general use among the R. R. men in this vicinity.

Yours, etc., A. J. GIFFORD.

Mr. Gifford is the Master Mechanic of the Lowell division of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and his illness and recovery are known to many who can testify to the facts in his letter.

Use this medicine for all diseases of the blood, kidney, liver, stomach, bowels and skin. It may save you or yours from pain and death.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a common Eruption to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are specially conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALD ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or to 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

CLINTON'S CELEBRATION.

A GALA DAY ON THE GLORIOUS FOURTH. FORENOON AND AFTERNOON EXERCISES.

Full Programme of the Day's Doings—Particulars of a Sad and Fatal Accident.

The morning of the 4th dawned fair and pleasant over this little town. The rain during the night had laid the dust and the air was cool and refreshing. At 9:30 o'clock the procession—the first advertised act of the celebration—began to form. Most of Clinton's merchants had been to considerable expense and pains in tastifully preparing wagons to show their goods and wares, and the small boys formed bands whose only virtue seemed to be the most discordant noises. The procession was led by the Macon and Clinton Bands, and but for a sad and fearful accident, an account of which is given below, would have been a complete success. The line of march led down Church street, thence east on Chicago street to the grove.

The exercises at the grove were opened with prayer by Rev. E. W. Miller, after which the bands present played a selection in unison. Rev. Mr. Kerridge read the Declaration of Independence in a clear loud voice, so that every one present listened for once to the fine sentiment and rhetoric of Thomas Jefferson's immortal composition. At the close of the reading of declaration, the double quartette sang the old hymn America, and then the president of the day, Hon. David Brooks, introduced the orator, Rev. Mr. St. John. Mr. St. John's address was well written and delivered, and the audience paid him the closest attention throughout. An abstract is herewith presented:

The speaker introduced his remarks by extending his thanks to the committee for their kind invitation to address them. This is a day when all men can afford to forget their party differences and unite their congratulations for the good of their country, a day when Republican and Democrat, like the fabled Lion and Lamb, can lie down together. This day, at first commemorative of our liberation from a despotic yoke has become sacred with the associations of a century. It is not my purpose to-day to arouse you to a sudden flow of patriotism, so much as to awaken thought in your minds in regard to the real welfare of our country.

Let us reflect on the task which our fathers assumed when they laid the foundations of the republic. To what future did they look forward? To establish the Ideal Republic of history, to found a government at once strong and free, in which the only monarch known should be the people's will. Having thrown off the yoke of foreign bondage, they resolved to "govern themselves." What are the foundation stones upon which the new republic was laid? One of these is "Popular Sovereignty." The people are the source of all political power—Government is created for their good. The collected will of the people is sovereign. Foreign nations laughed at our experiment. They said it would perish before the men who founded it, that it could not survive a century.

Another foundation stone of the republic was "Religious Liberty." America was to be a land where every man could sit under his own vine and fig tree. All men, bond and free, Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, were to stand on a level.

No taxation without representation was another foundation stone. They also decreed that the constitution itself must be the creature of the people.

Such were the foundations laid. These stones being laid, they were cemented together with the blood of the builders, and our present government is a monument to the courage zeal and deliberation of its founders.

Let us now survey the rising walls of this structure. The work of our public men in the first half century of our nation's life was good, bad and indifferent. Office was as alluring, then as now, and to the average politician it has not yet lost its charms.

The immunities and privileges however which were vouchsafed by the constitution, did not lose their value. Free speech, the ballot, popular representation, these have always been prized in America and enjoyed too.

Passing on to scrutinize the builders of the near past and the present, we have no reason to lose confidence in the ultimate success of our experiment. No age ascribes the full measure of praise which is due to its great men. One hundred years hence many names will be held in reverence which are not as highly honored as they should be to-day. I would as soon crown a live hero as immortalize a dead saint. I claim that we have been living beside great men. We look back to revolutionary times and say, "There were giants in those days." Yes, that is true, but there have been giants in these days. The men who bore our flag during the rebellion were impelled by a motive, and that motive was the preservation of a free representative government.

What is to be the future of the republic? That depends upon ourselves. The stream rises no higher than its source, and as the people in this land are the source of all power, the future of the republic will be determined by them.

To this and coming generations, devolves the responsibility of carying on to completion the ideal conceived by our fathers.

We must keep alive the ideal which animated the founders of the government: popular sovereignty, equality of all men before the law, a civil service whose test shall be merit only, and free schools.

The dangers which threaten us lie in the antagonism between labor and capital, the withdrawal of the wise and cultured from practical politics.

After a piece of music by the Macon band, and the benediction, the crowd went down town to dine and drink beer, if they wanted it and could find it.

The afternoon was devoted to games and races. Mr. Daniel Austin, of Tecumseh, sanded his clothes and plucked a twenty shilling revolver from the top of the greased pole. Mr. Austin also distanced his competitors and took first money in the wheelbarrow race. Will Muir kicked dust in the eyes of all 15 rod runners, and pocketed first money in that race. Eugene Van DeMark ran faster than the rest of the 13 year old boys in the boy's race, and gobbled up the enormous prize of 50 cents.

The fire-works in the evening had been well selected and the display was brilliant. The crowd through the entire day was orderly, and every one seemed to have a pleasant time.

Mr. Frederick Broadbent had his skull crushed and was instantly killed last Friday morning by the falling of a section of a monument from off a wagon that had been fitted out to display samples of goods from Mr. Marsteller's marble works in the procession. The stone was started from its base by the front wheels of the wagon going down into the ditch of the road that had recently been turnpiked at the crossing by Mill st. Mr. Broadbent stood behind the stone and as it fell, grabbed it with both hands and fell with it to the ground, a corner of the stone striking his head just above the temple. Three minutes later the heart ceased to beat. Mr. Broadbent was a native of England and he and his wife have no relatives this side of the Atlantic. The funeral occured Sunday, and was conducted under Masonic rites, the procession being led by the Clinton band. Mr. Broadbent led a quiet inoffensive life and had many friends in this community. He was 46 years old, was a true and consistent Christian, and leaves a wife to mourn his loss.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Best Ice Cream at C. K. Spafford's.

Orange blossoms in this vicinity in the near future.

Chas. Fisk of Detroit is in town this week.

The regular meeting of the Council was held Monday night. The meeting adjourned to meet again Wednesday evening.

Mr. J. B. Laffin is the coming Proffessor that will boss the teaching of the young idea how to shoot in the Clinton Schools next year and he hails from Ypsilanti.

Miss Flora Rich who is teaching near Stanton spent the 4th with her sister, Mrs. J. W. Burchard.

The well on the North side of the Woolen mill brings the Thermometer down to 41°. It is probably the coldest well in town.

Carl Burton is spending a few days at Lyons, Ohio.

The Baptist people will hold an ice cream festival in St. John's vacant furniture rooms next Saturday evening.

Postmaster Rose is visiting friends in Hudson and Brooklyn, New York; and will "take in" Hinsdale, New Hampshire, before he returns home.

Hause Bro's have recently put a new engine in their Cider Mill.

Miss Helen Milspaugh, Assistant in the Romeo schools last year, is spending the summer vacation in Clinton.

Rev. Mr. Munger, of Tecumseh, will occupy the Baptist pulpit in this place next Sunday morning.

John N'Estelle and Clarence Case drove over from Manchester last Sunday to attend the funeral of Mr. Broadbent.

Dr. A. W. Alvord, of Battle Creek, has been calling on his many friends in this village the past week.

The band boys intend to hold a social some evening next week at the residence of Mrs. Pomeroy's. The boys are in debt as yet for instruments and uniforms and will endeavor to square up with the world and pay an hundred cents on the dollar by holding a series of socials. A musical program (of merit, of course) will be presented, and ice cream furnished. Every one and their spare change are cordially invited.

Miss Laura Haggart is spending the summer vacation with her sister, Mrs. Wellwood near Wampler's lake.

Census enumerator, D. Keyes, has completed his duties. The population of the township and village together is 1415, of the village alone, 842, which leaves 573 in the township outside the village. The population of the village in 80 was 927, and of the township 652, a loss of 85 in the village and 79 in the township the past 4 years. This falling off in the village is probably due to the closing of the woolen mill; but the loss in the township outside of the village is not so easily explained. The most probable cause, perhaps, is the increased number of labor saving machines introduced among the farmers and the gradual purchase of small farms by the larger farmers adjoining them.

C. K. Spafford has fitted up the old News office for Ice Cream rooms, and is working up a good trade.

D. Keyes, our census enumerator, has completed his canvass. The population of Clinton township is 573, of the village 842; total 1415.

Henry Luteman celebrated the 4th and no one seemed to object. He celebrated the 5th, also, until late in the afternoon when the village marshall thought he ought to be sheltered and locked him up in one of the smallest rooms in the Town hall. He remained there over Sunday and admitted to Justice Brown Monday morning that he had been drunk and disorderly and paid one dollar fine and costs.

The band boys wish to return their heartiest thanks to the good people of Clinton and vicinity who assisted them in any way the 4th, and especially to those people that donated victuals and to the ladies, that prepared and served them. The band also desires to have known that D. H. Silvers made no charges for the use of his building in which the dinner was served; for which the band is truely grateful and have given Mr. Silvers a vote of thanks.

The Macon band gained many friends and not a few laurels by their gentlemanly behavior and good music here the 4th. For so young a band the general verdict was that they did well.

Mrs. Harland, an old resident of this village, died at her home the morning of the 4th. The lady was in an advanced age, being 80 years old at the time of her death.

A tall young man and his girl, whose names we suppress, thought they would witness the display of fire works Friday night from a rather romantic and secluded spot. Some of the more brilliant pieces of fire works that illumined the heavens and surrounding country disclosed to the assembled multitudes the young man in the act of—yum yum—well, we cannot express what was seen; but at any rate the entire crowd was in danger of turning itself into a kissing bee from sympathy, and only deserted as the music from the ten-cent dance close by struck up.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

The glorious Fourth has been gotten over, but the independence that prompted some to warlike demonstration, has degenerated into dependence on mother and the doctor. Eddie Cook and Willie Foster narrowly escaped death, but it is uncertain if Eddie will ever see again. Its the same old story of a toy cannon and lighted match dropped into the powder can. On sober reflection it seems as if money paid for such dangerous playthings would have been better spent in the purchase of some other celebrant. One would think the fashion of buying explosives would have exploded long ago, for their noise leaves no pleasanter memory than a shudder; and to lose eyes, or gain a scar, is an extravagant price to pay for a play-day in one case, and in the other a prize none will envy the winner. Would not a picnic by nearest grove, lake or lawn, with boyish orators to wear the honors; games, good nature, with dinner and supper in the margin and afterglow, be as satisfactory to all parties, as the headaches and heartaches resulting from torpedo temporary insanity?

Its awful to tear ones own head off, of course; and thank goodness we don't have to petition to have the privilege redyed, but unless the work is thoroughly done, it pans out personal desecration more trying to nerves than the Sabbath kind. Ministers are making themselves disagreeable about the kind of Sunday they sketch, would be as near a misfit between Saturday night and Monday morning as a toad put between a hot griddle and snowball for a sandwich. I am sure I should not know what to do with any such day if it came ready made. The weeks spicing unfits most folks for assimilating their dispositions with the fearful calm outlined by the new theology which employs overmuch persuasion and fanatical petitions of bias minded women as weapons to abridge personal liberty and flat out everything. No wonder the powers that be keep out of quorum; it would be the worst fix they could get into. If their well meaning persecutors would stop to think, they would soon know that by law women must petition, pray, and cry about, to insure its being respected, is not popular with its dispensers. Its a good way to amuse women, who sooner or later learn that is about all there is done. There influence is immense but it gets muddled by its representatives. It will take a cute politician to bridge the wide chasm between a whole week of tipsy reveling and Sunday holiness, to make the six days preparatory exercises in street brawl and basement burrow culminate in devout attitude and respectful demeanor on the seventh. I am told Blaine and taxation are the hope of this reform. Tobacco, whisky and women have proved a reliable basis of revenue in the past, and unless his ability to tax should fail, there is small chance of disappointment for his admirers.

TIPTON TATTLE.

The glorious fourth passed away very quietly at the cornors as many of our people went to Adrian, Tecumseh and Clinton to celebrate, while a few ventured a slender reputation at the midnight dance in the region of Sand lake.

Mr. Knight is now very sick and for several days has been confined to his bed. Though his complaint is not definitely defined it is supposed to have resulted from work in the hay field.

The Congregational people celebrated Children's day last sabbath, and are to be congratulated on the success of the occasion. The floral decorations were not gorgeous, but neat, in good taste and commendable. The speaking of the children reflected considerable credit upon themselves and all concerned. The singing gave evidence of superior talent in the direction of music, the house was crowded and all were well pleased.

Traffic in store goods seems to prevail openly and freely at the establishments on the corners during the entire sabbath day in consequence of which the air becomes a little turbulent with the murmuring complaints of those who wish to see the sabbath day respected somewhat in accordance with its benevolent design.

With some gravity of countenance John Conlin is now casting about for some eligible position from which to repel the threatening assaults of an inveterate enemy whose prudence is apt to be realized by the shivering and burning sensations alternately enforced.

The hay crop now being gathered is highly satisfactory both in quality and quantity, and in some instances very heavy, the weather also being splendidly in season.

The wheat fields could hardly be surpassed in the enormous yield which they promise of first class grain and now beckon the farmer to the ready harvest.

Cherries are abundant and ripe and the busy robins have inaugurated the greatest activity in pressing their claims thereupon.

Rev. Whiteley has been having a sharp tussle with the chills, but now apparently he is fairly installed master of the situation.

ONSTED ODDS.

Haying is nearly done in this vicinity and the wheat is about fit to cut.

J. E. Gibbs made another shipment of wool to Boston on Monday last.

Tinners from Tecumseh have been at work at E. Harris' and E. A. Taylor's this week.

These are busy days for our blacksmith, Mr. Charles Marshall.

Frank Glenn, a fireman on the Chicago and North western R. R. is visiting his parents here.

Lieut. B. L. Read, of the U. S. Navy, who has been home on a visit returned to duty on the coast of Maine on Monday last.

R. L. Glenn opened his store on the 3rd. inst. Onsted now boasts of two stores and will without doubt be deserving of the name village at no distant day.

MACON MOLECULES.

Tarred roofs are becoming quite fashionable in Macon.

Many Maconites enjoyed the scenery of Sand lake on the Fourth.

We are glad to see Bradley Scudder in his store again.

Mr. and Mrs. Milan Sage went to Monroe on the Fourth.

Dr. Chambers, of Fort Wayne, Ind., is visiting his sister, Mrs Edwin Howell, this week.

The school board are having a new walk constructed along the school grounds. This will be a decided improvement.

The census just taken shows that Morenci has 1,294 inhabitants, and Seneca township 2,741. Four years ago Morenci had 1,209.

Tecumseh Herald

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 10, 1884.

SPRING IN THE ALLEY.

She stooped and told him that the Spring was born;
A ring of triumph in her fresh young voice:
For she, poor child, was in her life's glad morn,
And the soft sunshine made her heart rejoice.
"Won't thou not longing for the Spring?" she said;
But the pale sufferer sadly shook his head,

And gazed with yearning eyes upon her face,
Till his pure beauty filled his soul with peace.
Then smoothed her locks and in a fond embrace,
Clasping her slender form, he whispered: "Cease
To sing the praises of the young Spring flowers:
Child of the narrow court! they are not ours!"

O'er the despondent sufferer bending low,
Till her fair tresses swept his throbbing brow,
With tender glistening eyes and cheeks aglow
With joy and hope, she softly told him how,
Not very far away, the golden bees
Wooed the white clusters of the hawthorn trees.

She spoke of twittering birds, and raised her eyes,
Bright with the glory of poetic thought,
To the dark ceiling that shut out the skies,
And lowered upon her, as she vainly sought,
With words of loving sympathy, to cheer
The flickering life that suffering made so dear.

For oh, that life, unlovely though it seemed,
Was the dear object of her fondest love;
Volumes of witching poesy she dreamed,
Morn, noon and evening, as she bent above
His weary form, yet neither light nor bloom
Could tempt her footsteps from that dingy room.

Oft, when she heard his hollow cough, she wept
In the still midnight—how it wrung her heart!
Yea, she could hear it even when she slept,
And often wakened with a feverish start,
Beseeching God, in many a tearful prayer,
To ease the pain that she so longed to share.

Blithely she carolled when the morning sun
Rose over the alley like a blushing bride;
Or grave and silent, like some meek-faced nun,
Plied she her needle by the sufferer's side—
And oh, it was so sweet to toil for him
That her hands trembled, and her eyes grew dim!

Till from those weary hands her work would fall,
And her dim vision could distinguish naught
Save the black spiders crawling on the wall,
And the dead vipers she herself had bought
With the few coppers she had stored away
From her poor scanty earnings day by day.

For when before the market-stall she stood,
Her little purse clasped tightly in her hand,
She needs must purchase—for each dewy bud
Seemed like a messenger from fairy land;
And well her fine poetic fancy knew
The sheltered places where the violets grew.

And when she raised them to her eager lips
With the pure rapture of a little child,
The dewdrops twinkled on their azure tips,
Till the young dreamer bent her face and smiled
With the sweet consciousness that they would bring
Into the meanest slum a breath of Spring.

Returning home her joyous footsteps fell
Like the soft patter of the summer rain:
And oh, one weary sufferer knew it well,
And moaned a welcome from his bed of pain
Close to his breast she crept, and kneeling there,
He twined the violets in her sunny hair.

Charmed from his fretful mood, the sufferer laid
One thin white hand upon her worn gray dress;
"Dear child!" he murmured, while the sunbeams played
Athwart the sick room and each wandering tress,
"Would now the hand fell on the rosy morn,
I, too, am grateful that the Spring is born!"

—Fanny Forrester, in Chambers' Journal.

THEIR FIRST QUARREL.

If there was one thing that she particularly disliked it was a dog. Her antipathy to the whole canine species was unreasonable, but like all women she asserted her right to be unreasonable when she pleased, and now she thought it too bad that a dog and a poodle at that should be allowed to disturb the smooth current of their matrimonial bliss. They had been married just a month, had Jack Applegate and Winnie Matthews, and as yet she had scarcely grown accustomed to being called Mrs. John Applegate. That month had been spent in a delightful honeymoon trip, and never had young married people enjoyed themselves more fully, but now on returning home came the first domestic jar. It was all occasioned by a note that Jack found awaiting him. It read:

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.

Dear Jack: Just heard of the happy event. Let me congratulate you. Will send you and your other half a Rocky Mountain poodle by Adams express to commemorate the occasion. With joy to yourself and bride.

FRANK PARSONS.

"Ah," said Jack, on reading the note, "Frank has heard of our marriage. The dear old fellow, and though he is way out in San Francisco yet he is bound to remember us with some kind of a present. Peculiar idea to send us a poodle, eh? Frank always was a little odd. That's how he came to go West and seek his fortune on the Pacific Slope. Now, the first thing that is to be done is to write to the good old boy, telling him that for his sake we will always cherish the gift."

"But," objected Winnie, "you know I can't endure dogs, and poodles especially."

"Yes," said Jack, reflectively, "I know you don't like them, but in this case you might make an exception. Frank is my oldest and best friend."

"Your best friend," interrupted his wife, with an injured expression.

"Of course," he continued, "I mean my best male friend, and what he wouldn't do for me is not worth doing. Why, we roomed together at college, and once he saved my life. I am eternally indebted to him, and his poodle, even though it is an unusual wedding present, should be received with distinguished honors."

"Still I can't endure dogs; I detest the very sight of them."

"But Frank's dog ought to be liked for the giver, and I think it rather inconsiderate in you to make the least objection."

"Inconsiderate!" and Winnie's face flushed. "I'm not at all inconsiderate, and if I don't like dogs I don't, Frank or no Frank!"

"Winnie," slowly remarked her husband, "do not get excited over so small a matter. Of course we will do what we can for the animal. It is not every couple that can start out with a Rocky Mountain poodle, and from what I have heard they are the best watch dogs in the world."

"That is all very true, Jack, but I dislike dogs more than I can tell and I will never be happy with one in the house. To please me you'll give this poodle away when it arrives, won't you, Jack?" and Winnie's tones were soft and pleading.

"Give it away!" exclaimed her husband. "Give away a wedding present! That would be a rank discourtesy. You wouldn't propose to give away any of the rest of the presents, would you? Mr. Forbes' silver set, for instance, or your father's sideboard, or my mother's parlor set? No, no, Winnie, that would never do."

Jack, in fact, thought more of Frank than young men usually do of their chums, and so the bare suggestion of treating his gift with indignity was enough to make him flare up in righteous indignation. That his wife shou'd not share his feelings toward his friend was a matter of surprise as well as of disappointment. Still he was determined that the dog or poodle, whichever it was, should be well treated, and if Frank had seen fit to kindly give it them, they at least would take care of it. His wife not only disliked dogs, but she had hitherto found her husband as tractable as could be wished, and she was not a little vexed to find that her will was not on all occasions his supreme law. It was all the more provoking that he should so stubbornly oppose her, and all for an insignificant poodle. But at all events she believed in a wife asserting her rights, and she had no intention of yielding without a struggle.

"Jack," she resumed, "do you love me?"

"Yes."

"Love me so much that you want me to be very happy?"

"Of course I do."

"And yet you want to bring a great black poodle dog into our home to torment me, for I never could have a moment's peace if there was a dog about."

"But it is a present from Frank."

"And does Frank come before your wife?"

"Winnie, how can you be so cruel? I care more about you than all the world beside."

"And yet you won't do even a little thing to please me."

"You're unreasonable, Winnie, perfectly unreasonable. This poodle, when it gets here, will have come all the way from San Francisco, and if you care anything about me or my friends you would only be too glad to receive it."

And so their quarrel began. Their first quarrel, and they had only been married a month. The outside world may think it a very trivial matter, but to them it was the most serious thing in life. Both were perfectly sincere in the opinion that the other was to blame. She thought that he should be willing to dispose of such a valueless thing as a poodle if she wished it, and he thought that for his old-time friend she should make much of his gift. But it would be a waste of words to attempt to follow the arguments and counter-arguments concerning that poodle, which, for all they knew, might never have left San Francisco. The more his discourse the more the animal appeared as the paragon of all earthly virtues, while she continued to paint it as a blacker and still blacker, ferocious and blood-thirsty wolf. This heated discussion was an inauspicious way of beginning life beneath their own roof-tree, but neither paused to think of that. Finally Jack rose from his chair, and standing up in oratorical fashion, as he did when he was very much in earnest, he said:

"Mrs. Applegate, that poodle is coming, and we must receive it in decent style, so:"

It was the first time in all their married life that he had coldly and formally addressed her as "Mrs. Applegate," and for the moment she felt the blood in her heart chilling. Then her woman nature reasserted itself, and in a voice fully as determined as his, she began:

"Jack, if you wish to destroy the peace of our happy home——"

But Jack was gone, and instead of completing the sentence she walked into the next room and, throwing herself upon the bed, cried as if her heart would break.

Her husband, when he left the house, rapidly walked down the gravel walk they lived in the suburbs and lighting a cigar, began smoking furiously. He did not return until supper, and then the subject of debate was evidence that their quarrel was still uppermost in their minds.

The next day, some hours after Jack had left for business, Mrs. Applegate was surprised to see three or four workingmen prepared with tools and lumber in the yard. Not knowing their business she slipped on her hat, and going out, inquired:

"Going to build a dog-kennel, sum," answered one of the men. "Mr. Applegate said as how he was going to get a Rocky Mountain poodle, whatever that may be, and he left orders this morning for a kennel."

And what could Mrs. Applegate do? She could not order the work stopped or hinder it in any way, as it would be degrading to her self-respect to reveal to these workingmen that she and her husband were not in perfect accord. So she merely nodded, and going into the house listened all the morning to the hammering, and it seemed as if every nail that was driven sent a pang through her heart. Such is the strange perversion of women, however, that she prepared a dinner of those things which her husband particularly liked, and in the little womanly touches about the house she did all she could to make everything attractive. At dinner Jack was unusually jolly, and he tried to make up for her silence by a constant flow of small talk. After the meal he went into the yard and leisurely inspected the nearly completed dog kennel.

"Nice bit of architecture, that," he casually remarked, on returning.

"Oh, Jack!" said his wife, with half a sigh.

"Now, Winnie," he began, "do be reasonable. This thing——"

But he said no more, for she had rushed into another room, and closing the door was lost to sight and hearing. Feeling decidedly uncomfortable, but still with the reassuring consciousness that he was in the right, Jack Applegate left his home without making the least attempt to kiss his wife good-by. With the poodle in his thoughts he went to the office of the express company and asked if a dog for him had arrived. No, no such animal had come. Then he explained to the expressman that he was expecting a Rocky Mountain poodle, and that it might be well fed and cared for on the road he left quite a sum of money. Then he serenely proceeded to business.

Meanwhile at home his wife was as miserable as she well could be. In one breath she blamed herself, in the next he was at fault. She felt that her heart was breaking, and life no longer was as bright as it had appeared during the happy days of the honey-moon. When Jack returned she was still gloomy and depressed. Supper was melancholy enough, and Jack did not allude to the poodle question until it was over.

"I was at the express office to-day," he observed.

She did not reply or even look up.

"Yes," he continued, ignoring her silence, "but there was no news of our San Francis o wedding present."

Then he paused, but still no answer.

"By the way," he went on, studiously not noticing the fact that she was silent, "what do you think will be a good name for the animal? Seeing that he comes from the metropolis of the Pacific slope, wouldn't it be a good idea to call him 'Frisco?' 'Frisco,' 'Frisco,' that's not such a bad name for a dog, is it, eh?"

"Jack Applegate!" cried his wife, with a sudden burst of anger, "you're a cruel, unloving husband," and then she sought the refuge of her chamber, and like the bride of a month sobbed in despair of soul. The world had grown black to her and no longer was there joy or brightness in it.

It would be hard to describe the miseries and discomforts of Jack Applegate and his wife for the next few days. He tried to be buoyant, but all to no purpose; and for her part she was thoroughly unhappy. That such a state of affairs could ever have existed would, but a few short days ago, have seemed impossible. Now it was a sad reality. Every day Jack would call at the express office and inquire concerning the expected poodle, but there was no news of it. Meanwhile he had the name "Frisco," painted on the kennel, which, standing conspicuously in the yard, ever reminded his wife of the deplorable and unspannable chasm that was widening between them.

Not to continue this story to an unreasonable length, let it be said that matters went on thus, growing worse and worse every day, for a full week. Then one morning, shortly after Jack had left for business, what should drive up to the door but one of the large wagons of the Adams Express Company, and Mrs. Applegate signed a receipt in a big book for a bulky bundle which was carried into the hall and there left. It was addressed to her husband, and under the present condition of affairs she did not presume to open it. Ordinarily she would have taken the trouble to have seen what it was, but, as affairs were not at all as they should have been, she allowed the bundle to remain undisturbed where the expressman had thrown it. When Jack returned at noon she told him of it, and he cut the cords and unwrapped the thick papers, she, meanwhile, not wishing to appear curious, retiring to the dining room.

Jack worked several moments before the contents of the package were reached, and then out rolled a glossy, long-haired skin of a grizzly bear, the head with its glaring eyes and horrible teeth being perfect. It was as beautiful a skin as is possible to imagine, and for a moment he stood lost in admiration. Then he noticed that an envelope had dropped from its folds. Picking it up, he read:

SAN FRANCISCO.

DEAR JACK: Hope you'll like the Rocky Mountain poodle. Shot him myself.

FRANK PARSONS.

That was all, but, like a flash, it came to Jack that poodle may have more than one meaning.

"Winnie!" he called, and his voice had the old, loving ring.

She came, looked at the bear skin, read the brief note, and, in a moment, realized it all.

"Oh, Jack!" was all she said, and a moment afterward he held her in his strong arms and their kisses were those of mutual reconciliation.

That night he chopped up the kennel for kindling, and, were it not for the bear skin, which they call "Frisco," there would be nothing left to remind them of their First Quarrel.—James A. Green, in Philadelphia Call.

Simple Styles for Wash Dresses.

Tucked waists belted and a round skirt with tucks and no overskirt are in favor for simple wash dresses of white Victoria lawn, linen lawn, plain colored Chambervs, gingham, etc. The wide belt is covered by a sash of the material, which has a large bow and tucked ends in the back to serve as the only drapery. For the skirt of such a dress of Victoria lawn three breadths are used, two of which are straight, while that in front is shaped toward the top, and these are gathered to a belt, with the fullness massed quite far back. Ten or twelve tucks, each two and a half or three inches wide, are straight around the skirt, covering it from about a fourth of a yard below the waist almost to the foot, where a single frill of embroidery or a tucked and gathered flounce of the lawn gives a neat finish. The gathered belted waist is cut long enough to extend over the hips, and all that part below the belt is concealed by the skirt, which is put on after the waist is adjusted; the belt is stitched on outside the gathers, and this belt is concealed by a stiffly lined belt of the plain lawn or of insertion, which supports the soft muslin sash, that may be passed around the entire waist, or else only attached to the sides, and tied across the back. When tucks are preferred in these waists there are usually six or eight half-inch tucks placed lengthwise in the front and in the back, half of them being turned each way to meet in the middle. A Byron collar and a single frill of embroidery finish the neck and sleeves; a long-looped bow of rose, blue, or ivory white ribbon is at the throat, and a smaller bow catches up the embroidery on each sleeve. These dresses are easily "done up," and the fashion of making them is excellent for the simple prints, percales, and lawns that are pretty by reason of their freshness, and must therefore be frequently washed and ironed.—Harper's Bazar.

How Watch Cases are Made.

The many great improvements introduced in the manufacture of the Jas. Boss' Gold Watch Case, have led to similar improvements in the making of silver cases.

Under the old methods, each part of a silver case was made of several pieces of metal soldered together, requiring a great amount of cutting and soldering, which softened the metal and gave it the pliability of lead rather than the elasticity of silver.

Under the improved methods, each part of the Keystone Silver Watch Case is made of one solid piece of metal hammered into shape. The advantages are readily apparent, for every one knows that hammering hardens the metal while soldering softens it.

To test the superiority of the Keystone Silver Watch Case, take one of 3 oz. weight, press it squarely in the center when closed, and it will not give, while a case of same weight of any other make will give enough to break the crystal. The Keystone Silver Watch Case is made only with silver cap and gold joints.

AMONG RAILROAD MEN.

Popularity and Usefulness of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy—A Thrilling Letter from a Master Mechanic.

Master Mechanic's and Superintendent's office, Lowell Repair Shops of Boston & Lowell R.R., LOWELL, MASS., March 25, 1881.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N.Y.

DEAR SIR,—I think it is due to you that I should make the following statement, and I make it voluntarily and willingly: On the 4th day of June, 1881, I was taken with what was called paralysis of the bowels. The seizure was unexpected and terrible. The stomach and other organs seemed to sympathize with it and to have lost all power of action. For a long time my life was despaired of, but at length I recovered so far as to be able to ride out. By the advice of my physician I visited Poland Springs, Vt., hoping to benefit from the waters, but they did me no good. Neither were the best physicians of Lowell and Boston, whom I consulted, able to afford me more than transient relief. I gained no strength and my case appeared almost hopeless. In the fall a friend advised me to try KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, and although opposed to patent medicines I made the trial. To make a long story short—Favorite Remedy, in my opinion, saved my life. I consider it the best preparation in the world for stomach difficulties, as well as of the liver and other organs. I am glad to say it is in general use among the R. R. men in this vicinity.

Yours, etc., A. J. GIFFORD.

Mr. Gifford is the Master Mechanic of the Lowell division of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and his illness and recovery are known to many who can testify to the facts in his letter.

Use this medicine for all diseases of the blood, kidney, liver, stomach, bowels and skin. It may save you or yours from pain and death.

Address, if desired, Dr. David Kennedy, Roundout, N. Y.

SCROFULA.

A remedy that can destroy the germs of scrofula, and when once settled has the power to root it out, must be appreciated by those afflicted. The remarkable cures of young children and the more wonderful cures of those of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA to be a reliable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARREN, N. H., Jan. 31, 1880.

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The doubtful condition of health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in Hood's SARSAPARILLA and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of Hood's SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,

A Huge Electric Battery.

In erecting the great statue of Liberty, two things had to be considered that seem very trifling, and yet, if neglected, might destroy the statue in one day, or cause it to crumble slowly to pieces. One is the sun, the other is the sea-breeze. Either of these could destroy the great copper figure, and something must be done to prevent such a disaster. The heat of the sun would expand the metal and pull it out of shape, precisely as it does pull the Brooklyn bridge out of shape every day. The bridge is made in four parts, and when they expand with the heat of the sun they slide one past the other and no harm is done. The river span rises and falls day and night, as heat and cold alternate. The great copper statue is likewise in two parts, the frame-work of iron and the copper covering, and while they are securely fastened together they can move one over the other. Each bolt will slip a trifle as the copper expands in the hot August sunshine, and slide back again when the freezing winds blow and the vast figure shrinks together in the cold. Besides this, the copper surface is so thin and elastic that it will bend slightly when heated, yet keep its general shape.

The salt air blowing in from the sea has thin fingers and a bitter, biting tongue. If it finds a crack where it can creep in between the copper surface and iron skeleton, there will be trouble at once. These metals do not agree together, and where there is salt moisture in the air they seem to quarrel more bitterly than ever. It seems that every joining of points of copper and iron makes a tiny battery, and so faint shivers of electricity would run through all the statue, slowly corroding and eating it into dust. This curious, silent, and yet sure destruction must be prevented, and so every joint throughout the statue, wherever copper touches iron, must be protected with little rags stuffed between the metals to keep them from quarreling. It is the same wherever two different metals touch each other. Imagine what a tremendous battery the Liberty would make, with its tons of copper surface and monstrous skeleton of iron. However, a little care prevents all danger, as provision will be made, of course, for keeping the metals from touching each other. — Charles Barnard, in St. Nicholas.

How Roman Women Beautify Their Complexions.

Complexions differ very much with the climate. The English have, beyond a doubt, the most beautiful complexions in the world. American girls possess more beauty of feature, perhaps, but their complexions are not nearly so fine. As one goes further south toward the equator, one sees darker skin and darker hair and eyes, for all these physical characteristics have reference to climatic influences. Upon two things the condition of the skin depends—oil and coloring matter. The skin of a very old man or woman, for want of oil, becomes like wrinkled, dried-up parchment; an Albino has scarce any coloring matter in his hair, eyes or complexion. To finish, I will give you a receipt for beautifying the complexion—the one used by the dames of ancient Rome. Probably it is familiar to many, but there may be others who have never read it. These ladies made a stiff paste of rye four, and covered their faces with it on retiring. In the morning they washed it off with milk (they never used water), and applied a little powder if it was deemed necessary. This, we are told on good authority, is really the best method of improving the complexion that has ever been used, either in ancient or modern times. The rye four is said to positively draw from the skin any marks that may have lingered on it. Moreover, it makes the complexion charmingly soft—an effect which the milk helps to produce. Several Parisian belles adopted this plan, and it is rumored that the Empress Eugenie tried it. At all events the ladies who are known to have followed the receipt of the Romans are also those who have been celebrated for their lovely skins. In spite of the opinion of the clever druggist, this is doubtless very efficacious in softening and bleaching the skin. — Toronto Globe.

Believed to Be a Fiction.

Julian Arnold said that "his father, Edwin Arnold, wrote the most of 'Light of Asia' on the cuff of his shirt sleeve, while riding in the cars to and from his office. He says his father went into London every morning, and during the ride would write on his cuff with a pencil. In the evening, after his return home, he copied the lines off on paper, and in this way wrote most of the poem." If Julian Arnold really said that he probably told more lies in those few lines than he ever told in the same space before. This "cuff writing" business, dearly beloved, is a beautiful, but rather gauzy fable that exists in the highly imaginable intellects of young journalists, of some three or four days' experience in the dog tight and fire department of an able journal. A cuff is an awkward thing to write on at best, and it is very seldom that a newspaper man is so reduced for stationery as to be compelled to write poems and leaders on his cuffs. Especially when the "concern" furnishes note books and lap tablets. When you hear a man telling how he took down a three-column speech, at midnight, in a pelting storm, on his cuff, ask him if he didn't see to write his notes by the lurid glare of his nose. The one is quite as probable as the other. No more of this "cuff" business, Julian. It does not need that any man should come all the way from England to tell us such stuff as that. We have some good old romances right here in America. Honestly, we never knew but one reporter who claimed to take all his notes on his cuffs. And we never saw him but once with cuffs on his wrists. And they were so dirty he couldn't make a legible mark on them with anything except a piece of chalk. Call up the next squib.—Burlington Hawkeye.

The College Graduate.

The trouble with the college graduate is that he goes from his college into the world equipped for everything in general and nothing in particular. He doesn't imagine that this is the case. He has far more assurance than he will have six months from now. He is ready and anxious to attempt anything; but he is really, so far as practical money making is concerned, as helpless as an infant.

While he has been acquiring a smattering of many good, but superfluous things, various other young men have been fitting themselves for special kinds of work and have mastered them. It is questionable whether the latter have not chosen better than he. If he needs to work in order to live, and most young men do. He will receive many hard knocks before he is successful, and they will drive from his overstocked head a good deal of the acquired knowledge that is not practically necessary. His dead languages are excellent to have, but they will not earn him his bread and butter. He has various accomplishments, but few of them are of real value in every-day life. He has passed four years as a preface to real life, and at the end of them he finds that he must pass four years more before he can hope to be recognized as the master of any profession.

This young man, gay, confident and happy, thinks, as he steps from the college door, sheep-skin in hand, that he has but to will in order to conquer. The rebuffs that meet him, the disappointments he must undergo, are painful to contemplate. Thousands of young men whom he views from a lofty height, are abler and more successful than he. Their attainments are not so numerous, but they have learned thoroughly the things they know. Life is so short, at its best, that it is worthy of consideration whether they have not acted more wisely than he. They are certainly more successful from a business point of view, and, after all, most men work for money. But their success grates upon his sensitive nerves. He feels for a few years as if he were not sufficiently appreciated. He becomes cynical, and curls his lip as he reflects upon the good fortune of men who have not had his advantages. His acquirements have taught him no philosophy for such a situation. He has met the great enemy, the world, and finds himself thrown, and it gratifies him to think, not that he has deservedly failed, but that the world is a fool, not to say a scoundrel.

However, the young man recovers from this in due season. If the knowledge he won during his college years is of no immediate practical value, it stands by him as he grows older and comforts him in a thousand ways. There is so much to learn that his four years of absorption have furnished him merely with hints; but these hints are valuable, and with his comb properly trimmed and his pretty plumes gone he finds it easy to make them useful. He proposed in the beginning to conquer the world, but he finds after some years of reflection and hard work that one does pretty well if he conquers a bush wherewith to provide shade and shelter. That, however, is the experience of most men, and after all, and regardless of the colleges, the Alexanders, like the poets, are born, not made.—N. Y. Graphic.

Tattooing a Fine Art.

"Edwin Thomas, tattooing artist," was the sign that greeted the eyes of a Tribune reporter at South street and Old Slip. Two flights up, in a room furnished with a desk and half a dozen chairs, the "artist" was found at work. Three stalwart and sun-browned sailors were lounging about the room. By the window sat Mr. Thomas, holding the hand of a sailor lad, which he was tattooing. A saucer containing India ink, and one containing vermilion, stood on a chair by his side. Into one or the other of these saucers he continually dipped four small needles fastened to a handle, and then pricked away at the back of the boy's hand, on which a belligerent eagle, holding in its talons an American flag, was beginning to appear. The sailor boy and his companions watched the work with interest. "Is the operation painful?" asked the reporter. "Not at all," replied the sailor, and Mr. Thomas, seizing the reporter's hand, pricked the back of it with his needles. The puncture was scarcely felt, but a bright red spot, about the size of the point of a pin, was left.

"Do you do much tattooing?" asked the reporter of the "artist."

"Yes. I have all I can do," was the reply. "I have just returned from Chicago, where I have been tattooing a woman for the show business. She was getting eight dollars a week as a waitress before, and now she gets forty five dollars a week in a dime museum. I have tattooed in all four women who are now in museums, and making from forty five to fifty-five dollars a week. I work here in the daytime and up on the Bowery at night. Most of my customers down here are sailors. I am now tattooing the officers and crew of a British bark. I go aboard of her afternoons, and everybody, from the Captain down, is being decorated. I tattoo more mechanics than I do sailors. Sailors generally like eagles, flags or ships. Here is a design that is also popular among sailors."

The tattooer opened a book containing designs drawn in India ink and vermilion, and showed the reporter a representation of an impossible woman, weeping over an improbable monument on which was inscribed: "In memory of my mother." "The mechanics and laborers, whom I tattoo upon the Bowery o' nights bring me all sorts of designs—they generally furnish their own—and seem to be fond of horses and other animals for decorative purposes. For tattooing any one for the show business I get $200. Such designs as those in the book there range from twenty-five cents to two dollars. After a design is pricked in the red generally puffs up a little for a day or two, but occasions no pain."

The sailors present confirmed Mr. Thomas' words and exhibited their arms and hands, covered with anchors, hearts, ships, mourning pieces and other devices.—N. Y. Tribune.

About Corkscrews.

The corkscrew is a contrivance to facilitate the removal of corks from bottles. When a cork protrudes from the neck of the bottle far enough to admit of grasping it with the hand or clinching it with the teeth, a corkscrew is unnecessary. But when a cork is flush with the bottle's mouth, or, through unskillful manipulation, has become lodged down in the neck, a corkscrew is not only a convenience, but almost a necessity. The bottle may be emptied of its liquid contents by crowding the cork down through the neck with a pen holder or any other suitable article that may be at hand, but this method of opening a bottle is generally regarded as inelegant.

There are several kinds of corkscrews. That which has been the longest in use is the simplest. For several hundred years it was the best, until a genius added an improvement which brought it to perfection. The primeval corkscrew consisted of a wire, pointed at one end, twisted into a spiral with about five turns, tempered so as to give rigidity to it, and provided with a wooden handle like that of a gimlet. The spiral part of the wire was about two inches long after being twisted, the part left straight was of about the same length, and the wooden cross piece was round, and about three inches in length and half an inch in diameter. The handle was made fast to the metal by putting the wire through a hole in the wood and clinching it. The metal was not burnished, nor was the wood polished or painted. It is safe to say that there never was a corkscrew job which could not have been accomplished with one of these primeval corkscrews.

The name of the inventor of the corkscrew has not been handed down to these generations. He lived before the days of letters patent. It is held by a certain school of theorists that he was no other than Archimedes. The similarity of the corkscrew to the spiral of Archimedes is $r = a$ theta. The corkscrew can not have a constant equation, for the pitch varies not only in different screws, but in the different spirals of the same screw. A corkscrew fashioned after the equation of the spiral of Archimedes, with important modifications, would be serviceable, but there seems to be no sufficient reason for believing that Archimedes invented the corkscrew.

An important improvement in corkscrews is mentioned in the foregoing. In order to comprehend its value, the practical use of the ordinary corkscrew must be understood. The bottle is grasped by the neck with the left hand, the top of the cork is pricked with the point of the spiral, and about six or seven half twists are given to the corkscrew. The body of the bottle is then gripped between the knees, and a lifting force is applied to the corkscrew and through it to the cork. The removal of the cork is accompanied by a sound which may be fairly imitated by putting the left forefinger in the mouth with its end against the inner surface of the right cheek, inflating the cheek, and then removing the finger by a quick push against the yielding right hand corner of the mouth. His perfected corkscrew has the blunt end of the wire brought back through the wooden handle and twisted around the stem of the corkscrew till it comes down to the top of the spiral, where it is wound into a concentric coil. When the spiral has sunk into the cork the blunt end of this coil strikes against the cork near its periphery, and with the purchase thus obtained the cork is turned around in the neck of the bottle and withdrawn far more gently than with the unimproved corkscrew. A good article of the perfected pattern may be bought for about fifteen cents in almost any general store in the country. In a cutlery establishment in the city the price would not be over seventy five cents.

There are other contemplations which are intended to increase the usefulness of the corkscrew or make it more conveniently portable. A metallic contrivance shaped like the bow of a jews harp, is substituted for the wooden handle, and the stem of the spiral is fastened between the ends of the bow with a pin in such manner that the implement may be shut up like a pocket knife. This pattern of portable corkscrew is adapted for excursion or picnics, where there may be bottles of milk to be opened. There is also a very elaborate kind of corkscrew sold in some of the drug stores and cutlery establishments. It is nickel plated and looks as formidable as a toy steam engine. It is so constructed that after it has been adjusted the engineer has only to keep cranking and the cork will be hoisted high and dry. There are a few rules regarding the use of the corkscrew which are generally observed by the elite. The place to the corkscrew is not by the side of the hostess's plate. Champagne bottles are not opened with a corkscrew, nor condensed milk cans, nor cocoanuts. Any person who has tried to take small cucumber pickles from a bottle with a corkscrew will ever afterward endeavor to have a pickle fork a handy one. It does not go to the extreme of having the pickles removed from the original package before they are brought to the table. It may be set forth as a general rule that any attempt to utilize the corkscrew for any purpose other than the removal of corks will result in embarrassment, and had best not be tried except in privacy.—N. Y. Sun.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The Democratic convention in session at Chicago is the largest national gathering ever held by the Democracy. The big guns of the party are all there, the fight is becoming a hot one, and, no outsider can foretell what the issue will be.

The situation as to candidates is very similar to what it was at the Republican convention. It is Gov. Cleveland against the field. Cleveland will have nearly, if not quite half the votes of the convention on the first ballot. If a majority vote would nominate, he would certainly be the nominee, but under the two-thirds rule he may fail. He is strong enough to combine the field against him, and the field may be strong enough to prevent his receiving a two-thirds vote. Dark horses are little talked of. It will be Cleveland, Thurman, Bayard, McDonald or Butler in all probability. If his own state heartily united on him Cleveland would go in with a whirl, but the violent opposition to him at home may lead the delegates to conclude that his nomination would be imprudent. The old war between the New York factions has opened brilliantly and is waged with an intensity which throws their former conflicts into the shade. A rumor was current yesterday that the New York delegation was endeavoring to harmonize on Hewitt, in which case Cleveland will be withdrawn.

Another bone of contention which seems likely to provoke a red hot fight will be the tariff resolution. The platform committee came to a dead lock on the election of chairman, 18 voting for Morrison, and 18 for Converse, a tariff man from Ohio. Two reports may be presented, in which case a tariff war will be precipitated upon the convention which may last a day or even longer. It is not likely that ballots for candidates will begin before to-morrow, possibly not until Saturday. In the ability of its membership the convention is the strongest in the history of the Democratic party. The intellectual lights, the political managers, the heavy weights, and the factional sky rockets of the party are all there. The convention has the power and opportunity to adopt a platform and select a ticket which will revolutionize the politics of the country in November, but the present outlook is not wholly reassuring. The people can only look on with wonder at the battle of the giants and await the final action of the convention.

LOOK TO YOUR MAPLE TREES.

From many parts of the state comes complaint of injury done to maple trees by the presence of an insect or parasite, unknown in this section at least. The parasites are at work on the many beautiful maples of this vicinity, as well as elsewhere, and the question of how to best exterminate them may soon have to be met. An examination of the under side of the branches of these trees will show the existence of this new pest in the presence of a web like substance, each one containing thousands of eggs. An exchange says in a short time lice are hatched and soon the whole tree is covered with a silky fiber of snowy whiteness and the limbs are as barren of leaves as in winter.

The following article, taken from the Chicago Tribune, throws more light on the subject than anything we have seen: "A few days ago there was received at this office specimens of twigs of maple with insects upon them, with a request for information as to what they were. These were forwarded to Prof. Forbes, state entomologist, who pronounced them the adult female of the maple tree bark louse. I have little doubt that in most cases reported of injury to shade trees it is this insect which is doing the mischief. The technical name of the insect among entomologists is the Lecanium Acericola. It is first noticed in the spring as a white waxy scale-like substance adhering to the under side of the twigs. These are the adult females from the previous year's brood. Their development is described as follows, in notes taken at Peoria in 1877: From May 15th to June 2d, the female gradually enlarged from deposition of eggs within the abdomen. June 6th eggs commenced to issue from the abdomen, and deposited upon the twigs. June 15th young lice first discovered, but deposition of eggs by the adult females still continuing. June 17th young lice crawling quite actively and settling upon the under sides of the leaves. July 3d adult female mostly dead. July 10th male pupae easily distinguished. Aug. 20th males and females copulating. Sept. 5th males disappeared; young females on the leaves. Sept. 30th females moving from the leaves and settling down on the sides of the limbs for winter quarters, where they remain in a dormant state till spring.

Remedies.—When first hatched they are weak and can be easily destroyed by almost any poisonous solution sprayed so freely upon the trees as to saturate the foliage. White hellebore has been found effective in the proportions of one pound to twenty gallons of water. A solution of Tobacco and soap is also good, as would also be a solution of arsenic in the proportion of one pound to 100 gallons of water. It should be dissolved in boiling water, and no stock should be allowed to graze under trees sprayed with it, until there has been a sharp rain to wash from the grass what may have fallen upon it. What is known as the Excelsior force pump, sold by all dealers in seeds and implements, costing $8 retail, furnishes probably as cheap and effectual means for spraying trees to destroy the insects as can be found. Readers will notice that the time for attempting their destruction is as soon as possible after the young are hatched, which in 1877 in the latitude of Peoria was about the middle of June.

A LITTLE LENAWEE COUNTY HISTORY.

The Adrian Times presents the following bit of history in connection with the account of the laying of the corner stone on Saturday:

Lenawee county was laid out in 1822, but was attached to Monroe county. The first settlers in the county were Musgrove Evans, Gen. J. W. Brown, E. F. Blood, Turner Stetson, Nathan Rathbone and Peter Lowry, who took up their residence on the land now occupied by the Globe mills, at Tecumseh. The land surrounding them was soon entered by speculators, and settlers having accumulated in sufficient numbers, the necessary preliminaries were taken for the establishment of a county seat. By act of legislature it was placed at Tecumseh, in June, 1824. A court house and log jail were built, and all the county offices were located at Tecumseh until 1835-6, when the central and southern parts of the county having become somewhat settled, it was deemed expedient to remove the county seat to a more central location. The removal to this city did not, however, actually take place until the first Monday in November, 1838. A jail had meanwhile been constructed here, and in 1839 a court house was erected, the land for the purpose being donated by Addison J. Comstock.

The court house of Lenawee county was destroyed by fire on the morning of March 14, 1852, and the records of the county clerk's office were entirely consumed. The records of the other offices were saved, with the exception of a few books and papers. The old court house was located on the lot in the city of Adrian bounded north by Front street, east by Locust street.

On the 11th day of May, 1852, Henry Hart, Robert Parker, P. Stone, J. Cross, I. French and D. S. Wilkinson, donated the ground where the present county buildings stand, the same being erected by Jas. Berry, under contract with the board of supervisors.

The sessions of the circuit court were held in what was known as Odd Fellows' hall, until 1865. In that year arrangements were made for holding court in the "brick church," now known as Dean's opera house, where court is still held and will continue to be until the completion of the new court house on the site donated by the gentlemen above named in 1852.

Since the destruction of the old court house in 1852, the proposition to raise by tax a fund to build a new structure has been several times submitted to the people, but was each time defeated, until on the 7th of November, A. D. 1882, a proposition was carried at the general election then held, to raise $50,000 to build a court house. There were 7,555 votes cast, of which 5,082 were for the proposition, and 2,473 against it.

In October, 1883, a building committee were chosen by the board to carry out the will of the people. Plans and specifications prepared by E. O. Fallis & Co., of Toledo, O., were adopted, and on April 2, 1884, a contract was entered into with Allen & VanTassell, of Ionia, Mich., for the construction of the building for $47,460. Work was at once commenced, and had so far progressed on June 28, 1884, to lay the corner stone.

The prohibitory liquor law recently passed by the Republican Legislature of Iowa has been very comprehensive in its provisions, even providing for the regulation or the transportation of liquors into and through the state, it being made an offense for agents of railroads to receive such goods for transportation unless the consignor delivers to him a certificate signed by the Auditor of the county to which it is to be shipped, that he has authority to sell liquors in such county. The railroads have given notice of their intention to observe the law.

Hudson Post: Shall we lose our maples? This is a question which is interesting our citizens. Maple trees are covered with cocoons, from which it is said there will emerge a worm, which will destroy the foliage and perhaps ruin the trees. This would be a serious damage to the beauty of our village, as the shade trees are largely maple, and it would take years to replace them.

THE DEMOCRACY.

Meeting of the National Convention to Nominate Candidates for President and Vice President.

Telegram from Tilden Declining the Nomination—Meeting of National Committee and the Selection of Committeemen.

TILDEN'S TELEGRAM.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The following is an authentic copy of a communication to Mr. Barnum, chairman of the National Committee, from Mr. Tilden:

GRAMERCY, July 8, 1884.

To Hon. William H. Barnum, Chicago, Ill.:

I have received your telegram informing me of the decision to nominate me for the Presidency and asking: Will you accept an unanimous nomination? And also a telegram from Mr. Manning, saying: It seems absolutely necessary that you should answer Barnum's telegram as soon as possible. Your inquiry was explicitly answered in the negative by my letter of June 10, to Mr. Manning.

S. J. TILDEN.

The receipt of Tilden's telegram to-night created very little comment. All the electioneering of the past forty-eight hours has not contemplated the contingency of Tilden's acceptance, and consequently it made very little change in the situation.

THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

The Democratic National Committee began its session at noon yesterday, Chairman Barnum presiding. The States were represented as follows: Alabama, M. C. Semple; Arkansas, John J. Sumpter; California, James T. Farley; Colorado, T. M. Patterson; Connecticut, William H. Barnum; Delaware, Ingnatius C. Grubb; Florida, Samuel M. Pulliston; Georgia, George T. Barnes; Illinois, W. C. Gondy; Indiana, Austin H. Brown; Iowa, M. M. Ham; Kansas, Charles W. Blair; Kentucky, Newry D. McHenry; Louisiana, B. F. Jonas; Maine, Edmund Wilson; Maryland, Outerbridge Horsey; Massachusetts, Frederick O. Prince; Michigan, Edward Kanler; Minnesota, P. H. Kelly; Mississippi, W. T. Martin; Missouri, John G. Prather; Nebraska, J. Sterling Morton; Nevada, R. P. Keating; New Hampshire, Alvin Sulloway; New Jersey, Orestes Cleveland; New York, Abram S. Hewitt; North Carolina, N. W. Ransom; Ohio, William W. Armstrong; Oregon, A. Noltner; Pennsylvania, William L. Scott; Rhode Island, J. B. Barnaby; South Carolina, F. W. Dawson; Tennessee, Robert F. Looney; Texas, F. S. Stockdale; Vermont, Bradley B. Smalley; Virginia, John S. Barbour; West Virginia, Alexander Campbell; Wisconsin, William F. Vilas.

Mr. Barnes, of Georgia, nominated Augustus O. Bacon of Georgia, for temporary chairman of the convention. Mr. Stockdale, of Texas, nominated Governor Robert B. Hubbard, Texas. Mr. Martin, of Mississippi, nominated Charlas E. Hooker, of Mississippi. The committee proceeded to ballot with the following result: Whole number of votes cast, 32, of which Hubbard received 22, Bacon 9 and Hooker 6. On motion of Mr. Prince the nomination of Mr. Hubbard was made unanimous. On motion of Mr. Hewitt Mr. Prince was elected temporary secretary of the convention.

The following were elected Assistant Secretaries: E. L. Merritt, of Illinois; George W. Guthrie, of Pennsylvania; G. L. Johnson, of Iowa; Robert M. Bashford, of Wisconsin; Charles M. Vallindigham, of Missouri; Henry J. Lynn, of Tennessee; Michael J. Barrett, of New Jersey.

The following were elected Reading Clerks: T. O. Walker, of Iowa; Thomas S. Pettit, of the House of Representatives; Nicholas M. Bell, of Missouri; James E. Morrison, of New York; H. L. Bryon, of Delaware; Ansel Oppenheim, of Minnesota.

The other officers were chosen as follows: Official stenographer, Edward B. Dickson, of New York; sergeant-at-arms, Richard J. Bright, of Indiana.

The committee decided to recommend to the Convention that the rules of the last Democratic Convention govern this body until otherwise ordered, subject to the following modification: "That, in voting for candidates for President and Vice President, no State shall be allowed to change its vote until the roll of States has been called and every State has cast its vote."

As the result of a long discussion, the committee decided that undetached coupons will not be accepted for admission to the convention hall. The committee adjourned till ten o'clock this morning, with no anticipation, however, of having any business on hand.

COMMITTEEMEN CHOSEN.

The following State delegations completed their permanent organization and the committeemen herewith named will be reported to the convention to-day:

The Ohio delegation met at 3 p. m. and John R. McLean was unanimously elected Chairman; R. S. Shields, member of the Committee on Credentials; Durbin Ward, member of the Committee on Permanent Organization; M. D. Shaw, member of the Committee on Rules and Order of Business. A fight then occurred on the admitting of J. O. Converse on the proxy of L. G. Bernard. Converse was admitted by a vote of 26 to 19, a victory for the McLean men. A. J. Warren and J. O. Converse were nominated for the Committee on Resolutions. Converse won by a vote of 26 to 19. This shows the real strength of the two factions for the convention. W. W. Armstrong was elected by acclamation member of the National Committee. Jacob Mueller was elected Vice President by acclamation.

Alabama—E. W. Pettus, chairman; L. Pope Walker, resolutions; H. G. Tompkins, credentials; Joseph F. Johnston, organization; C. L. Scott, vice president; John H. Clisby, secretary of the committee; F. C. Clark, secretary of the convention; member of the National Committee not chosen.

Compelled to Issue a Commission.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 7.—Judge Simonton Saturday filed an opinion in the case of Jonathan M. Nieman, of Pottstown, against Governor Pattison, an action to compel the latter to grant the former a commission as Justice of the Peace of the Third ward of Pottstown, Montgomery County. Nieman was elected on February last and his commission was refused him on the ground that the ward was not entitled to a Justice of the Peace. Judge Simonton says the borough of Pottstown is entitled to one Justice for each ward and that Nieman's election took place at the proper time. He grants a peremptory mandamus on the Governor, compelling him to issue the commission.

A Colored Chaplain.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The President has appointed Henry Plummer, a colored man, as chaplain of the Ninth Cavalry, one of the few regiments in the service composed of colored men. Mr. Plummer was a field hand in Prince George County, Md., at the time of the emancipation and could neither read nor write. But he got some schooling over there and then came to Washington as a student in Howard University. Postmaster General Creswell gave him a place in the Postoffice Department as janitor and he earned means to carry him through college. After graduation he took a course at Maryland Theological Seminary and has since been a pastor of a colored church in this city.

A Famine Threatened.

SALT LAKE, Utah, July 7.—Grand Junction, Col., being cut off on the east by the washing out of a bridge in the Black Canyon, and on the west by the tearing up of the track by President Lovejoy, is in a tight place for supplies, and a famine is threatened. Bancroft, Superintendent of the Denver & Rio Grande Western had freight sent round this way and was about to give relief when the Lovejoy move prevented it. He telegraphed in answer to inquiries, that the best he could do was to ship to the Gap and thence by team. The Mayor replied that if goods could go that far by rail he would send out teams and haul the thirty-five miles.

Two Worthy Mayors.

NEW LAREDO, Mexico, July 5.—Pablo Quintano, ex-Mayor of New Laredo, has been sentenced to twelve years in the penitentiary for participation in the famous train robbery on the Mexican National Railway more than a year ago at La Jarita station, twenty-five miles from New Laredo. Santiago Seguin, the successor to Quintano as Mayor, was arrested a few days ago charged with the embezzlement of public funds, and has been sentenced to a term of penal servitude.

A Forger's Escape From Prison.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 7.—It is learned that C. R. Marshall, the English forger who was arrested in Milwaukee while attempting to pass cleverly executed £50 Bank of England notes and who had succeeded in getting good money for several of them here, escaped from the police station here. It is claimed at the station that he was liberated by a tramp, who stole a pass key and opened the doors.

A Swindler in the Toils.

LAREDO, Mex., July 7.—Young Morrison, who swindled the Traders' Bank on forged telegrams, is in durance in Monterey, and will be so detained until extradition papers can be procured. The Marshal in pursuit of the fugitive acknowledges valuable aid from Mexican judicial and executive authorities.

Forty Dwellings Burned.

MONTREAL, July 7.—Fire in Lachine Saturday destroyed forty houses, principally occupied by poor laborers. Three hundred people are homeless. Loss $50,000. The homeless people are housed in tents. A subscription has been started for their relief.

Mrs. Ammen Dead.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The wife of Rear Admiral Ammen died Sunday.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Haying is nearly completed in this section.

Better be ready and not go, than go and not be ready.

Fred Burlingame is rusticating at his home in this village.

Wages during haying are about $1.50 per day and board.

The grain fields give evidence of the nearness of harvest time.

Miss Lora Reynolds is rusticating at Manchester for a few weeks.

The new Catholic parsonage at Deerfield was dedicated last week.

Dyke Wilkinson, of Jackson, was visiting friends in Tecumseh last Sunday.

Ab Usborne and Tommy Aicken are at Chicago attending the convention.

Mrs. Frebus, of Washington, is visiting her uncle David VanTyne in this village.

Mr. F. C. Stoepel of Detroit was the guest of N. M. Sutton last Saturday & Sunday.

The annual school meeting of Adrian will take place on Monday evening next.

Mr. C. S. Lester will occupy the Baptist pulpit, in this village, next Sunday evening.

C. H. Hopkins of Battle Creek is spending a few days among his old Tecumseh friends.

Mrs. Freeman respectfully requests all who are indebted to her to call and settle the same immediately.

Miss Laura Erwin, telephone operator at Toledo, was in town last Sunday visiting Miss Ella Chiverall.

B. L. Baxter, Esq., who has been spending the past two weeks at home and in Deerfield returned to Lansing on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wynans—nee Hattie Baxter—passed last Sabbath at B. L. Baxter's. Mrs. Wynans will remain in town two or three weeks.

Our enterprising dry goods firm, Gainsley & Co., are making arrangements for their big clearing sale.—Look out for a detailed announcement soon.

Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Brown will attend the National Photographer's Convention, to be held in Cincinnati, one week, beginning July 29th, and will close their place of business during their absence.

C. A. Thatcher has again returned to receive orders for and deliver crayon portraits. Having done work for our people during the past two years with the greatest satisfaction, we take pleasure in recommending him.

Rev. G. W. Hudson will return home the latter part of this week. He has been having a fine time shooting squirrels and has become so sun burned that his parishioners may have trouble in recognizing him. His vacation has greatly benefited him.

Wheat harvest will be generally begun this week. Weevil prevails to considerable extent, but the berry was too far developed to receive much injury. What is known as "blight" affects the crop quite seriously, and must cause a shrinkage of from two to five per cent.

An excursion train will be run from Toledo to Devil's Lake, over the M. & O., next Sunday. The train will leave Toledo at 7:00 A. M., Tecumseh at 8:32 A. M., arriving at the lake at 9:20 A. M. Returning the train will leave the lake at 7:00 P. M. Round trip, from Tecumseh costs only 50 cents.

The children's day exercises at the Methodist Episcopal Church, postponed from June 22, will be held next Sunday, July 13. The pastor will be back from his vacation, and will preach in the morning on "God's Estimate of Childhood." The Sunday School will give a concert in the evening.

Addison Courier: The dredging of the sand bar at Devil's lake is nearly completed. The steamer made her first trip across the bar last Saturday, taking with her the dredge boat and commenced work on the new dock at the Lake View landing, near the Michigan & Ohio railroad on the 30th of June.

G. B. Beardsell, proprietor of the Lake View hotel, Devil's lake, has leased five acres of ground of Mr. Cheesbro, at the north end of Devil's lake, near the Michigan & Ohio railroad, for the purpose of building a dock for the landing of the Steamer City of Hudson, which will make daily connections with trains of that road and his landing.

The wool market has been reasonably lively since the season opened and about 105,000 pounds have been received in all, by the three buyers, A. Hanford, E. G. Cook and H. W. Stevens. They are buying separately, but have taken in about equal amounts. The price paid has ranged on the average from 25 to 27 cents.—There is considerable more wool in this vicinity to be sold and the buyers will be in the market for several days yet.

Harvesting begins this week.

Local news is scarce this week.

Bert Tribou is spending his vacation at his home in this village.

Miss Emma Salisbury, of Addison, paid Tecumseh a visit on Saturday last.

Our military and G. A. R. boys report having had a fine time at Monroe on the 4th.

A good game of base ball can be expected to morrow between the Jonesville and Tecumseh clubs.

Complaints are made that many fields of wheat in this vicinity will be seriously damaged by the weevil.

The crop of sour cherries is the most abundant ever known in the county, and trees are "painted red" with the fruit.

The Monroeville, (Ohio) Spectator says that an inch and a half of snow fell in Tecumseh, Mich., on the 9th of June.

The Wild West and Texas Combination will give an exhibition on the Fair Grounds at Adrian, on Monday, July 14th.

We are indebted to D. R. Gibson of Clinton for a sample of his best honey. His bees evidently understand their business.

C. J. Hendershot, son of Isaac Hendershot of Macon who has been working at Leslie this summer, was at home to spend the 4th.

You do not appear to be very busy at your store, remarked a salesman to a friend. No, thank heaven, the boss has stopped advertising, and we are having a lovely time of it.

About this season of the year the hired man on the farm gets up a row with his employer, gets discharged and paid off, and is then ready to hire out by the day through harvest at good wages. After harvest he will be ready to hire out again by the month.

The Adventists will hold a camp meeting at Jackson, beginning Sept. 18. Some 200 tents will be spread and 4,000 of the faith it is said will attend. The annual meeting of the state society, which includes the state temperance society, the Sabbath school association, missionary and state conference will be held at the same time.

Newspapers, says an exchange, tho' everybody does not seem to think so, are always paid in advance. If the thoughtless subscriber does not do it the proprietor has to do so. The paper and ink manufactures will not wait till a year, or perhaps half a dozen years expire, before they get their pay.—We hope our subscribers who are in arrears will think of this.

The Japanese Wedding at the Opera House last Thursday evening, was witnessed by a good audience, and was certainly the most unique exhibition ever seen here. The Japanese seem to have a way of their own of managing the nuptial ceremony. A good musical program accompanied the wedding, the two making up a very pleasing entertainment. The venture was also a substantial success financially.

Adrian Press: John Gillespie, of Cambridge, was busily engaged in looking over his account book, figuring up profit and loss, while driving along the road a few days since, and while thus absorbed the horse was given free rein. A turkey suddenly flew up from the fence when the horse flew off up the road, Mr. Gillespie flew out upon his head, and the buggy flew into sections, till its maker couldn't recognize it. Hereafter, Gillespie will drive horses when riding, and figure up his accounts on a shingle, when he has time to sit on the fence and see the crops grow.

Hudson Gazette: The trains on the M. & O. road stop regularly now at Devil's lake. What would Dr. Hall and the other visitors to the shores of this quiet and beautiful inland retreat fifty years ago say, were they living, to see pleasure-seekers from Toledo and Central and Western Michigan steping off the cars to spend a few days on the camping ground of old Meteau and Bawbeese. This delightful spot which has for so many years been the resort of our own country people almost exclusively, is accessible to the outside world at last; but will lose none of its charms for a' that.

A THRIVING BUSINESS.

It may not be generally known that Mr. W. H. Ford, who is located in the old Cummins carriage shop on South Railroad street, is building up a large trade in his line. He opened his shop the first of January last. He does painting of all kinds, both outside and inside work on houses, and also wagon and carriage work. As he has an abundance of shop room he possesses unusual facilities for painting wagons and carriages. He paints all the new work made by I. B. Richart, and has a large trade in painting over old wagons and buggies. He makes a specialty of this kind of work, having turned out over forty during the past six months. His price for painting over a wagon or buggy is from $7, to $10, according to the amount of finish required. People in need of this class of work will do well to give Mr. Ford a call. The latch string is always out at his shop. He likes to see his friends and he likes to do their work for them.

Hudson Post: A Tecumseh man has been compelled to relinquish teaching a Sunday school class. Sunday headaches are usually caused by Saturday night "brindles," but we suppose the case in question is an exception.

According to the statistics obtained by the secretary of the state, the average wages paid farm hands per month, with and without board, for the four southern tiers of counties, is $18.24 and $25.28, while that of the entire state is $18.3; and $26.78.

A county Mass Union Convention is hereby called to meet in the city of Adrian on Saturday, August 2nd, 1884, for the purpose of electing a new county committee and also to elect delegates to the state convention to be held at Lansing, Aug. 27. All who are in favor of the suppression by law of the drink shops, are cordially invited to be present.

Adrian Record: Mr. Frank Chaffee, who resides about one mile from the city, is more particular what he fats his hogs on than most people. Last week he turned a big porker into a clover field, in which twelve hens and a turkey each had a brood of young ones, and the animal immediately proceeded to prove that he was a hog by eating every one of the young chickens and turkeys, and by way of dessert, he nearly destroyed a field of new potatoes which was adjacent.

At the alumni exercises at Coldwater, last week, the orator related the following incident: "A young fellow in San Francisco suddenly snatched a kiss from a lady friend and excused himself by saying that it was a sort of temporary insanity that now and then came upon him. When he rose to take his leave, the pitying damsel said to him: 'If you ever feel any more such fits coming on, you had better come right here, where your infirmity is known, and we will take care of you.'"

The executive committee of the agricultural society have authorized the sale of life membership tickets. The object in view is to secure immediate money for the purpose of putting the new grounds into necessary repair. The exhibitors of the county are elated over the idea that they are to have the finest grounds for exhibition in the state, and are making preparations to bring out the finest show that has ever been had in Lenawee county. A new broom sweeps clean, and the society are anxious to meet the demands both of exhibitors and spectators, by making the accommodations as adequate as possible, and for this purpose have issued life membership tickets at $10 apiece, giving the holder all the privileges for life that a regular membership ticket gives annually, viz: Voting power, and at each regular fair, on presentation to the treasurer, the holder receives four admission tickets. It is to be hoped that the friends of the fair will respond liberally. The tickets will be put into the hands of solicitors, and the county will be immediately canvassed.
M. GRAVES, Sec'y.

CARMAN FAMILY.

The people who were so fortunate as to hear these wonderful singers last winter will be pleased to learn that they are again to visit Tecumseh. They will sing in the Baptist Church Thursday evening, July 17th, for the benefit of the Sunday School Library Fund. The price of admission will be the same as last winter, namely, 25cts. In view of the excellence of the singing and the laudable object for which they come, there should be a full house.

Examination for West Point.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
WASHINGTON, JUNE 27, '84.

A board will convene in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday the 30th day of July next, for the purpose of examining such young men as desire to become candidates for appointment to the United States military academy for the Second congressional district. Candidates upon entering the academy must be between the ages of seventeen and twenty two. All candidates must be at least five feet in height, free from all deformity and disease. All persons desiring to become candidates can address me at Adrian.
N. B. ELDREDGE.

The Teacher's Institute for 1884.

The State Teachers' Institute for Lenawee county will this year be held at Adrian, beginning at 9 o'clock A. M. of Monday, August 4th, and continuing two weeks. Supt. Z. C. Spencer of Battle Creek, formerly of Tecumseh, will conduct the Institute. All sessions will be held in the High School room of the central school building, corner of Church and Division streets, and will open promptly at 9 o'clock. Teachers are requested to bring text books, as it is intended to put the work into the form of class instruction as far as possible. A Normal class will be organized at the same hour and place, on Monday, July 28th, one week before the beginning of the Institute, and will continue until its close. Instruction will will be given during the first week in Physiology, Arithmetic and Geography, for which a charge of one dollar will be made.

Further particulars, if desired, may be obtained by addressing A. E. Curtis Local Committee, Adrian, Mich.

The celebrated Carman family will give a concert on Thursday evening, July 17th, at the Baptist church.

Mrs. Spaulding has a Night Blooming Cereus that will gratify the curiosity of those who call at her greenhouse Friday or Saturday evening! Many call to note the progress of the singular bud.

There will be a meeting of the members of the Union League on Friday evening at 8 o'clock, 18th inst., in Reform Club Rooms, to transact such business as may come before them. Good speakers in attendance. Come one, come all. ORDER OF PRES.

Population of Adrian. The Record says the following figures, though not official, will be found approximately correct: First ward, 2,200; Second ward, 3,100; Third ward, 1,700; Fourth ward, 2,220; Total, 6,200. This is a gain of only about 1,600 since the last census, four years ago.

Hudson Gazette: The state enumeration of the census of Hudson is finished. Singularly enough the population of our village remains at just the figures of 1880—not one more or less—2,254. The population of the township is given at 3,604. This is a falling off of 2, if the figures include a part of Clayton village (176 in 1880), otherwise a decrease of 178.

Messrs. Henry & Varson, the feather bed renovators, who have secured rooms in Slayton & Son's block, are meeting with the best of success, and are having plenty to do. We have examined their mode of renovating feathers and have no hesitancy in pronouncing their Cold Air Process perfect in all its working, and Henry & Varson are gentlemen and will do honest work for all who give them their patronage.

Even now, when the farmer is calling for help to assist in the hay and corn fields, the miserable tramps stalk through the country begging their living but refusing to work, because they cannot obtain employment at their trade. Sometimes we think they have no trade at all, and only make that an excuse to get something for nothing. Some means should be devised to make these miserable beings work and earn a living.

Monroe Commercial: The weevil is making great destruction in the wheat fields in this locality. Fields along Sandy Creek and up the river Raisin will be utterly destroyed—not worth cutting. We fear the pest will be quite general in its ravages throughout the country. Reports from Ohio say the weevil is also doing its work of destruction in that state. It is now about thirty years since the weevil operated in the wheat fields in this state, and they staid with us about two years.

BASE BALL.

It is very seldom that Tecumseh people see a better game of ball than that played on the afternoon of the 4th., by the Mutuals, of Jackson, and the Tecumseh club. Notwithstanding the many counter attractions around the county in the shape of celebrations, which drew many of our citizens away from home, a large gathering was present to witness the game. The game was called at 2 P. M., by umpire Frazier with the Tecumsehs at the bat, who were put out in one, two, three order, not one of the three men getting to first base, and in fact nobody got to first until the last half of the third innings, when Anderson lifted the ball over in the field, and scored a run before the close of the innings.

The Tecumseh battery consisted of Heidenrich and Kelley, and it is safe to say, no other amateur club in the state sports a stronger one. Will Tray, who pitched for our club last year, did the firing for the Mutuals, with E. Tray behind the bat. Both played a perfect game.

Bostwick, as usual, played an excellent game, scoring three runs without an error. Anderson redeemed his former batting record by knocking the ball all over the diamond. Chapman handled the ball in good shape as short, while Miller got rattled and did some very wild throwing over to first base. The Jackson boys also played an excellent game, their fielding exciting general admiration. In the second innings, Livermore, of the Jacksons, was struck on the head by a wild ball thrown by Kelly, which laid him up during two innings and his place was very creditably filled by Will T. Eccles, who surprised the audience by the manner in which he handled his bat. Will got to first base, but there he "got left." Below we present the score in full.

The population of Hudson is 2274, the exact number which it had four years ago.

Rumor says there is a prospect of the establishment at Devil's Lake of a great midsummer religious assembly, similar to those at Chautauqua and Grand Park, to be conducted under the auspices of the Baptists.

"Pa, is that a circus tent"
A little boy inquired:
"To carry it along the street
Must make that woman tired."
"My son, that object on the street,
Is nothing more or less"
Than woman's form, a hoop skirt, and A Mother Hubbard dress.

One of the most painful accidents of the Fourth occurred in Raisin. A little boy named Bowerman, about 4 years old was with others playing with cattails, which they stuck into gasoline and then set on fire. In some way the gasoline was spilled over upon the little fellow's pants and set on fire. The boy's clothes were not burned, but the gasoline burned fiercely, literally roasting the poor little fellow ere the flames could be smothered. His hands were so badly burned that the flesh sloughed off their backs and the palms were great blisters. His condition is critical, although his physician has hopes of his recovery.

Right to the point

The Rev. J. E. Searles, of New York, is one of the most widely-known and highly esteemed of Methodist ministers.

Mr. Searles says: "I am impressed that it is a duty I owe to those afflicted with Rheumatism or Neuralgia, to say that a remedy has been discovered that is indeed a marvelous success. My son was greatly afflicted with Rheumatism, and suffered so severely that, at times, he was obliged to have morphine injected into his arm to get relief. While in this condition he discovered a remedy which effected immediate relief, and a permanent cure. He has since furnished it to many others with the same result. I have also furnished it to a number of persons suffering with Rheumatism, and the result has been immediate relief and apparent cure. Another effect, I have it. Editor Wm. P. Corbit, pastor of the George st. M. E. Church, New Haven, Conn., who is assuring greatly with this terrible disease. I will give you his own words as written to my son, with authority to publish the fact for the benefit of others suffering with the same disease."

What Mr. Corbit Says:

"New Haven, July 24, 1882.

"Mr. Searles: Dear Sir.—I wish to say for the benefit of all who are suffering with Inflammatory Rheumatism, that your medicine is infallible. I suffered for two months the most excruciating torture; lost 35 pounds of flesh, and was not out of my house for a month. I heard of your remedy, and was almost instantly relieved by it. If there is a specific for diseases of any kind, yours most certainly is for Inflammatory Rheumatism in its severest form.

"Yours most respectfully, WM. P. CORBIT.

"Pastor George St. M. E. Church, New Haven, Conn."

Such is ATHLOPHOROS—a thorough and efficient cure for the worst cases of Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

"Mary," said a mother to her daughter, "has Henry proposed yet?" "Not yet, ma, but I think he will before many days." "What makes you think so?" "Because he asked me if you expected to live with me if I married, and I told him no."—Philadelphia Herald.

—The father of five marriageable daughters was in town a few days ago trying to buy some four-leaf clover seed to plant in his back yard. He said he had read that when a young girl finds a four-leaf clover it is a sign that she will be married within a year.—Norristown Herald.

—Part of the name of the Queen of Hanover is Alexandrina Maria Theresa Henriette Louisa Paulina Elizabeth Frederica Georgina. She has more phenominal handles, but these are all the King uses when he calls her to sew a button on his trousers.—Jersey City Journal.

"It isn't possible that you swim, Mr. Jones?" "Yes, madam, I do. Why do you think it so strange?" "Because, Mr. Jones, the idea of your taking to water is very funny." Jones thinks some widows are entirely too sharp, and now is looking for some one else to love.—Philadelphia Chronicle.

—A lunatic captured a butcher shop the other night, and with knife and cleaver held three hundred men at bay. In a moment of weakness, however, he attempted to carve a porter-house steak, cut near the horns, and was a vanquished man in five minutes. That a man should be so foolish when life and liberty were at steak.—Burlington Hawkeye.

—A young lady from the lower country, who has been visiting in Alturas, Cal., said just before she left there recently, that the people of Modoc County were the most generous she had ever met. During her short stay there she had been offered a half interest in a saw-mill, a barber-shop, a printing-office, a gentleman horse and a livery-stable, respectively, to say nothing of the offer of two or three saloons, ranches and bands of cattle.

The Glacial Period.

The term "glacial period," during which large portions of the earth were covered with ice, is especially applied to the close of the tertiary period, when nearly all of Europe experienced an arctic climate, and whole races of men, animals and plants were driven south or destroyed. This cold snap commenced 240,000 years ago and lasted 160,000 years. Science says it was caused by the increased eccentricity of the earth's orbit influencing ocean currents, and that we have cold spells from the same cause every 15,000 years. Darwin believed it because it enabled him to account for the similarity of plants and animals found in America, Africa, Europe and Australia, and also explained what become of the races of men that inhabited Europe 240,000 years ago, of whom vestiges are traced down to 80,000 years. There have been cold waves occurring at intervals since, but that glacial period was the longest and coldest winter on record.—Indianapolis Sun.

An Egyptian Battalion 1400 B. C.

The formation of the battalion for combat was as follows:

The 100 Captains formed the front rank of the battalion, and each Captain had his 100 men in file behind him. A Corporal at the head of each nine men. The chief of each 1,000 men was in front of the center of the two companies, while the Colonel commanding the grand battalion was in front of the center.

The leaders were not mounted on horseback, but were mounted in two-wheeled chariots drawn usually by two horses. In the chariots were carried a supply of javelins and arrows, for the use of the chief, who usually had in the chariot with him a soldier, who held a buckler to cover him from the arrows of the enemy, while he fleas about hurling his bow and spears.

In the early days, and down to the time of Sesostris, the officers and non-commissioned officers carried buckler and swords, while the private soldiers of infantry carried each a buckler and a battle-ax. Sometimes the battle-ax was accompanied by, and sometimes replaced by, a spear.

It is easy to see that Moses drew from the military organization of Egypt that which he adopted for the Israelites, and later on the Greeks their formations. Both these nations took their first lessons in civilization and organization from Egypt.

In the earliest monuments and records of the Egyptian army there is no sign of the existence of the horse as a military animal, while in the monuments of the eighteenth dynasty, the war-horse is everywhere indicated. It is probable that the war-horse was first introduced by the Shepherd Kings, who came in from Syria about 4,100 years ago. It is certain that the horse formed an important agent in the military establishment of Egypt, under the legitimate Kings of the country, 1,700 years before the Christian era, and the lack of monuments erected during the 500 years of struggle between the Shepherd Kings and the Thebans explains easily the lack of record on this subject. Sesostris had at one time 20,000 war-chariots in line drawn by horses.—General Stone, in Journal Military Service Institution of the United States.

The Language of Umbrellas.

There is a language of umbrellas as of flowers. For instance, place your umbrella under and and close lovers. To open it quickly in the street means that somebody's eye is going to be put out; to shut it, that a hat or two is to be knocked off. An umbrella carried over a woman, the man getting nothing but the drippings of the rain, signifies courtship. When a man has the umbrella and the woman the drippings it indicates marriage. To push your umbrella into a person and then open it means "I dislike you." To swing your umbrella over your head signifies "I am making a nuisance of myself." To trail your umbrella along the foot-path means that the man behind you is thirsting for your blood. To carry it at right angles under your arm signifies that an eye is to be lost by the man hat follows you. To open an umbrella quickly, it is said, will frighten a mad bull. To put a cotton umbrella by the side of a silk one signifies "Exchange is not robbery." To purchase an umbrella means "I am not not smart, but honest." To lend an umbrella indicates "I am a fool." To return an umbrella means—well, never mind what it means, nobody ever does that. To turn an umbrella in a gust of wind presages profanity. To carry your umbrella in a case signifies it is a shabby one. To carry an umbrella just high high enough to tear out men's eyes and knock off men's hats signifies "I am a woman." To press an umbrella on your friend, saying, "Oh! do take it; I had much rather you would than not," signifies lying. To give a friend half of your umbrella means that both of you will get wet. To carry it home in the morning means "It will clear off."—Dom Juice's Magazine.

A Foiled Diplomat.

"George, dear," she said, entering the parlor with her bonnet on, "I guess we'd better take a walk; papa is expecting company to night."

"Very well," added her lover, apprehensively, recalling the expensive consequences of previous walks. Before they had gone half a block, however, an idea struck him and he said:

"I was reading such an interesting article in the paper this morning."

"Yes, what was it about?"

"About the danger of eating ice cream. You can't imagine how many people have died from it, Lizzie. In eight cases out of ten it's rank poison."

"Oh, my, how glad I am you told me, dear," exclaimed the innocent girl, with a Chicago twinkle in her eye; "you buy me a couple of quarts of it and I'll take it home to kill rats."—Brooklyn Eagle.

—A good amateur actor carried a sachel into a Baltimore groggery, and displayed contents that seemed to be money to the amount of $25,000, at the same time pretending to be demented. A companion soon intimated to the rum-seller that the treasure ought to be taken care of, and agreed to leave it in his possession if he would hand over $500 as security. "But this must be your own money," said the friend, "for nothing in the bag must be disturbed." The sum was eagerly advanced by the saloon man, who, of course, intended to keep the bag, in which he subsequently found nothing but worthless paper.

—South Carolina raises no tobacco. More than one hundred years ago eight thousand hogsheads grown in the State were annually exported from Charleston. Last season the North Carolina yellow-tobacco belt produced crops which, in various instances, netted planters three dollars and fifty cents per acre clear profit. This result, so close to their own homes, is stirring up the South Carolinians to revive tobacco culture wherever the soil is favorable. They see an excellent chance to acquire another cash crop.

—A little girl in town was trying to tell her mother how beautiful a certain lady could trill in singing, and said: "Oh, mamma, you ought to hear her gargle, she does it so sweetly."

If it were possible to set before you all the wonderful cures of Rheumatism and Neuralgia made by Athlophoros you would not despair of your own case till you had given it a speedy and fair trial. It is the remedy of one who experimented for a long time on himself to find something which would master Rheumatism. He did not succeed till he struck Athlophoros. Not satisfied with his own case as a test, he tried it on others till satisfied that a great specific was at last within his grasp. Very properly it took the title Athlophoros—champion remedy.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, with the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internals as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to truthfully state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

An Appetizing Table.

In food, as in medicine, new prescriptions are offered and old advice discarded constantly; and this is unavoidable while the science of human life is involved in obscurity, and empiricism is our only guide. Probably we err in jumping to conclusions too readily, and trying to make a test of individual experience, or that of nations, allowing too little for modifying circumstances. Rules for diet, therefore, may properly be dispensed with much diffidence, knowing how readily they may be controverted. The effort to reach the best physical condition and conform to the highest authority is creditable; and we do well to notice what seems to agree with us best, what gives us most buoyancy and strength, though it serves only as a rule for ourselves, not for others.

But one can live well on vegetables, and set a beautiful and appetizing table. Vegetarianism implies abstinence from flesh and blood, leaving us milk, cream, eggs, with all the fruits and vegetable abundance that our seasons produce. From spring until late in fall we can have substantial food from our own gardens, as potatoes in variety, early and late peas, beans of various kinds, corn of several sorts with all the dishes made of it; and all through these months we can have relishes in greens, spinach, dandelions, mustard, with lettuces and other salads, cucumbers, beets, tomatoes, etc., etc. Indeed, I think the housewife a very unskilled server of tables who cannot make her family forget the flesh-pots during this period.

In winter we still have vegetables if we raise them and put them in the cellar, while the dried beans, peas and corn, the canned goods, with foreign-grown vegetables, and luscious fruits, from tropical climes, abundant in our markets, all serve to increase our supply and make variety on our tables. All through the year we have the breakfast cereals—steam-cooked white oats, shredded maize and prepared wheat—diminishing labor and improving the bill of fare. We are told of more than twenty ways of cooking eggs, and the combination dishes of vegetables and fruit with milk, cream and eggs are almost numberless. There is plenty to eat, and good eating, too, if one wishes to abstain from flesh and blood: to abjure the slaughter of animals and avoid the effect of their diseases.

Combinations assimilate in the system most is not only good, but delicate cooking. No matter what the food may be, a want of attention or a want of knowledge may spoil it. Many a woman, however, is blamed for poor cooking, when the fault is entirely in the supplies. Whether vegetarians or not, we do well to have vegetables early and late, and of the best kinds, to give variety to our tables, and help us to avoid the excessive use of a concentrated and animalized diet, which, I fancy, will hardly be shown to be good for us. Dr. Andrew Combe thought all that can be sensibly said in regard to diet relates to quality and quantity—the quality should be plain, the quantity moderate.—N. Y. Tribune.

Wiggins' Dark Moon.

For many years it has been my belief that our planet is accompanied by two satellites, a visible and a dark one, the distance of the latter from the earth being probably double that of the former. The librations of the moon, the irregularity of the moon, the irregularity of her motions in her orbit, and the fact her perigee seldom takes place immediately on the orbit of our earth in advance of the earth's course, are strong evidence of the disturbing influence of a sister satellite. The variation in the time and height of the tides, occasional tides of excessive height without apparent cause, and the frequent occurrence of double tides can not be explained on the hypothesis that the earth is attended by only one secondary. Earthquakes which are caused by unusual planetary attraction frequently occur when it would appear that the force which produced them had not yet reached its climax, and could not till after the moon's conjunction with the sun. The recent earthquake in England occurred two days before the moon was in conjunction with the solar orb, and before she was in perigee, showing that her attractive power must have joined with another and very nearly equal force before she reached the line of her solar conjunction. This earthquake, I predicted, would return with increased violence on May 20. It did so, causing the destruction of many villages and the death of hundreds of people. On the same day occurred the disastrous cyclone in British Burmah. The earthquake, however, did not appear in England, and I am convinced it was moved eastward by the influence of this dark planet. The recent cold wave which passed over America must have been due to this source, and as nearly the same conditions will exist on the 26th and 27th of the present month (June) the same cold wave would appear were it not for the changed position of this dark horse of the heavens.

All great storms should occur after certain planetary conjunctions, whereas they frequently precede them, and it is for this reason that many meteorologists—among them Sir William Thompson—have denied that the moon has any influence whatever in producing storms on the surface of our globe. Years before I published predictions I found that some of my storms would be delayed for several days, others would appear ahead of time, and frequently the heaviest would be annihilated altogether. There were no known planets which could possibly produce this effect, and I was at length forced to the conclusion, as I have said, that our earth is accompanied by a dark satellite. It would further appear that the "dark days" of which frequent mention is made in history—so called because they could not be traced to any solar eclipse—were of such a character as to justify the belief that they were caused by an opaque body intervening between our globe and the sun, for the suddenness and brevity of the darkness could not be interpreted as due to smoke or vapor in the earth's atmosphere.

I am confident that the moon and this dark satellite were in conjunction with the sun, or nearly so, on March 9, 1883, which produced the eruption of the great Java volcano, and caused the storms which I predicted would be—and the London Times says it was the greatest storm of the present century. On March 26, 1884, this planet was somewhere in the neighborhood of her inferior or superior conjunction, and heightened the storm on the 27th of that month. Strange to add, I have just received letters from Michigan saying that a solar eclipse was visible in that State on May 16, 1884, at seven o'clock in the evening, when fully one-third of the solar disc was in darkness. As the moon at that moment was twelve degrees south of the celestial equator, and the sun was as many degrees north of it, this phenomenon could not have been caused by our visible satellite. Doubtless it was the passing of this dark planet across the sun's disc.

I have little sympathy with Prof. Proctor and others, who, with the prejudice of the old-school men, persist in declaring that our moon is a dead planet, and is not possessed of an atmosphere. Any one who will take the trouble to look when she is in quadrature will see with the naked eye on a clear night, the whole luminous annulus or ring of light that surrounds her orb, which is proof positive and complete that she is enveloped in an atmosphere similar to our own. The same arguments were used long ago by Dr. Dick and others to prove that Jupiter and other primaries are destitute of atmosphere, while the very fact that they are visible is evidence that they are endowed with atmospheres like that of our own globe, for surely no one is now antiquated enough to believe that life exists throughout space but only in the atmosphere of the planets. The non-existence of a second satellite to the earth is therefore not proved by reason of its invisibility. Its position can only be ascertained by noticing the sudden quenching of stars, and I trust that astronomers, both in America and Europe, will aid in obtaining the magnitude and motion of this lonely wanderer in the sidereal heavens.—E. Stone Wiggins, in N. Y. Tribune.

Militia and Mobs.

In most riots the neglect of a few simple principles by both civil and military authorities has caused most of the bloodshed. The militia should be assembled promptly. If this is delayed, their armories may be surrounded and their assemblage prevented. Besides, the knowledge that troops are in readiness strengthens the police and intimidates the mob. They should not be paraded until the last moment. The bayonet and rifle are deadly weapons, and not suited for mere police work. But as soon as there is danger of the police being overpowered the militia should march to their aid, and then all sentimentality should be dispensed with.

A mob is a gang of law breakers, with the criminal class coming to the top as it gains power; and the very existence of society depends upon its being promptly put down. Half-way measures are cruelty. Any militia officer who permits his men to be shot or stoned without resistance deserves a court-martial. A mob never appreciates forbearance. Blank cartridges simply inspire them to fresh assaults. Firing in the air has the same effect, besides killing innocent people at a distance. Volleys are seldom necessary. To detail a few sharp-shooters to pick off the leading aggressors is far preferable. If the thrower of the first brick is shot, as a rule no more will be thrown. Four shots at Cincinnati which killed four leaders dispersed the mob that attacked Powells' gun-store. The same number fired with like effect would have scattered that which attacked the jail, if they had been the first which had been fired by the troops. It must be remembered that no troops will stand being stoned or being shot at without firing in return. If the officers wait too long (as was the case in the Orange riots in New York), some one is sure to fire without orders, bringing on a general fire which unnecessarily destroys many lives. The troops should not allow themselves to be besieged. Strong detachments should traverse the streets, aiding the police in dispersing all crowds and in clearing the streets. The mob, when once broken, will never again collect. If the militia are strong and well disciplined, and it is understood distinctly that they will permit no trifling, their mere appearance is usually sufficient. If their condition is such that the mob do not fear them, many lives have to be sacrificed before peace can be restored.—Century Magazine.

Still Another Dodge.

"The coin-thieves, or whatever you want to call them, are up to a new dodge," remarked a Third street banker to a reporter this morning.

"Yes, what is it?"

"Well, you know they formerly punched holes in coins, but when that was stopped by the public universally refusing to take punched silver they set about to find a new dodge. Now they clip the edges of coins. I have just opened a roll containing ten dimes and I find that two of them have been clipped."

Thereupon the speaker exhibited the mutilated coins. From their edges there had been neatly cut off a metal shaving, that was, perhaps, an eighth of an inch in thickness. The work had been done very skillfully, and the cutting was clean and sharp. It is not very probable that one man in ten would have noticed that anything was wrong with the coins, as their rounded outlines were scarcely broken. It was only when one ran his fingers across the serrated edge that it was apparent that a portion of it was gone.

"Yes," continued the banker, "that is one of the cleverest tricks that I have ever detected. I have been looking the matter up recently, and I found that a great deal of coin has been thus clipped. I presume that a dollar is made on about every two hundred dimes that are shaved. Whoever is doing it I must say that he knows how to conceal his tracks."

"When did you discover that coins were being clipped?"

"Only a couple of weeks ago, but I am convinced that it is being done on a large scale. I do not doubt that before long people will refuse to take clipped coins as they do now punched.—Cincinnati Star.

FOUR POINTS

Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD.
Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS.
WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC.
WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing, use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes in to soak, rubbing plenty of soap in the most soiled parts. Be sure that the soaking water is hot; soak the clothes half an hour; stir them occasionally so that they may get the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them lightly out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil 10 to 20 minutes, rinse well, blue and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boiling by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Flannels and prints should not be boiled, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the wash-board, and being the best disinfectent known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury, the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press water out with the hand; boil 3 to 5 minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press carefully between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron in a very hot piece of old flannel. Soak curtains to 10 to 30 minutes and boil 5 to 10 minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, or pin every scallop to carpet over a sheet to dry; no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

CONGRESS.

THE Senate on the 2d insisted on its amendments to the Naval bill and the River and Harbor bill, and conferences were ordered. The Sundry Civil bill was taken up. After debate, the clause providing for compensation by salaries instead of fees for United States Marshals was stricken out. A motion to include Louisville and Cincinnati expositions in the clause providing for participation by the Government in the New Orleans exposition was agreed to. The amount appropriated for the above purpose was reduced from $300,000 to $200,000, and the bill then passed. Adjourned.

In the House a vote was taken upon the motion of substituting the minority Fortification bill for the bill reported by a majority of the Committee on Appropriations, and it was agreed to. The bill as amended by the adoption of the substitute was then passed—yeas 130, nays 6. It appropriates $885,000. The conference report on the bill granting the right of way through the Indian Territory to the Southern Kansas Railroad Company was agreed to. The Speaker laid before the House the President's veto of the Fitz-John Porter bill, and announced that immediate action was in order. Mr. Slocum moved that the bill be passed over the President's objection and demanded the previous question. It was ordered, and the bill passed—yeas 166, nays 78. Adjourned.

THE Chair laid before the Senate on the 3d the Fitz-John Porter veto message, which was read. The question being, "Shall the bill pass notwithstanding the objections of the President," the yeas and nays were taken, resulting in the yeas 2, nays 2, two-thirds not voting in the affirmative the bill failed to pass. The anti-Chinese bill was called up and passed without amendment—yeas 43, nays 12. Consideration of the bill to forfeit the unearned lands granted the Atlantic & Pacific Railroad was resumed; two or three unimportant amendments were agreed to, and the bill then passed. The Senate insisted on its amendments to the Fortification bill. Also on its amendments to the Sundry Civil Service bill, and committees of conference were ordered. A resolution was agreed to authorizing the appointment of five Senators to examine into the capacity of steel-producing works in the United States to make steel suitable for guns of high power, and plate suitable for war ships, etc. Messrs. Hawley, Miller of California, Aldrich, Morgan and Butler were appointed as the committee. Adjourned. In the House majority and minority reports were presented by the select committee appointed to inquire whether any ex-members had violated the privileges of the House. A motion to lay the whole matter on the table was agreed to—yeas 157, nays [illegible], [illegible] Mr. Morrison's bill was rejected, but upon taking a vote upon the amendments the House found itself without a quorum, and a recess was taken until ten a. m. of the 4th.

THE Senate on the 4th met at eleven o'clock, and listened to the reading of the Declaration of Independence. Bills were passed: Granting a pension to the widow of Thomas Brady; increasing the pension of Colonel Hugh T. Reid; authorizing the President to appoint General Averill to the position of Colonel in the army, and then place him on the retired list of that rank. Messages were received from the House announcing concurrence of that body in the conference reports on the River and Harbor bill, the bill to punish the violations of the Internal Revenue laws, the bill amending the seventy-second article of war, and the bill to consolidate the Bureau of Military Justice and corps of Judge Advocates of the army. The Postal Telegraph bill was taken up, and on motion of Mr. Sherman further consideration of the bill was postponed until the second Monday of December next. The House met in continuation of the session of the 3d. Mr. Willis presented the conference report on the River and Harbor Appropriation bill; agreed to. The bill appropriates $11,826,540. The conference report on the bill limiting the time within which prosecutions may be instituted against persons charged with violating the internal revenue laws was agreed to. Consideration of the Mexican Pension bill was resumed, but without action the House adjourned.

THE bill to establish a commission to regulate inter-state commerce was taken up in the Senate on the 5th and on motion of Mr. Miller of California was postponed till December next. Mr. Logan submitted the conference report on the Fortification bill, to which the Senate agreed. The House bill to prohibit the importation of foreigners under contract or agreement to perform labor in the United States, was postponed till December next. A message was received from the House announcing its agreement to the conference report on the Fortification bill. A recess was then taken until the morning of the 6th when a message was received from the House announcing the final adjustment of the Sundry Civil bill by a recession of the House from its disagreements to the clauses relating to the compensation of United States Attorneys and Marshals, but with sundry reductions of the amounts appropriated by the Senate for fees for those officers. The Senate concurred in the reductions and the bill was thus disposed of. A conference report on the Deficiency bill was submitted, showing that all disagreements had been settled by mutual concession. The report was agreed to. A recess was taken until evening and when the Senate reassembled a message was received from the House announcing the passage of the bill making temporary provision for the naval service. On motion of Mr. Miller of California the amendment was agreed to continuing the appropriation for engines, machinery, etc., of the monitors, and the clause shutting off that appropriation was struck out. The bill as so amended was passed. The Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill was vetoed 42, and on motion of Mr. Allison the Senate receded from its amendment appropriating $250,000 for the Nicaraguan waterway project. This disposed of the only remaining subject of difference on the bill. The Senate then went into executive session and soon after adjourned until the 7th. In the House Mr. Rainey submitted a unanimous report from the committee on elections confirming the right of Martin McGinnis to a seat as a delegate from Montana Territory, agreed to. The conference report on the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill was submitted. An agreement was reached on all amendments placed on the bill by the Senate except that of appropriating $250,000 for the Nicaraguan project. The House refused to recede from its disagreement to that amendment and the former conferees were re-appointed. The Mexican Pensions bill was taken up, and a motion to postpone further consideration of the bill until December next was lost—yeas 55, nays 185. The conference committee reported the Sundry Civil bill, and the House concurred in the report. A recess was then taken until the three p. m. of the 6th, at which hour, no conference reports being ready, several three-minute speeches were made on the Mexican Pensions bill, and a further recess taken until evening. At the evening session Mr. Randall presented the conference report on the General Deficiency bill. The bill as agreed to appropriates $6,206,676 being $1,180 in excess of the amount carried by the bill as it passed the House. The report was agreed to without division. Mr. Randall then submitted the disagreeing conference report on the Naval Appropriation bill, and it was agreed to. He then submitted the bill making temporary provision for the naval service for six months ending December 31, 1884, and after a sharp debate it was passed. The conference report on the Legislative bill was presented and agreed to, after which the House took a recess until ten a. m. of the 7th.

DOMESTIC.

THE Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, as reported by the Senate committee, increases the appropriation, as compared with the House bill, in round numbers $3,800,000, making the aggregate appropriation a little over $20,000,000.

A FIRE on the 3d destroyed fifteen buildings, embracing the principal portion of the village of Pemberville, Wood County, O. The loss will aggregate $35,000; insurance light.

THE business failures reported for the six months ended July 1, 1884, in the United States and Canada, number 5,510, compared with 4,673 for the six months previous. The liabilities foot up $124,000,000, compared with $86,000,000 for the same period last year, or nearly double.

AT Chardon, O., on the 4th, some fireworks become ignited by a stray spark and Job Durfee, of Newbury, O., was struck in the mouth by a rocket and instantly killed; John Cleveland, of Burton, O., was hit in a similar manner and expired in a short time.

TO avoid the possibility of importing cholera from France into the United States through the mails, the British Government will be requested to thoroughly disinfect all French mails passing through England to this country.

FOUR men working about the chimney of one of the mills of the Calumet Iron and Steel Works, at Cummings, near Chicago, on the 3d were overcome by gas and died instantly.

COMPLETE reports show that the damage by the recent storm will amount to more than $1,000,000 in York County, Pa., and $258,000 in Cecil County, Maryland. It will cost $20,000 to repair the Chesapeake & Ohio canal.

THIRTY ticket agents of the Manhattan Elevated Road, New York, are implicated in selling counterfeit tickets, and several have been arrested. The counterfeit tickets seized represented nearly $25,000. The Bank Note Company say the counterfeits were better than the original.

AT New York on the 3d John Vandeur, a crippled janitor of Gramercy flats, was sandbagged, red peppered and robbed of $300, by two robbers in a cellar of the flats, who escaped.

ASSIGNEE WARNER on the 3d filed a bill of equity against the directors of the defunct Penn Bank of Pittsburgh to compel them to surrender securities valued at $451,000, appropriated on the day the bank failed to secure themselves against loss for notes given the associated banks at the time the latter loaned the Penn Bank money to tide over the first suspension.

THE President has issued a proclamation warning all persons intending to take forcible possession of the Oklahoma lands in the Indian Territory that the military forces of the United States will be used, if necessary, to remove all such intruders.

THE railroad disaster at Moberly, Mo., proves far more serious than at first reported. A number of bodies were recovered in the wreck, and it is estimated that twelve were drowned and as many more fatally injured.

[illegible] on the 4th, five hundred people were on the grand stand when the roof fell in and the foundation gave way, precipitating the people a distance of twenty feet to the ground below. One boy was killed and a dozen others seriously wounded, and two of them are not expected to live. Mayor Owsley, in trying to prop up the wreck, was struck by a timber and fearfully cut on the head. Several limbs were broken and many otherwise seriously injured.

THE extensive agricultural works of the Newark Machine Company, at Newark, O., were burned on the morning of the 5th. A large quantity of manufactured goods in stock were consumed. The loss will aggregate $450,000, on which there is an insurance of $240,000, divided among forty-five companies. It is supposed the fire originated by a spark from an engine.

THE steamship Gulf of Vincent, from Calcutta, went ashore at Long Beach, Long Island, on the 5th, and is probably a total loss. The crew and passengers, forty people, were saved by the life saving crew. She had a cargo of linseed.

THE first Mexican bull fight on American soil took place at Dodge City, Kan., on the 4th, in the presence of three or four thousand spectators. There were five bull fighters and four animals. One of the matadores was severely injured about the ribs in the final encounter and may not recover.

A VIOLENT wind storm at Rich Hill, Mo., on the 4th demolished the Presbyterian Church, unroofed many buildings, and damaged property to the amount of $20,000. Several persons were injured, but no lives lost.

THE New York associated banks make the following statement for the week ended July 5: Loans decrease, $811,600; specie increase, $5,033,900; legal tenders decrease, $816,300; deposits increase, $4,145,700; circulation increase, $33,000; reserve increase, $3,181,050. The banks held $16,390,050 in excess of legal requirements.

THE store of Howard & Stewart, at Dayton, Tenn., was burglarized of $14,000 worth of goods on the 5th.

KOBLITZ BROTHERS' rag and paper house at Cleveland, O., burned on the 5th. A number of small adjoining buildings were destroyed or badly damaged. Loss about $25,000.

TWO iron workers named George Twohig and Albert Costello, engaged in a duel with sledge hammers at Erie, Pa., on the 5th, and both were terribly injured. Officer Ewing, who went to arrest them, was attacked and badly wounded.

A TERRIFIC wind storm swept over Macon, Sangamon and Christian counties, Illinois, between midnight and daylight on the 5th, leaving a large amount of property, but so far no lives are reported lost. The loss in Sangamon County is estimated at $100,000, while in Macon County it will reach $200,000. Many houses and outbuildings in the path of the storm were completely demolished or badly damaged, a number of animals killed and the crops ruined.

AT Bowling Green, O., on the 4th, Isaac Burket, blacksmith, and two boys, Ed. Osborne aged fifteen, and John Chandler aged fourteen, were terribly burned about the face, breast, and arms, by the explosion of a can of powder while firing an anvil. Their clothes were mostly burned off but they will probably recover. All will be disfigured for life.

C. R. MARSHALL, the English forger, who was arrested at Milwaukee recently while attempting to pass cleverly executed £50 Bank of England notes, escaped from the police station at Chicago on the 5th.

E. L. CHASE won the three mile shell race at Wilkesbarre, Pa., on the 4th, beating John Gilligan.

JACOB WOELLMER, a wealthy farmer aged ninety years, attempted suicide at Erie, Pa., on the 5th by cutting his throat. He cannot recover.

PERSONAL AND POLITICAL.

THE House Committee on Elections has decided to reconsider its action in the contested election case of Fredericks vs. Wilson, of Iowa, and the latter gentleman will retain his seat.

THE Illinois Democratic State Convention met at Peoria on the 2d and placed in nomination the following ticket: For Governor, Carter Harrison; Lieutenant Governor, Henry Seiter; Secretary of State, Michael J. Dougherty; State Treasurer, Alfred Orendorff; Auditor of State, Walter A. Carlin; Attorney General, Robert McKinley. W. R. Morrison, John M. Palmer, J. C. Black and Lambert Tree were chosen Delegates-at-Large to Chicago.

MRS. MARY A. BINGHAM, wife of Representative Bingham, of Pennsylvania, died at Washington on the 2d after a lingering illness.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR has appointed Henry Plummer, a colored man, as chaplain of the Ninth Cavalry, one of the few regiments in the service composed of colored men. Mr. Plummer was a field hand in Prince George County, Md., at the time of the emancipation, and could neither read nor write. After graduating at Howard University, Washington, he took a course at the Harvard Theological Seminary and has since been pastor of a colored church in Washington.

AMONG the nominations sent to the Senate on the 4th were: John A. Kasson, of Iowa, Minister to Germany; Alphonso Taft, of Ohio, Minister to Russia; John M. Francis, of New York, Minister to Austria; and John J. Jarrett, of Pennsylvania, Commissioner of Labor.

ON the 5th death called away Mrs. Rachel Adler, of New Castle, Pa., at the age of 101 years, and Mrs. Phoebe Peck, of Westfield, N. Y., aged 103 years.

FOREIGN.

THE German Government has given an English firm of shipbuilders an order for the largest torpedo boat ever built.

A DISPATCH of the 2d from Kingston, Ont., says a large number of forest fires are raging in several of the adjacent townships. At the McGill settlement the fire was a couple of miles square and still spreading. Near the town of Mississippi the fire covers fourteen miles one way and three miles another. McLaren's mills and an immense stock of lumber were surrounded by fire.

A DISPATCH of the 2d from Asswam says it is rumored that 12,000 Arabs have attacked and captured Debbeh by assault. It is said 3,000 of the garrison and inhabitants were killed. The Mudir of Dongola and a number of officers have gone in the direction of Debbeh, with what object is not known.

A DISPATCH from Cairo received at London on the 4th says that letters from Khartoum state that the place was captured during the latter part of May without difficulty. There was no massacre. Most of the Europeans turned Mohammedan. Among those who did not was General Gordon, who is quite safe and allowed the freedom of Mahdi's camp. Mahdi himself is at Khartoum. The Europeans are well treated.

THE steamer Faraday has laid two hundred miles of the eastern shore end of Bennett-Mackay cable and returned to Queenstown for coal.

THE Pan Presbyterian Council at Belfast, Ireland, concluded its work on the 2d and adjourned to meet in London in 1888.

THE Shanghai correspondent of the London Times telegraphs that war is threatened between France and China, the influential party of China instigating it. Prominent officials such as Tso Tsung Tang, Peng Yu Lin and Marquis Tseng, have resolved to repudiate the French-Chinese negotiations. The French will probably claim an indemnity and demand that the Island of Formosa be pledged to secure its payment.

THE Bartholdi statue was presented to America at Paris on the 4th, Count De Lesseps making the presentation speech and Minister Morton accepting. There was a reception in the evening.

THE Fourth was celebrated in London privately by many Americans and several banquets were given. A grand dinner in honor of the day was given by the Americans in Berlin.

A FIRE at Lachine, Que., on the 5th destroyed forty houses, principally occupied by poor laborers, and three hundred people are homeless. Loss $50,000. The homeless people are housed in tents, and a subscription has been started for their relief.

LATER.

A DISPATCH from Denver, Col., says that Wilson, Carlisle & Johnson's cattle camp in the western part of Laplata County, near the Utah line, was attacked by the Ute Indians on the 3d. Charles Cook and Adolph Lusk, employes of the cattle company, were badly wounded; five Indians were killed and a number wounded. The whites lost eleven horses killed and one hundred stolen. The cowboys were driven off, their camp and outfits burned, and their provisions carried away by the Indians.

ASSIGNEE DAVIES filed an inventory of Grant & Ward, at New York on the 5th, showing the liabilities to be $16,792,567, nominal assets $27,159,998, actual assets $67,174.

A DISPATCH of the 6th from Cairo says the Mudir of Dongola telegraphs that 13,000 rebels attacked Debbeh on the 1st. They were repulsed after severe fighting and heavy losses on both sides.

IN the Senate on the 7th a message was received from the House announcing non-concurrence in the Senate amendment to the bill making temporary provision for the Navy. Mr. Hale moved that the Senate recede from its amendments; agreed to, and the bill passed. The House joint resolution providing for adjournment was amended so as to make the hour for adjournment two o'clock, and passed. A vote of thanks was given Mr. Edmunds for the ability, courtesy and impartiality with which he has performed the duties of President pro tempore of the Senate. The Chair appointed Messrs. Sherman and Bayard as a committee to join the committee of the House in informing the President that Congress having finished its business is now ready to adjourn. Messrs. Allison, Hale and Pendleton were appointed as members on the part of the Senate Commission provided for in the Sundry Civil bill to consider the present organization of the signal service, geological survey, etc. In response to an inquiry, Mr. Allison, Chairman of the Appropriation Committee, stated that the appropriations this year would aggregate $103,201,087. This aggregate did not include the appropriation for pensions, which once this year amounted to $66,000,000, raising the aggregate to $259,201,087. After a few farewell remarks by the Vice President pro tempore Mr. Edmunds, he declared the present sitting session of the Forty-eighth Congress adjourned without date. The House met in continuation of Saturday's session and in the absence of Speaker Carlisle a resolution was adopted appointing Mr. J. C. S. Blackburn Speaker pro tem. during the absence of the Speaker. The House then took a recess, and upon reassembling at 11:55 a. m. adjourned, and the session of Saturday closed. The session of Monday then began, and on motion of Mr. Randall the House concurred in the Senate amendment to the adjournment resolution fixing the hour for final adjournment at two o'clock. Messrs. Randall, Turner of Georgia, and Hiscock were appointed a committee to wait upon the President and ascertain whether he had any further communication to make to the House. A bill was passed increasing the pension of soldiers who have lost an arm at the shoulder joint to the amount received by those who lost a leg at the hip joint. Mr. Randall announced that the committee appointed to wait upon the President had performed that duty, and the President had no further communication to make to the House. Then the Speaker pro tem., wishing each and every member a safe return to his home, declared the House adjourned without day.

Odd, but Even.

It is quite a number of years since this old camel story trotted along the sands of time, so as the circus season is approaching it has been suggested that the Free Press start the ancient animal on its travels again. This is how it happened: Abou Ben Fli McGurlin, being full of years, died, leaving to his three sons his seventeen camels for the simple reason that he could not take them along with him. The will, duly attested, said the eldest was to have one-half, the second one-third, and the youngest one-ninth of the seventeen camels. The boys were a little perplexed at this, as it seemed to involve the cutting up of a camel, and camels were worth three dollars a das on the Sahara that season. But the boys, if not first-class mathematicians, had level heads and did not go to law to prove the old man insane, but went instead to the good old Cadi Hassan O'Donohue, who had taken a medal at mathematics at Ann Arbor.

"Boys," said the good Cadi, reproachfully, "you should not bother me with these little matters. Ask me a harder one."

But seeing they were troubled, the benevolent old man asked the hostler to trot out his own dilapidated camel, which had seen its best days traveling with Barnum as the Sacred Gnu of Persia.

Placing the aged brute with the seventeen camels the boys had brought along, he said:

"There are eighteen camels. I shall now give you half of the eighteen, which is nine. How does that strike you?"

"It hits me where I live," said the eldest, who was slangy, but withal, pleased at getting half of eighteen rather than half of seventeen.

"The next boy shall have one-third of eighteen, which is six. Are you there, Moriarity?"

"You bet," said the boy.

"The next will have one-ninth of eighteen, which is two," and so the third youngster collared his two camels. Thus two and six and nine made seventeen, and still was the good Cadi's aged animal left unscathed. The people marveled, as the Cadi had given each more than the will called for, which is rather unusual in courts of law. And they said one to another: "That's what it is to be good at figures."—Detroit Free Press.

Shinbones Mining Stock.

"War is dis hyar mine?" sez I.

"Right hyar on dis hyar map," sez he, pullin' out a big roll o' papah an' showin' it ter me.

"Now," sez he ter me, sez he, "we am a-go n' ter place dis stock onter de mahket at twenty-five cents a share. But as yo' am a frein' o' my fren' hyar, I'll let yo' hab all yo' can take at ten cents."

Wall, I 'lowed dat he war mighty kind, an' he 'quested me not to menshin it. I tole him I nebber guv anything away. I tought I'd better not put de whole treasury inter dat one stawk, so I tuk a hundrid shares, makin' ten dollars. Bless yo' hart! dat berry afternoon de stawk went up ter twenty-seven cents. I went ter my fren', an' sez I: "Don't yo' tink I bettah sell out?"

"No, no, Shinbones," sez he ter me; "it's a-goin' highah."

Shuah 'nuf, de nex' day it war up ter thirty cents, an' people war a-buyin' of it like mad. I wanted to sell out agin, but dey sez hole on, an' I kotched a fresh holt and friz right onter it. Nex' day it was up ter thirty-three cents, an' I wanted ter sell out agin, but dey say: "Hole on and yo' git a dollah a share." Wy, de nex' day I went ober ter de Minin' Exchange an' dar I seed a man wot I knowed, an' he sez ter me: "Luk at dat blackboahd dar." I looked an' read onter it: at dar war an assessment o' one dollah per share onter my stawk. I went right ober ter my fren's orfis, an' sez I ter he, sez I:

"I want my hundred dollahs."

"Wot yo' talkin' 'bout?" sez he.

"Assessment—dollah a share," sez I, smilin' k nider.

"Luk hyar," sez he, "assessments is war yo' pay us."

"Wot' Pay yo'? Wot fur?"

"Ter forrard de wclopment wuk on de mine. Dar's on'y a little hole in de groun' dar now, an' we want ter make it biggah so's we kin get out de gold."

"But I hain't got no hundred dollahs," sez I ter he, sez I; "how's I gwine ter pay yo'?"

"Wal, onder dose sahcumstances, az yo' owe us ninety dollars, we'll take back de stawk an' call it squar'."

"Yes, sah," sez I, handin' him de stawk an' mighty glad ter get rid of it. "but whar does I come in?"

"Yo don't come in 't all; yo' go out."

"Go out?"

"Yes, sah, right out'n dat doah;" an he tuk me by de shoulder an' gimme it pe'lite bounce. An' now yo' know why de serciety's got ter bust."—N. Y. Times.

—In a late address, Prof. Wiley gave the result of his investigations to decide the question: "How far north may the sugar industry extend?" He believes that the success of the sorghum sugar industry will not be found so far north as many of his friends had hoped, and many of his devotees prophesied. It is yet early to give a definite answer, but at present he inclines to the opinion that the isothermal lines for September, October and November that pass through Cape May, N. J., should be considered the northern boundaries of successful sugar culture.—N. Y. Post.

Communication presented by committee from fire department which reads as follows:

To the Honorable, The Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh: Greeting: The Fire Department, by the undersigned committee respectfully represent to your honorable body that in order to make the said department efficient and capable of doing effective work in the protection of the property of the citizens of this village, it is necessary that there be provided for the use of the department at least 500 feet of good new hose; and that for the better protection of property in the business portion of the village there should be built at least two reservoirs. That there should also, for the protection of property in the outlaying portion of the village, other and smaller reservoirs; That there should be provided a suitable Engine House.

All of which is respectfully submitted to the consideration of your honorable body.

S. W. BORDINE,
H. E. STOUT,
GEO. A. KIES,
[illegible],
F. ROSACRANS,
W. W. FRAZER,
Com.

Moved and supported that the fire committee procure at least 500 feet of good hose, the rest of the requests in said petition to be referred to the consideration of the fire committee with instructions to report as speedily as possible. An amendment was made to refer the said petition to a special committee, the Chair to appoint said committer. Carried. The Chair then appointed the present fire committee as said special committee.

A communication received from Henry McClure to enlarge building in the rear of his grocery. Laid on the table.

The Finance committee recommend payment of the following bills:

Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood, my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave. J. W. MOREY.

Buffalo, Oct. 1, 1881.

Poverty and Suffering.

"I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring.

I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I commenced using Hop Bitters, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost. BROOKLYN BALLAST.

Record us one for reform. Our business hours are changed from six to thirteen in the evening, and its lively work to get all the sugar and things packed in transportable order. Sugar is managed easiest.

We have the usual number of city baked visitors, and tramps rusticate in White's woods.

A colored widow who had become discouraged through lack of work, called on a neighbor without telling her intention, and consequently a suicidal scare convulsed Ennisville.

No delegate was sent from here to the great convention, and a general remissness takes the place of enthusiasm among republicans and democrats when nominations are discussed. So many of both parties fuse every day life in the field and workshop that they almost wished General Butler would be our next President. His cross-lot method of settling difficulties has saved time and temper heretofore, and his platform is as easily adjusted on small timbers as large. It is no secret that he considers women as citizens, and its too bad Mrs. Leonard's suffrage reason for divorceing her husband should spoil the aircastles built by factory girls and their carpenter cousins. That Chicago judge must be a good natured fellow, or else he thought Mr. L., such a slimsy affair he invented an excuse to match. If she had asked a decree in order to gain time to crochet, the plea would have been plausable; but to procure the franchise for women, is not only a thin argument, but has ruined Butler's prospects, and prejudiced most every man in creation against granting them the coveted privilege. The sympathy will of course be on his side, for if ever a man needs a home, and somebody to fit him for heaven, its the evening after he has franchised. The ill-timed separation of plank and platform may prove as disastrous to those who rejected it as a Leonard divorce, for whatever the faults may be of the veteran who planed it, he has ever been the champion of those oppressed. His life work has been colored with practical common sense and humanity, that amounts to almost positive proof the reforms most needed would be welcomed and not retarded by making him the head of the nation.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

Mrs. Julia D. Freer is very sick but is some better.

J. D. Arner is out again since his lay up for the mumps.

The depot grounds are soon to be put in shape. The low place along the side track is to be drained and filled. Fenner Palmer has the contract to do the grading. A promise was made by the engineer, that the depot building would be raised which will make noticeable improvements.

Mrs. Campbell and Miss Ella Cadmus left for Petoskey Wednesday. The former to stay some time, the latter to return in three or four weeks.

Sid Hathaway's little boy was severely injured Sunday by getting under the horses.

July 30th is the next meeting of the Union Club. Rev. John Chaplin of Dundee will address the meeting. Mr. Chaplin will attend as a delegate the national convention to be held at Pittsburg Penn. next week and will tell us about it.

Rev. De Geer who formerly preached at the Christian Church is calling upon his many friends in this locality. He occupied the pulpit at the Christian church last Sabbath.

Fine weather for haying and harvest.

Miss Kittie Clark is up around again and it is hoped she will fully recover.

Prof. Romyne Miller is visiting friends here this week.

Mrs. M. P. Brown of Hanover, is the guest of Mrs. Mary Arner.

Mr. Sammie Arner has gone to Hanover to study telegraphy with Mr. M. P. Brown.

Mrs. Cheever has the frame of her new house up. Wiggins and Heath are doing the work.

Mr. Enoch French spent a few days with his Lady this week.

Mrs. Wm Snedicor is visiting her many friends here this week. Mrs. Snedicor is always welcome.

There were quite a number went up to Devil's Lake on the excursion last Sunday.

The school in Dist. No. 5 closed last Friday afternoon. Miss Florence French the teacher has given good satisfaction. Her ability as a teacher is hard to compete with. She has made many friends since she came here who wish her success in all her efforts through life. She went to her home at Adrian Saturday.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Four ice-cream saloons in this town.

Charlie Parker, of Detroit, is spending a few weeks with his parents.

The inside of the Town Hall is receiving a coat of paint.

L. A. Dudley and wife, of Battle Creek, are visiting friends in this village.

The streets in this city were crowded last Saturday evening.

Miss Mary Kilpatrick has gone to Fowlerville this state and will remain there the rest of this summer.

Most farmers have finished cutting their wheat and the thrashing machine has already begun its yearly duties.

Miss Lizzie Brooks is home from a musical institution in Gault, Canada, for the summer vacation.

All Clinton democrats seem to fall into line and are already heard hurrahing for Cleveland and Hendricks.

The Congregational people surprised their pastor and wife, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Miller, last Monday evening, with a fancy quilt and one dozen solid silver teaspoons elegantly engraved.

Miss Addie Silvers fell from a cherrie tree last Tuesday and broke her arm.

The democrats will "ratify" and raise two hickory poles this Thursday evening. Prosecuting Atty., L. H. Saulsbury and Mr. O'Mealy, of Adrian will be the speakers.

One of Clinton's citizens had two ribs broken in a disgraceful fight in front of the Post office last Monday evening.

John Hause Jr. has reduced the price of ice-cream at his parlors from ten to five cents a dish, and will continue to sell it at this price the remainder of the season. Mr. Hause has furnished ice-cream for this community for the past five years with entire satisfaction. His parlors are nicely furnished and the quality and quantity of his cream will remain the same as when sold at the old price.

ONSTED ODDS.

Wheat is nearly all cut, and much of it drawn in.

G. A. Tracy of Buffalo, N. Y., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Samuel Morey.

Pearlie Sheeler is visiting her grandmother at Dundee.

Jonathan Hand is to build the grain elevator here, to be finished about the first of September.

Two little daughters of the Rev. G. R. Holt of Jackson, have been spending a few days here.

Mrs. Desermia and daughters, accompanied by Mr. Peter Desermia, returned to their home at Ithica, Mich., last week.

Miss Nora Morey who has been visiting friends in the state of New York for some time past, came home last week.

We have not heard of any orange blossoms around here lately, but John Lee has an apple tree that has a bunch of fresh apple blossoms on the same limb with half grown apples.

Several persons in this vicinity were anxious to buy the first calico dress ever sold at Onsted, and consequently watched for Mr. Glenn's dry goods to come. We hear that Charles Marshall was the lucky one.

To the Mountains and the Sea Shore.

The Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific railroad company, in connection with the Michigan Central, "Niagara Falls route," arranged the present season for three grand excursions via Toledo, Detroit, Niagara Falls, the peerless St. Lawrence, Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa, lake Memphremagog, Bethlehem, Fabyans, the White Mountains, through the Notch and North Conway, to Portland, Maine, and the seashore.

Two of these excursions have already gone, and have been well patronized. The third starts on August 5, and the fare from Adrian for the round trip is $24.35. The tickets are good to return for sixty days. The excursion will be personally conducted by Mr. M. C. Roach, southern passenger agent of the Michigan Central, and Mr. W. F. Bradley, the agent of the Wabash, at Adrian, will cheerfully give any information in regard to the trip.

Battle Creek Republican: A New York State gentleman, who has been visiting in this vicinity, remarked in the presence of our reporter this morning, that his state was at least twenty-five years behind Michigan, in the general use of improved farm machinery. His remark was based upon observation, and he further said that in the futuret "a farmer will have to be some one that is endowed with brains, beyond the capacity of hallooing Gee Haw, or guiding a plow; he would have to be a mechanic to a certain degree." The man is right, and the farmer will endorse his opinion.

John Britton to O. P. Henderson. Land on sec. 3. $75.

The Michigan association of spiritualists will hold their annual camp meeting this year on the Lansing fair grounds, August 7th to 18th. Following are the speakers engaged. A. B. French, Giles B. Stebbins, H. P. Fairfield, Mrs. L. A. Piersoll, J. H. Palmer, Mrs. Sarah Graves, Chas. A. Andrus, and others. Public tests will be given from the rostrum every day, the fire test among the rest. Season tickets $1.00, admission ten cents.

Jackson Patriot. Prosecuting Attorney Hewlett has become an object of interest again to the newspaper fraternity. It is vaguely hinted that he has secured some additional information in regard to the great Crouch tragedy. Perhaps his pilgrimage to Horton on Independence day had something more in it than the simple delivery of the Fourth of July oration.

Marshal Statesman: Work on the M. & O. shops is progressing rapidly. That portion of the walls blown down has been restored and the brick work is entirely completed. Roof trusses are up, and it is expected that the slaters will be at work Monday. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy by Sept. 1st.

Deerfield Record: We understand that when the stock of stave and heading bolts now in the yard at Jesse Chamberlin's mill at Sissons, is worked up, the machinery will be moved to this village. This is a good news, and we trust it may prove true. There is evidently a good opening here for a stave and heading factory.

MR. G. P. SPARKS SECOND LETTER.

EDITOR HERALD:—In your paper of the 20th ult., appeared an article headed, "Mr. G. P. Spark's Letter" copied from the June number of the BAPTIST ITEMS. In it we undertook to review that gentleman's published reasons for voting to accept the Saloonists' bonds. As might have been expected, this "review" brought from him a second letter, which appeared in your columns on the 3d inst. Hence we would be glad for space in your present issue.

Before coming to the point we wish to review more especially, permit us to say two things.

1. We deeply regret the "personalties" in Mr. Sparks' last communication. Discussion in public prints can do no good, unless it be confined strictly to principles. When it becomes necessary for the sake of clearness, as it sometimes does, to introduce the name of an opponent or of a third party, it should be done with the utmost courtesy. To do otherwise is to betray weakness.

2. In the last part of his letter (the second) he makes use of these words: "Now as Mr. Conley would rejoice in a prosecution, it seems to me that he is just the man to watch saloons and work up a case."

We are not prepared to say that our duty in this direction is not equal to that of any other citizen. Yet there is one difference between ourselves and Mr. S—, we have never declared through the press that we would prosecute all known violations, as he announced the Council would do.

Now for the point to which we wish to give special attention. In his advocacy of the saloonists' side of the temperance question, he says: Seeing then that we are wholly creatures of education and circumstances, we should exercise the broadest charity.

Again: The reason Mr. Conley is a minister of the gospel and not a saloon-keeper, is simply because his education and surroundings placed him in the pulpit. Reversed, Geo. K., would be an evangelist and Mr. Conley a saloon-keeper.

We can draw but one inference from these statements, viz: A man's character is invariably the product of his general surroundings, and has but little, if any, responsibility, if it be bad; and consequently is wronged, if he suffers unqualified disapproval.

While it is true that circumstances have much to do with a man's character and history, yet it is not true, that "we are wholly creatures of education and circumstances." Paul and Luther became what they were educated not to be. John Wesley and Roger Williams trampled their circumstances under their feet, and in each case originated a new impulse to human history. Were the doctrine of Mr. S. the correct one, Abraham Lincoln would have spent his life in rail splitting and James A. Garfield would have died in service on the farm and canal. It is the glory of a man to rise superior to his circumstances; and it is done by almost every noble spirit. Moody and Gough are conspicuous examples.

His doctrine is fatalism; every person living in unfavorable circumstances, it deprives of hope, and leaves to despair alone. It is as cruel as the caste system of India. It may be safely said that no one in our land of Bibles and churches, developes a bad character except by choice; and when a man chooses to be bad, he is unworthy of commendation or sympathy. Fifty years ago the seller and drinker of intoxicants were largely excusable; for the dreadful consequences were not generally known. But it is not so now. We have been warned times without number from pulpit, from platform, by the press and in the home, and it cannot be said that any man finds a valid excuse in his circumstances for drinking, or selling, liquor.

But for the sake of argument, let us allow that "we are wholly creatures of education and circumstances." What then? Is it not incumbent upon us to change the circumstances? The circumstances now existing in our town and state are those that tend to make drunkards of our boys and wrecks of our homes. From the saloon comes the breath of moral pestilence, and the dread disorder fastens upon many a bright and promising boy. Should those who hold the doctrine propounded by Mr. S., seek excuses to allow the "circumstances" to remain unchanged? Is it reasonable for them to retain the saloon, saying, "My action in this matter was based on equal justice to all men on the broad platform of humanitarianism!" Is it charity to oblige a community to have circumstances that must ruin its sons, break its heart and desecrate its homes? It seems to us that untiring, unrelenting war upon these circumstances is "broadest charity." No one who knows us would ever say that we have any ill will against the saloonist as a man. It is his business that we oppose and must continue to oppose until it is no more.

CHANGED AROUND.

"Why are you here, my little lad?"
Said a man in a bustling town.
"I am selling papers, sir," 'twas said,
"And my name is Jamie Brown."

"Where do you live, my little lad,
With your locks so crisply curled?"
"I have no home"—the voice was sad—
"Excepting the wide, wide world."

"Have you no friends to hood and shoe,
No mother to find, true?"
"No mother or friends," the child replied,
With his baby eyes askew.

"Where do you sleep, my little lad,
When your papers are not sold?"
"In books and corners, wherever I can,
I cuddle up from the cold."

"Whenever it happens you earn no dinner,
What do you do for food?"
"I live in hopes of better times,
And go without," he said.

"What is your name, my little lad,
You look like a boy of mine,
Who went on a journey past the stars?"
Said the urchin, "I am mine."

"Do you try to be good?" my little lad,
Own truthfully unto me.
"I am sorry, sir, I am sometimes bad,
But I do not mean to be."

"Will you come with me, my little lad,
To my warm and pleasant hearth?"
"I will go with you," the child replied,
"Wherever you wish, on earth."

Together they left the wind-swept street,
And entered a door-way, where
A woman watched with a gentle face,
And a gilt of gold in her hair.

"You have brought the child," she softly said
"He will fill our eyes with joy;
We can love with a tender love the dead,
Yet cherish the orphan boy."

And a kiss, like the touch of a rose-leaf light,
Was pressed on the lone lad's brow,
And he softly cried, "If angels bright
Can ever look here, just now,

"I pray my mother her child may see,
And I hope that yours she's found,
And that both of them know that mothers and boys
Have been only changed around."

And there was a flash and dash of tears
And a wave of kerchiefs white,
And the little newsboy had a home
In the hearts of love that night.

And if oft it could only know the joy
That in such by deeds is found,
So many an orphan would be a boy
Would Aunt Nancy "change around."

A LESSON FOR A FIRST READER.

I see a book. It is a First Reader. A First Reader is a book for very young children.

And being a book for very young children, containing in a condensed form the milk of its nature, who would have imagined that it ever could have by any possibility become the means of bringing the greatest confusion and vexation to a grown up? But it did. C. Samuella Golden, am that grown up. And I am the author (under the gentle supervision, I frankly confess) of that First Reader.

The way it came about was this. I am always been passionately fond of children. When a little double-shaft specimen of humanity came I adored all the smaller specimens with whom I chanced to meet. At the tender age of six, being the baby then of my own house, I feebly entered the home of one wa a woman one day, knowing her to be absent at the time, and stole her two months old Pat-sey from the cradle in which he was peacefully sleeping, and in spite of his kicks and yells, which I am sorry to say, I managed to carry him safely to our home, fortunately not far distant—and place him in the arms of my very much astonished mother. And when he was rescued and carried away again by his rightful owner, I sat me down in the door with a bang, and opened my mouth to its utmost width, and lifted my voice to its utmost height, and refused most emphatically to be comforted.

This love of little ones did not diminish in the least as I grew in stature and in years. On the contrary, it seemed to increase, and it became as natural for me to talk baby talk and make baby rhymes for every woo darling that came in my way as it was for me to breathe, and for the older youngsters I had always a story ready—some simple thing about simple things, but, by virtue of creation, my own. And having contrived to be an unobserved listener to several of these stories, and having also learned from Sue, his little niece, and "I made up out of my own head" the jingles with which she often sought to entertain him, Mr. Erickson, our school-master—and a very clever fellow, too—said to me one afternoon: "Miss Golden, I have undertaken a task in which I think—nay, I am sure—that you can, if you will, be of great assistance to me."

"And pray what may that task be?" asked I wonderingly.

"The preparation of a First Reader," he replied. "I do not expect the pecuniary results to be princely, though no doubt you would realize enough to compensate you for whatever time you might expend; but the practice would be excellent for you, and perhaps open the way for better paying literary work."

"Literary work," repeated I. "Why I never even dreamed of such a thing."

"Did you not," he said, with a smile "Well, you are not the first person who has remained in ignorance of his or her particular talent until a friend discovered it. But are you willing to give me a helping hand with the book?"

"Most willingly," said I. "Tell me plainly what I am to do, or to try to do and I will begin this very evening."

And I did begin that very evening, and extremely glad I was to do so. For I had already, although April has scarcely set in, trimmed my usual amount of spring hats and bonnets, which—our community not following strictly, for good and sufficient reasons, the decrees of fashion—also included most of the summer ones, thereby cutting off that source of income for four or five months. And it had been highly necessary that another source should be discovered immediately. From which statement we shall naturally infer that the Golden family was golden only in name. It was. Otherwise, of course I mean in a money sense, it was nickelly, and not that to as great an extent as desirable.

Father—well, any kind of steady business seemed to disagree with father consequently he contributed to our support only by fits and starts. Daniel, our eldest boy, worked faithfully as an assistant bookkeeper in a publishing house in New York City, and sent nearly half his salary to mother the first of every month. George, our youngest boy, was clerk with (a hope of some day becoming one of the firm) at the Wildwood general store, and I, as I have intimated above, was the Wildwood milliner. But work as hard as we might, Daniel, George and I, we could do no more, even with the intermittent help from father, than take care of ourselves and the rest of the family in the humblest way. (The rest of the family consisted of mother—a darling—grandmother, another darling—and three of the sweetest, cuddlingest little girls, two, five and six years old, that ever needed to be taken care of.) So, as you may well imagine, I was not only delighted, but extremely delighted, to get the chance of assisting Mr. Erickson with the Reader. And I confided as much to Matt Browster when we were coming home from church together the next Sunday evening. "Because, you see, Matt," said I, "if I succeed with this, may be I can go on writing until"—and I caught my breath at the boldness of the idea—"I am found worthy of a place in the juvenile magazines, and, as a successful writer, I could help the family much more than I can now, for literary work is for all seasons, and millinery only for two or three months out of the whole year."

"You forget," said Matt, "your rich uncle who is coming here from Australia soon, and who will, no doubt, so arrange things that the family will need no help at all from your hands."

"O dear!" said I, "so I did. But he has forgotten us for so many years—ever since I was five, and I was nineteen on my last birthday—that now he has condescended to remember our existence, and promise us a visit, it is no wonder that I can't keep him in mind. And we are not sure that his coming will benefit us any. He may be a cranky old man, and very hard to please. It is more than likely he is, for father (with whom he could never agree, though he is his only brother) tells me he was an unusually cranky young one."

"O, you must make him pleased with you," declared Matt, decisively. "You have an advantage and a great one, over the others. You are his god-daughter, you know."

"I know it to my sorrow," I assented. "Samuella! What a name to give an unfortunate girl baby! If it hadn't been for that saving 'Ella,' what would I have done? Fancy a woman's being called 'Sam' all her life!"

"But you will do your best to get into the old chap's good graces, won't you?" said Matt, coaxingly.

"Well, yes, I will, since your heart seems to be set upon it," I promised, though I wondered at the time why he was so anxious that I should become a favorite of Uncle Sam's. "I'll do everything but give up the Reader."

Matt Browster was chief proprietor of the store where my brother George was clerk, and he was also my acknowledged lover. The latter fact made me the envy of half the girls in Wildwood, for Matt was considered the handsomest and most fascinating young bachelor in the place. He was tall and slender, with very fair hair, light blue eyes, a straight nose, and a small mouth.

Mrs. Leroy, the young wife of old Captain Leroy, looked up to with great respect by three-fourths of the population of Wildwood, because she had her bonnet and gloves straight from Paris—gave it as her opinion that his brow was too narrow, and his chin too receating. "Give me," she said, calmly and coolly, "the school-master, any day, in preference. He is not quite as tall, but his shoulders are broader, so is his forehead, and he has a certain manly look and way about him that is utterly lacking in Mr. Mathew Brewster."

Strange as it may appear, I did not feel as indignant at this adverse criticism of my betrothed (by the way, I had stipulated at the time of my engagement, now two months old, that marriage should not be thought of for at least two years) as some of the other girls did. Nettie Haley, for instance—daughter of Haley, the builder, with a snug little fortune in her own right, inherited from her mother—was particularly wroth.

"She only talks that way," she said, referring to Mrs. Leroy, "because she wants to seem different from everybody else, just as she sends to Paris from this out-of-the-way village for her bonnets and gloves. Why, there's no comparison between the two men. Matt dances beautifully; Mr. Erickson don't dance a step. Matt sings lovely; Mr. Erickson can only join in a bass. Matt has a complexion like a girl's—and Mr. Erickson has one like—like——"

"A man's," I suggested, mischievously, as she paused for a comparison.

"O, pshaw, Ella, what a case you are! And about your own beau, too! But I don't really believe you know"—and here she heaved a deep sigh—"what a lucky girl you are."

"Well, I began the Reader, and soon became so absorbed in my work that everything I cast eyes upon instantly resolved itself into a First Lesson. Did the butcher stop at the door, "I see a man; he is a butcher; a butcher sells meat," immediately flashed through my brain. Did one of my intimate friends call, I greeted her in my mind with, "I see a girl; her name is May" (or Lib, or Molly, whichever it might be; "she comes to tell some news." My very dreams were haunted by like examples. I saw the queerest things. Their names were gibberish. They played strange and ridiculous pranks. But for all that—perchance in consequence of all that—the book progressed rapidly, and the first hundred lessons were almost completed, when mother received a letter from a cousin of hers, dated from the same place in Australia from which Uncle Sam had come. It read as follows:

"DEAR SARAH:—Your brother-in-law starts for Wildwood in a few days. I trust that he will arrive safely, and bring you permanent relief from your pecuniary troubles. You will find him much changed in personal appearance—the result of several hard fights in which he has been engaged—since you last saw him. Never handsome, he is now peculiar-looking. I write this especially to warn you, and to have you warn the others not to allude in the slightest way to the physical blemishes it will be impossible for you not to observe, as any such allusion would have the effect of rousing him to furious anger. With love to Samuella, upon whom he seems inclined to look with favor, and kind remembrances to the rest, I am yours faithfully,

TOM."

And not very long after the reception of this letter Uncle Sam made his appearance. He was "peculiar-looking," to use a favorite remark of one of our oldest citizens, "with a vengeance."

His head was bald in spots, as though the hair had been pulled out by great handfuls, and his face was all awry. Add to this the expression of an ogre, and you will not wonder that the children, who had been hastily dressed at news of his approach, were as hastily withdrawn to the kitchen when he arrived. Poor little darlings, we got them away just in time, for their lips had begun to quiver and their eyes to grow big with frightened surprise. "They will get used to him by degrees," whispered my mother, as I gave each of them a reassuring kiss. "And now, Ella dear, go back and do your best to entertain him until our father comes in, while I set about the dinner."

I returned to the parlor. I sat down opposite our visitor. I found a dreadful fascination in his unsymmetrical face. I could not remove my eyes from it. I essayed to speak, but before my mouth was fairly open Uncle Sam bent his shaggy brows and growled: "And so you're Sam, are you? And what do you see that you stare in that way?"

And then the spirit of that First Reader, in spite of all that I could do to resist it, took complete possession of me. I replied slowly and distinctly: "I see a man: he is a queer looking man: he has a crooked nose; he has a crooked mouth: he has a crooked chin: he has crooked eyes: he has an awful scowl: he is a rich man. I am a poor girl. I would rather be a pretty poor girl than a rich crooked man."

And that was the last of our expectations from Uncle Sam. He arose, thundered forth some words which I can not repeat, broke all the mantel ornaments at one fell swoop, and left the house never to return again.

I'll just add, to whom it may concern, that soon after the hopes of a fortune from my godfather were thus destroyed, my engagement to Matt Brewster was broken and that young gentleman married Nettie Haley.

As for me, I was "lucky" enough to become the happy wife of John Erickson. And our First Reader proved a perfect success. Miss Golden, in Harper's Weekly.

A Frank Epitaph.

The following epitaph occurs in The Champion of the East for January 12, 1880, a newspaper which, I believe, was very short lived. Whether it really exists, or ever existed, on a gravestone, or whether it is but a piece of newspaper satire, I must leave to some Cumbrian reader to inform us:

Copy of a Remarkable Inscription on a Monument Lately Erected in Hockley-town Church, Cumberland.

Here lieth the bodies of THOMAS BOND and MARY, his wife.
She was temperate, chaste and charitable.
But, she was proud, peevish and passionate.
She was an affectionate wife and tender mother.
But, her husband and child, whom she loved,
seldom saw her countenance without a disgusting frown;
Whilst she received visitors whom she despised with an enchanting smile.
Her behavior was discreet towards strangers;
But, imprudent in her family.
Abroad, her conduct was influenced by good breeding,
But, at home, by ill temper.
She was a professed enemy to flattery,
and was seldom known to praise or commend;
But, the talents in which she principally excelled were difference of opinion, and discovering flaws and imperfections.
She was an admirable economist,
and without parsimony,
dispensed plenty to every person in her family;
But, would sacrifice their eyes to a farthing candle.
She sometimes made her husband happy with her good humor;
But, much more frequently miserable with her many failings;
insomuch that, in thirty years' cohabitation he often lamented that, amidst all her virtues,
he had not, in the whole, enjoyed two years of matrimonial comfort.
At length finding she had lost the affections of her husband, as well as the regard of her neighbors, family disputes having been divulged by servants, she died of vexation July 20, 1768, aged 48 years.
Her worn-out husband survived her four months and two days,
and departed this life Nov. 28, 1768,
in the 54th year of his age.
William Bond, brother to the deceased, erected this stone
AS A WEEKLY MONITOR
to the surviving Wives of this parish, that they may avoid the infamy
of having their memoirs handed down to posterity with a Patch-work character.

"Don't"—Wake Him Early.

A correspondent of the N. Y. Morning Journal having asked it to give its opinion whether a little boy six years of age should be allowed to sleep until eight o'clock every morning, that paper thoughtlessly replies, "Wake him early." If this advice is followed by all the readers of a widely circulated newspaper it is liable to do a good deal of harm. If the boy sleeps until eight o'clock because he does not go to bed until ten or later, the remedy lies not in waking him early, but putting him to sleep early. If he goes to bed early and sleeps late, the fact alone is reason enough for not waking him.

A great deal of harm may be done by applying to growing children the term of "early to rise," "rising with the sun," etc. In old times when artificial light was scarce and dear, and many people were obliged to go to bed with the fowls, lying abed in the morning was a sign of laziness. This tradition has come down with so much force that many still count it a virtue to cut short the sleep of young children, whereas sleep may be absolutely necessary to their health and development.

If a boy who does not sit up late sleeps until eight o'clock, it is a sign that he needs more sleep than most boys; and it is too sweeping, as it is cruel, to say "wake him early." A parent has no more right to starve a child of sleep than of food; not as much, in fact, because a child is often in danger of eating too much, but seldom in danger of sleeping too much; certainly not when his sleep is a part of his regular night's slumber.—Detroit Free Press.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accummulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Feb. 1., 1883.

In our long and varied experience in handling watches, we cannot but acknowledge and give our testimony that the Keystone Solid Silver Watch Cases are the best made to our knowledge. Having no soldering they remain homogeneous, harder and stiffer than they would be were they heated for soldering, and have more resisting power against pressure than any other cases in the market. AMONG RAILROAD MEN.

Popularity and Usefulness of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. A Thrilling Letter from a Master Mechanic.

Master Mechanic's and Superintendent's Office, Lowell Repair Shops of Boston & Lowell R.R., LOWELL, Mass., March 25, 1881.

Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir,—I think it is due to you that I should make the following statement, and I make it voluntarily and willingly. On the 4th day of June, 1881, I was taken with what was called paralysis of the bowels. The seizure was unexpected and terrible. The stomach and other organs seemed to sympathize with it and to have lost all power of action. For a long time my life was despaired of, but at length I recovered so far as to be able to ride out. By the advice of my physician I visited Poland Springs, etc., hoping to benefit from the waters, but they did me no good. Neither were the best physicians of Lowell and Boston, whom I consulted, able to afford me more than transient relief. I gained no strength and my case appeared almost hopeless. In the fall a friend advised me to try KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, and although opposed to patent medicines I made the trial. To make a long story short, Favorite Remedy, in my opinion, saved my life. I consider it the best preparation in the world for stomach difficulties, as well as of the liver and other organs. I am glad to say it is in general use among the R. R. men in this vicinity.

Yours, etc., A. J. GIFFORD.

Mr. Gifford is the Master Mechanic of the Lowell division of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and his illness and recovery are known to many who can testify to the facts in his letter.

I use this medicine for all diseases of the blood, kidney, liver, stomach, bowels and skin. It may save you or yours from pain and death.

Address, if desired, Dr. David Kennedy, Roundout, N. Y.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a common Eruption to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude, cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or to 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

Is designed to meet the wants of a large portion of our people who are either too poor to employ a physician, or are too far removed to easily call one, and a still larger class who are not sick enough to require medical advice, and yet are out of sorts and need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood, and oil up the machinery of their bodies so it will do its duty willingly. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy.

"My friends, you need not take our word. Ask your neighbor, who has just taken one bottle, 'He will tell you that 'It's the best dollar I ever invested.'"

LEBANON, N. H., Feb. 19, 1883.

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co.: Dear Sirs—Although greatly prejudiced against patent medicines in general, I was induced, from the excellent reports I had heard of your Sarsaparilla, to try a bottle, last December, for dyspepsia and general prostration, and I have received very gratifying results from its use. I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,

F. C. CHURCHILL,
(Firm of Carter & Churchill.)

DOMESTIC.

THE discovery has been made that the late W. R. Morrill, President of the Cincinnati & Eastern Railroad, who came to his death recently by falling from the door of a baggage car to the bottom of a trestle near Winchester, had been raising money by fraudulent practices. This gives color to the theory that his death was suicide. His method was to repeat genuine notes given in his favor and use them to obtain loans. It has been found that one note was repeated six times, and his obligations are said to reach $100,000.

THE Secretary of the Interior has requested the Secretary of War to cause the arrest of Captain Payne and such of his party (reported to number 1,500 or 2,000) now upon the Cherokee outlet lands in the Indian Territory as have violated the Revised Statutes, and to expel all other intruders now upon the lands before the movement assumes more formidable proportions.

EXTENSIVE frauds, connected with the sale of school lands have just been unearthed at Dallas, Texas, in which a Doctor Pierce, who has been arrested, figures as principal. The frauds consist of fraudulent and forged applications as actual purchasers. Some six sections in Howard County are included in the steal. The applications are made out to fictitious persons. Dr. Pierce and a notary of Howard County named Wampler are charged with manufacturing fraudulent applications and forging the names of applicants and witnesses. Wampler has also been arrested.

ESTATE OF SIRRELL C. LE BARON.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 23d day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Sirrell C. Le Baron, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Delos C. LeBaron, a son of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Edgar A. Tribou, the executor in said will named, or to some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 21st day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

NORMAN GEDDES, Judge of Probate.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 17, 1884.

It was a grand convention and its work was well done.

And the tail of the ticket is as good as the head. It is a strong ticket, headed either way.

Both parties are taking a breathing spell now preparatory to the great struggle which will soon begin.

There will be no bolting from Cleveland and Hendricks on the part of the Democrats. The ticket was made to win.

Wait till you see Blaine's letter of acceptance. That will be something for the Republicans to hurrah over, and it is safe to say that it will be interesting reading.

The Convention could not afford to submit to the dictation of John Kelly. Tammany's violent opposition forced the issue, and made Cleveland's nomination a necessity.

Ohio cut a sorry figure as usual. Had Allen been a unanimous democratic Democrat and had a muzzle been put on John Kelly, the "old Roman" would have probably been the nominee.

The game will be played for New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana and the solid South. Who holds the winning cards? That is the question to be decided at the ballot box next November.

Col. Eldridge has returned from Washington. He has made a good record in the Lower House, has performed his duties faithfully and has given satisfaction to his constituents. He has proven himself a worthy successor of Beaman and Willetts. The Democrats owe it to themselves as well as to Col. Eldredge to tender him a unanimous renomination.

The New York Herald is responsible for the following:

He was evidently an enthusiastic Cleveland man. He stood on Broadway expressing his views to a friend with great earnestness. He pounded the end of his umbrella on the sidewalk to emphasize his remarks, and as the Herald reporter passed by, he heard him say:

"Yes, sir, I tell you what, Cleveland will draw the votes of all the independents. The disinfected republicans are all for him."

It is generally understood that Capt. C. R. Miller is in the field for the Republican nomination for Congress. Mr. Miller is well equipped, both by natural talents and by acquired experience, for the position. We can think of no Republican in the district who would make a stronger run, and if elected he would certainly discharge the duties of a congressman with credit. Give us good nominations on both sides and then the people will be well served in any event.

"Quiz" of the Saginaw Courier says: —It was apparent on the surface that the Independent Republican movement exerted a powerful influence in the nomination of Cleveland, and as confidently asserted that he would gain two votes for every one lost. A gentleman from New York states that Mr. Cleveland would draw a pretty solid support from the business interests not only of New York, but other sections of the country. This element was opposed to Mr. Blaine at the outset and would not now support him, since Cleveland eminently suited them. It must be admitted that there is some force in this.

The Springfield Republican says: The nomination of this ticket gives the Democracy an even chance of carrying the country. They have sound candidates upon a good platform. They will have to contend with more or less defection to Butler and Kelly, but the total absence of real grievances on the part of the latter and the prospect of success if harmony prevails will tend to solidify the party vote in New York. On the other hand, the Independent vote, which the nomination of Blaine has lost the Republican ticket, will be cast for Cleveland. The Independents will put up no third candidate, but will heartily support Cleveland and Hendricks. The Democratic nominations therefore stand an even chance of carrying the States of New York, Connecticut and New Jersey, which at present are in Democratic hands, but the campaign will be fiercely contested on both sides and we apprehend that the use of money will be carried to an alarming degree.

THE LAST TICKET.

The following extracts taken from a few of the leading independent newspapers of the land, show how Cleveland's nomination strikes nonpartisan voters. These extracts are all from independent papers of Republican proclivities.

The New York Herald says: The Herald puts at the head of its columns the democratic ticket for President and Vice President of the United States. We congratulate the democratic party upon the work of its convention at Chicago and the opportunity it offers to the American people, through a union of patriotic voters, by whatever name they call themselves—democrats, independents, labor reformers or whatsoever else—to redeem the country from the disgrace and peril to which the republican party has plotted to expose it by the thoroughly bad nominations of Blaine and Logan.

Cleveland's easy nomination on the second ballot yesterday justifies all that we have thought and said of the sound judgment and good sense of this Convention when put to a decisive test of choosing between what is vital, sound and vigorous in the democracy and what is very much the other way, and the Convention is to be congratulated upon the fact that it has named the man who will be the next President.

Parties in this country are to-day at a turning point in their history, and it is for the democracy, if it hopes to impress its convictions upon the life of the nation, to take this turn in the tide at its happy moment or it must remain stranded with the wrecks of its past not over respectable history. The nomination of Cleveland means that the young democracy is determined to take the tide at its flood. We believe also that it is a nomination which will command the approval of the aged and sagacious as well as enthusiasm of the vigorous [illegible]

The Boston Herald says: In nominating Governor Cleveland for President the Democratic party has displayed the wisdom of its opportunity, as the Republican party in nominating Mr. Blaine manifested the audacity of its desires. There are corrupt and dangerous elements in both parties. In the Republican party they have at last prevailed. In the Democratic party they have been beaten down. The Republican party is led by its tail, the Democratic party by its head. With a reform candidate nominated by the Democratic party solely because he is and has always been a reformer and is acceptable to the reform voters, it looks like the beginning of a practical reorganization of parties. It certainly looks like the beginning of the end of the Republican party as at present organized and led. On the whole, a change is desirable. Cleveland will be elected. The independent voters will all support him.

Col. McClure, editor of the Philadelphia Times says: It is the most thoroughly deliberate Convention that has met since the organization of the present parties, with the single exception of the Lincoln Convention that started the Republican revolution in this city nearly a quarter of a century ago. It was not wedded to Grover Cleveland; it was not for him as a man; he had fewer personal acquaintances in the Convention than had any successful candidate since Lincoln. He had no factious support outside of his battle with spoilsmen in his own State; he had no sectional sentiment or interest to rally under his flag. But from East and West, from North and South the most conservative and resolute supporters of honest government united to nominate him as the fittest and best leader of the revolution that public profligacy and debauchery so imperiously invite.

The conflict will be one of the most violent and exhaustive of our political history. The Republicans have their ablest leader. His undiscovered resources are vast and will be employed in desperation. His party has boundless means of political warfare and they will be summoned to the uttermost. There will be money for the venal, honors for the ambitious, plunder for thieves, promises for the weak and flattery for fools; but the very desperation of the strife will multiply and crystalize the forces of reform, and only some monumental Democratic folly can hinder the election of Grover Cleveland.

The August number of DEMOREST'S ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY is usually interesting. Among the many articles that call for favorable notice are "On Foot and Four-in-hand in the Tyrol," "Costume Portraits in the Paris Salon," "At the Whitby Jet Works," "Opportunities for Women," by Jenny June, and "Ernst Moritz Arndt, Poet and Patriot." Ella Wheeler, Eleanor Kirk, and others contribute excellent stories, and the illustrated article on the popular "Crazy Quilt" will prove useful to ladies. "The World's Progress," and the various departments are of interest and utility, and the illustrations excellent. The beautiful oil picture, "A Feather in her Cap," is exceedingly attractive.

FORCED TO RESIGN.

Thomas P. Graham, Chief of the Stamp Division of the Postoffice Department, Accused of Negligence.

A Court-Martial Ordered in the Case of Medical Director Wales—General Swaim Seeking to be Placed on the Retired List.

REQUIRED TO RESIGN.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Through inquiries made at the Postoffice Department in regard to the recent theft of stamps it is learned that Thomas P. Graham, chief of the stamp division, was charged with the duty of seeing that the condemned stamps which were forwarded to the department from the stamp agency were counted and destroyed. The Postmaster General thought Graham's negligent manner in discharging this duty enabled Bruggeman, as a member of the committee appointed to count and destroy the stamps, to steal those which were found in his possession. The Postmaster General, therefore, required Graham to resign, which he did to-day. Moses Bradshaw, a third-class clerk and formerly of the stamp division, was appointed to the vacancy. Graham has been a clerk in the department a long time. His intelligence and integrity were well known by everyone, including the Postmaster General, and his resignation was demanded solely upon the ground of negligence, as stated above.

WHERE THE BLAME LIES.

The Coroner's Jury which investigated the fatal railroad accident on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, near this city, Saturday night, brought in a verdict placing the responsibility for the collision on John Sullivan, the flagman, who displayed a white light to the train which was behind time when he had been signalled to display a red light as an evidence that the track was not clear. Sullivan was arrested.

HE WILL BE COURT-MARTIALED.

Secretary Chandler intends to order a court-martial in case of Medical Director Wales, for inefficiency in the management of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery while he was Surgeon General. It has transpired that while Wales was Surgeon General certain quarters for that bureau at Norfolk and Maryland navy yards were erected which cost very much more than they should have cost, because Wales gave the contract to build them to a friend in Baltimore instead of allowing them to be [illegible] fitend to let up in this matter.

SWAIM'S CASE.

It is understood that friends of Judge Advocate General Swaim, of the army, will seek to have him retired. He has become a wreck physically and mentally in consequence of nervous prostration. His court-martial has been postponed till September, though the efforts of his friends were to have it take place immediately. Of course, if he is retired it will be on account of physical inability, and he will be allowed to draw his retired pay the balance of his life.

The Effects the Cholera Has on Drugs.

NEW YORK, July 15.—A noticeable effect of the cholera outbreak in Europe is the rise here of the price of drugs used in the prevention and treatment of the disease. The demand has been largely stimulated. Opium, which is largely used in compounding cholera mixture, has advanced twenty-five cents per pound in the last few days. It may, however, be questioned whether the rise in opium comes from the scare or the shortness of the crop this year. Sulphate morphine is twenty cents per ounce higher, and oil peppermint has recently advanced. A considerable amount of it has recently been exported. The demand for camphor is increasing, and a rise is expected. Chloride of lime is being largely purchased, and is twenty cents per hundred pounds higher. Carbolic and crystals have advanced from twenty-five to thirty per cent. There is considerable buying by France in England also.

A Statement Promised in the Case of the Federal Bank.

TORONTO, Ont., July 15.—Mr. Yarker, the newly-appointed general manager of the Federal Bank, promises a full statement of the bank's affairs at an early date. He says the assets amount to $12,000,000, spread over the country from Montreal to Winnipeg. There is a good deal of discussion as to who will succeed Mr. Yarker as manager of the Bank of Montreal. Among the names are Mr. Munro, manager of the Chicago branch; Mr. Hebden, assistant manager at Chicago; and it is also stated that Mr. McNider, inspector and assistant general manager, who is now in charge, is willing to take the Toronto agency permanently.

Two Young Women Drowned.

MONTREAL, Que., July 15.—At Valois, a watering place about fourteen miles from Montreal, Saturday evening Miss Ross, daughter of P. S. Ross, of Montreal, and her cousin, Miss Barry, of Glasgow, Scotland, went out in a small boat to bathe. They anchored the boat about 300 yards from shore. Persons watching them saw something was wrong in a few minutes after they entered the water and raised an alarm. Nothing could be done to save them. The bodies were recovered about four hours afterwards.

Gov. Murray's Reception.

OGDEN, Utah, July 15.—Gov. Murray arrived here Saturday evening and was tendered a royal reception by the Gentiles. The demonstration was the grandest ever given to an official in Utah. The city was fairly ablaze with bonfires and torches. The streets were thronged with people. The Mormons took no active part in the reception. The Governor delivered a stirring, patriotic address from the balcony of the Broom Hotel.

Hoffman Convicted.

CINCINNATI, July 14.—John B. Hoffman, who murdered his son Robert in this city January 12, 1883, was this morning sentenced to be hanged October 24, 1884. The Governor will be petitioned to commute his sentence.

Death of a Well-Known Rabbi.

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—Rev. George Jacobs, pastor of Bethel Emith Synagogue, died this morning.

HE THOUGHT HE HAD TIME.

An Engineer's Carelessness Causes Two Serious Collisions.

NEW YORK, July 15.—A passenger train on the Brooklyn & Coney Island Railway came in collision with an engine and coal car yesterday afternoon near the curve at the Greenwood Cemetery and badly bruised a number of passengers. Charles Merwing, engineer of the coal train, left the depot at Brooklyn, thinking he had time to make the switch outside the city limits before the 2:30 train came along. He met the passenger train coming at full speed just as he turned the curve at Greenwood Cemetery. He reversed his engine and leaped to the ground. Lewis Hart, the engineer of the approaching passenger train, also reversed his engine, but remained at his post. After the collision the coal train with the engine reversed and under full steam backed away. It was seen speeding toward the depot where it crashed into a crowded passenger train. The coal car and engine were thrown from the track. The engine of the passenger train was completely wrecked, and the roof of an open car entirely carried away. Seats were broken and ground together. No one killed outright. Casualties were reported as follows: Frederick Alston, 485 Third Avenue, a severe scalp wound; Henry C. Baven, 79 Hanbury Street, and James Longman, seven years old, 209 Wyckoff Street, injured about head and back; Jacob Brown, engineer of the passenger train, internal injuries, probably fatal; Dennis Murray and John Murphy, Newark, N. J.; Daniel O'Malley, 25 Twenty-second Street, Brooklyn; Mrs. Clara Burns, Brooklyn, and Frank Major, all bruised severely, but none fatally. Charles Merwin, engineer of the coal train, to whose carelessness the collisions were due, has not yet been arrested.

Prohibition in Iowa.

BURLINGTON, Ia., July 15.—Two saloon keepers of this city, Philip Leicht, Jr., and Charles Reinert, appeared before Judge Beck at Fort Madison to resist an application for an injunction to restrain them from maintaing a nuisance by keeping saloons. On consultation the application was withdrawn. In the afternoon a search warrant was issued against Leicht, and two constables searched his place and succeeded in finding nine bottles of beer and half a bottle of stomach bitters, with which they started to police headquarters. During the search a large crowd had gathered in front of the the place, through which the officers had to make their way. As they did so the bottles of beer were snatched from the officer's hands, and when they arrived at the police office they had in their possession one bottle of beer and half a bottle of bitters. The affair caused some excitement and much merriment.

Injured by an Explosion of Gas.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 15.—Yesterday afternoon the natural gas at the Westinghouse well exploded from a leak, seriously and probable fatally injuring drillers Harry Hall and William Vensel. Both men were terribly burned and it is feared injured internally. The derrick took fire, but the flames were extinguished before it was seriously damaged. The Zimmerman well at Brushton, in the East end, struck gas this evening at a depth of 600 feet. Four other wells are expected to reach a vein in a few days. It is reported that oil was struck at Coal Valley, fifteen miles southerly on the Monongahela River.

Killed by an Infuriated Husband.

PIEDMONT, W. Va., July 14.—A message from Bayard, Md., thirty-four miles from here on the West Virginia Railroad, says that a man named Glenn shot and instantly killed a man named Stephenson near that place Friday evening. The message says the tragedy grew out of bad feeling between the men on account of the intimacy of Stephenson with Glenn's wife. Stephenson had been warned to stay away from his wife by Glenn, but was caught in the house by the injured husband, who shot him through the heart.

A Sensation in the Sharon Case.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 15.—W. M. Neilson, who was chief instigator in the famous suit of Miss Hill against ex-Senator Sharon for divorce, has announced his withdrawal from the case. He says he became aware that certain testimony on which she based her case had been falsified. The falsification consists in changes in the "My dear wife" letters. The word "wife" has been added. The statement creates surprise. The trial will be resumed to-day.

Hung by a Mob—Two Men Killed.

CINCINNATI, July 15.—Dick May, a negro charged with attempt to rape upon Miss Stella Keller within, or near Owensboro, Ky., was taken from the Owensboro jail, and hanged by a mob. The jailor, K. M. Lucas, was shot through the lungs and killed. Lucas fired on the mob from a balcony while they were hanging May in the court yard, killing one of the mob and fatally wounding Dr. Lockhart a prominent physician.

Hamilton College Troubles.

UTICA, N. Y., July 15.—A memorial, signed by 200 graduates of Hamilton College, was presented to C. C. Kingsley, Secretary of the Board of Trustees yesterday, praying that the trustees take steps to settle the difficulties in the college before the opening of the fall term. Secretary Kingsley promised to do all in his power toward the desired end.

Postmaster Arrested for Embezzlement.

PHILADELPHIA, July 15.—Postmaster William T. Bailey, of Camden, New Jersey, was arrested this morning on charges of embezzlement and held in $3,000 bail for hearing Monday. A warrant was also issued for the arrest of Assistant Postmaster Jesse V. Mines for embezzlement.

Buried Under a Land-Slide.

PITTSBURGH, July 15.—A Parker, Pa., special says that while a gang of men were digging along the Allegheny Valley Railway track at the mouth of the Clarion River the hillside caved in and fell on them. Two men were dug out dead and two more will die.

Failures.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The schedules in the assignment of Pearce & Hall, hat manufacturers, filed yesterday, show liabilities of $170,000; nominal assets $111,000; actual assets $81,000.

STAUNTON, Va., July 15.—J. W. Newton, dry goods, failed.

Steamship Ashore.

Another cold wave last Sunday.

If you want a good time, go to Put-in-Bay on the 23d.

The extra fat and the extra lean are adapted to the Mother Hubbard dress. A woman of a shape has no business in one.

The cheapest excursion of the season will take place on the 23d via the M. & O. and steamer Chief Justice Waite to Put-in-Bay.

The Union service will be held in the Baptist Church next Sunday evening. Rev. Geo. W. Hudson, pastor of the M. E. Church will preach.

Put up fruit now, so you can "put it down" next winter. Cherries $1,00 per bushel and good sugar 14 lbs. for a dollar. Don't complain.

Children's Sunday was appropriately celebrated at the M. E. Church last Sunday. Floral decorations were quite numerous, and the services both morning and evening were appropriate to the day and occasion.

A NEW HOTEL.

Tecumseh is to have a new hotel. H. S. Lee has for some time been contemplating building an extension upon the North end of his large family residence on Chicago street and converting the new building into a hotel. His plans have finally taken form and ground was broken for the new structure last Tuesday afternoon. The building will be of brick 27x44 feet in size and three stories high, and will fill the vacant lot between Mr. Lee's house and the South line of Chicago street. The location is an admirable one for a hotel, one of the best in the village, and the building itself will be constructed with a view to making it as convenient as possible for hotel purposes. It will be sufficiently central to accommodate the traveling public and yet be out of the hubbub. All four sides of the building will be well lighted. In fact Mr. Lee intends to have the model hotel in this section of the State. The contracts for the work are let and the building will be opened for the traveling public in about sixty days.

A TERRIBLE RUNAWAY.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rector and Two Young Ladies Thrown From a Wagon and all Seriously Injured.

Last Sunday forenoon Frank Rector and his wife attended Church in the village according to their usual custom. On their return home, they overtook Miss Mary Platt, who is living in Mr. John Rector's family and Miss Nellie Boyce. As Frank had a two-seated buggy he invited the ladies to ride with him, promising to leave them at John Rector's. Just before arriving there his team became frightened, suddenly whirled and turned the buggy bottom side up, throwing all the inmates violently to the ground. The parties got into John Rector's house as best they could and a messenger was dispatched for medical aid. Dr. L. G. North was the first man found and upon arriving at the scene he found four badly bruised patients. Mr. Rector's head and shoulder were seriously jammed and bruised. At first it was feared that his skull was fractured, but luckily such was not the fact. Mrs. Rector had her nose broken and sustained other injuries. Miss Platt and Miss Boyce each had an arm broken. The broken limbs were properly set and the bruises were properly poulticed, and the patients are all doing as well as could be expected. The buggy and horses were considerably demoralized also.

As soon as the snow is off the ground in the spring, Jim Cole commences to receive vegetables, and he keeps a fresh assortment of all kinds as long as they can be obtained.

Now doth the good housewife and children, armed with tin pails and baskets and dressed in the raiment of tramps, sally forth to the woods in search of whortleberries.

Camping-out parties are now the rage at the lakes, and the parties who go out generally do considerable "raging" about the time the mosquitoes begin to get in their work.

The man with a lung tester may be expected on the street-corner shortly. The use of his instrument is unnecessary during a campaign, when there is always lung testing going on.

Uncle Joe Gray was in town last Tuesday for the first time in two months. He is quite feeble in health now, but always calls to see his friends whenever he comes to town.

The Lenawee County Agricultural Society will hold its 7th annual exhibition, on the new grounds, by the Wabash depot at Adrian, on Tuesday, Sept. 23, and continuing until the 26th.

A Hillsdale lad swallowed a silver quarter on the 4th. He evidently wanted to lay out a little money on his internal improvements, but it took a doctor to save his life all the same.

Miss Maggie McDonald, employed at the Lawrence house, sustained a terrible blow upon the head, Wednesday afternoon, by the falling of an empty barrel from the roof of the building. She was unconscious for twelve hours. —Adrian Press.

The excursion to Devil's Lake last Sunday was well patronized. There were four coaches well filled with passengers, eighty-four tickets having been sold at the Tecumseh station. Another excursion will take place on Sunday the 27th inst.

The editor of the St. Louis Democrat does not tell his friends that he catches his excellent trout with a hook and line, but comes squarely out and acknowledges that they were obtained from a fish peddler. A reform movement has thus set in.

The general business outlook is improving and if crops turn out as well as present promise indicates, sixty days more will inaugurate an era of comparative prosperity. The farmers have just gathered an excellent crop of hay and wheat promises well. Be of good cheer, my brethering!

Further evidences as to the depredation of the weevil, shows that the damage is not as great and as wide spread as was feared. While some fields are ruined, others in the locality are but little damaged, and still others not at all. On some farms one field is found badly damaged, another not touched. They seem to have worked only in spots.

The Democrats of Clinton will ratify this evening.

The I. O. O. F. band of Blissfield have new uniforms.

Raynor Lilley and wife of Cleveland Ohio, are taking their summer vacation in Tecumseh and vicinity. They are spending a few days now at Devil's Lake.

It costs Lenawee county $2,500 to take the census of the county. The expense of the city commissioners was $360, and the towns ran from $65 to $160 each.

The Council have voted to purchase new hose for the fire department, and a committee has been appointed to consider the other matters asked for by the firemen.

Adrian Press: The Odd Fellows of this city have instituted a uniformed rank. Ed. Anglin is commander and John Hollister is vice-commander. There are 25 charter members.

L. F. Wheeler has been in Jackson County for a few days past taking Landscape views. Among them is the Crouch homestead, showing the scene of the horrible tragedy on Nov. 21st '83.

F. W. Keip, is becoming acquainted with our citizens and is well pleased with the business patronage he has received since he opened his store here. He has done better than he anticipated thus far.

The night blooming cereus of Mrs. Spaulding, at her green house, was in full bloom on Saturday night last, and was visited by a large number of our citizens. There will be another blossom in a few days.

Adrian Press: The county papers are poking fun at the Adrian citizens for the Corner-Stone fizzle, and we beg them to say no more. Adrian feels the humiliation as deeply as do our friends from the country.

Morenci Observer: Asa A. Kennedy, the only original boomer of Morenci over thirty years ago, is visiting his relatives in this locality. He is actively engaged in the mercantile business at Oxford, Iowa, and doing a prosperous business. He reports that Iowa will produce the grandest crop this year of its entire history.

The Chautauqua movement has been extended to include the young folks, who already have a "Reading Union." They are now to have an illustrated periodical of high character, which will be issued in July by the Publishers of the far-famed Wide Awake magazine, D. Lothrop & Co., who will send it free for two months to any of our readers who may request it.

Adrian Record: A young dude of Detroit, having made some insulting advances to a group of ladies, who were seated in the window of a boarding house, was invited in by them and accepted. The landlady of the house—a large, mascular woman—was called and proceeded to administer a severe drubbing to the puppy, who hastily departed in a dilapidated condition.

Manchester Enterprise: The saloons were open on the 4th in Manchester the same as in most of the towns, as is evident by reading the state exchanges, and as a matter of course people got drunk. The officers succeeded in keeping pretty good order, but some roughs who evidently came here to have a time had to be accommodated, and one Lillis, of Macon, said to be a bad one, attempted to kick up a row at Kirchgessner's and afterward at the dance in the broom factory, and when the officers attempted to put him in the lockup for safe keeping, he fought them so stoutly that he was handled pretty roughly. A friend offered to take him home if the officers would release him, which was done.

A letter from Dr. H. W. Gatlin indicates that he is much pleased with the business outlook at Grand Rapids.

C. L. Waring of Holland, Mich. was taking his summer vacation among his Ridgeway friends last week.

Hoxsie's foundry at Holloway has a new boiler in position and the firm is completing a large double cylinder stationary engine for a saw mill in Ogden.

Mrs. A. J. Bigelow, accompanied by her little daughter Blanche, is the guest of Miss Hattie Stevens this week, and is enjoying a few days reviving old Tecumseh acquaintance. She likes East Saginaw as a place of residence.

Adrian Times: The citizens of Deerfield are now amusing themselves by pitching half dollars, one fellow immortalizing himself the other day by winning $35 at the game. These chaps have never yet been accused of pitching any of their shekles into a church plate.

Adrian Times: Some vandal was mean enough, at some time since Saturday afternoon, to chip pieces out of some of the sandstones at the new court house which have been cut and made ready for the building. The stones are spoiled, but the authorities have a pretty definite idea as to the identity of the desecrating rascals, and it is not unlikely that some arrests will follow shortly.

The Detroit Free Press says the oat crop of Michigan will be an unusually heavy one, according to present appearances, being estimated in some of the large oat growing sections as high as 115 and 120 per cent. of the average yield. Oats and rye are also in fine condition. Buckwheat is being sown in larger acreage than common. Where this crop has been sown it is coming up in fine coedition. Potatoes promise everywhere a large yield this season.

The day is cold, and dark, and dreary, when the small boy gets left. He is bold and aggressive as a butcher's dog, and as crafty and full of guile as a handsome old maid; he is as profane as a parrot in a sailor's boarding house, quick at all kinds of mischief, yet as uncertain about his Sunday school lesson as a new made lord of his pedigree; but when the time comes for him to fill a man's place in the world, he is going to do it with credit to himself and his town.

Morenci Observer: Nearly a score of Adrian college students, immediately after the late commencement, left for northern counties of the State, where they will canvass during the summer to get funds to carry them through another year. They had been carefully drilling for several weeks previous, learning their little pieces from printed matter, which they were able to glibly recite. We may add, no warning was sent ahead to the unfortunate people whom they will invade.

Union Light: The attractions of Sand Lake are budding into more cottages. Mrs. Porter Sword has leased ground and commenced a summer home there. A short time ago and the people must go to the sea side or Petoskey for rest and recreation, but these little numberless lakes sparkling in the sunlight, perfect breastpins of beauty many of them, are being appreciated and the advantages of other summer resorts are being enjoyed without the disadvantages of travel and long distance from home.

This is the season of the year to relate wonderful stories of animal instinct, and we do not propose to be behind the times. We are informed that at a recent church picnic in a rural town in Michigan, a fierce swarm of bumble bees surged out of an old log and attacked the crowd, and for a time it looked as if the entire picnic would be broken up, but an aged deacon had the presence of mind to grasp his bat and announce that he would take up a collection, and it is said that the bees sneaked out of sight as quickly as if they had been human beings.

The management of the Base Ball Association have arranged a game with the Cass of Detroit, at Recreation Park, Wednesday, July 23d., and for the accommodation of parties desiring to witness the game, have arranged for an excursion for that day, via. L. S. & M. S. R. R., leaving Tecumseh on regular morning train. Fare for round trip, Tecumseh to Detroit and return, $1.50. Number of tickets limited. All persons desirous of taking in this excursion are requested to purchase their tickets before Monday evening, July 21st. Tickets to be found at W. & S. W. Anderson's and at Swan & Satterthwaite Bros.

A. W. Slayton is in Detroit looking after his lumber business.

O. P. Bills went to Petoskey last Friday to remain a few days.

Woolston Comfort is putting in a set of platform scales, of the Howe make, at his mill.

The firm of Kelly, Hoxsie & Co., of Holloway, is in a flourishing condition and building up a good trade.

Wm. McCowen does not propose to take a back seat in the furniture business, and is better prepared than ever to fill all orders in his line. Give him a call.

Our citizens should take every precaution to guard against burglars, as they are at the present time throughout the state. Give no encouragement to tramps, by feeding them. Inform them that the poor master will provide for them.

Last Tuesday morning, while Willie Finch, a son of Grim Finch was riding a horse his hat blew off. This frightened the horse and he threw the boy off and stepped on him, cutting some bad gashes in one leg. The injury is not considered dangerous but it is a serious one.

J. H. Underwood of Addison, Smith's head miller, came down on the M. & O. Monday, and while here he paid his respects to the HERALD sanctum. Mr. Underwood says that the Addison mill is booming, and the farmers in his section are happy over the prospects of a good wheat crop. Judging from Mr. Underwood's avoirdupois, the latitude of Addison and his vocation must agree with him.

The Democrats held an informal meeting at Justice Burridge's office last Monday evening and made arrangements for a Cleveland & Hendricks ratification meeting which will come off next Saturday evening. L. H. Salsbury, J. L. O'Mealy and Seth Bean will be invited to address the crowd. Band music will be provided and other accessories to make a good meeting. A committee, consisting of A. James, J. Davidson, G. A. Kies, C. H. Gainsley and Mat Root, was appointed to perfect arrangements and take charge of the meeting. Fred Wood was appointed to procure a hall to serve as a club room and it was voted to take steps at an early day to organize a club.

EXCURSION TO PUT-IN-BAY.

An excursion will run over the M. & O. road to Toledo and thence via. Steamer Chief Justice Waite to Put-in Bay on Wednesday July 23d inst. A special train will run, leaving Tecumseh at 6:57 A. M. and arriving at Tecumseh on the return trip about 9:30 P. M. Fare for the round trip from this station only $1.25. This train will run into the Penn. depot, within a few feet of the dock, hence no transfer will be necessary. The excursion will be in charge of the officers of the M. & O. road who will spare no pains to give those who go a pleasurable day.

BASE BALL.

The Tecumseh club won their fourth game this season last Friday, beating the Jonesville club by a score of 8 to 3. The home club was crippled somewhat by the absence of Heidenrich, who was laid up with a damaged hand, and Freeman. Faatz filled Heidenrich's place as catcher and did excellent work, only allowing one ball to slip through his fingers.—Will Eccles played right field, and McKinney was put on first in Freeman's position. During the first four innings it looked as though our boys were going to get beautifully scooped, the Jonesville having run in three scores; though they were all made by errors on the part of the home team, who did some miserable throwing. McKinney also muffed two balls on first and allowed a man to score.—Kelly was the only man that saved the club from defeat. He was not hit once for a good clean base hit, and if he had had any kind of support the Jonesvilles could have been shut out entirely. Not a man in the visiting team even hit the ball after the fifth innings. In the fifth and sixth innings the home team bunched their hits to good advantage and run in 4 scores, also 1 on the eighth and three on the ninth innings. The Jonesville pitcher was batted all over the diamond, especially so by Miller, Kelly and Geo. Bostwick.

A BUSINESS CHANGE.

The Tecumseh Lumber Co. has changed base somewhat. J. R. McGlone of Toledo retires from the firm, and it will be conducted hereafter by N. B. Bradley and Son, of Bay City, & H. C. Wason & Co. of Toledo, with J. H. Smith of Tecumseh, as local business manager. The Company have rented S. W. Temple's brick planing mill and yard on a five years lease and have already taken possession of the same. Mr. Temple retires from the lumber business, but will continue his coal business as heretofore, his lease to the Lumber Co. reserving the office and buildings used for the coal trade. The new arrangement will be to the interest of all parties. The Lumber Co. obtains first class planing mill fully equipped with the best machinery, at once. Joe Smith, who has been in their employ for several months, will be a tip top manager for them. Mr. Temple's increasing coal trade requires his undivided time and attention, and he will now be at liberty to give it. The only fault we find with the arrangement is the retirement of Mr. Ed. Koch who goes to Toledo and enters the firm of J. R. McGlone & Co. Mr. Koch has become a favorite in our business community since he came here and we shall regret to lose him. We are glad to know however that he steps into a better place in Toledo and we have full faith that he will fill his new position acceptably to all parties concerned.

CARD OF THANKS.

Modern Science and Skepticism

What has Skepticism done for the world?

Nothing but to suggest doubts. It has even suggested that Rheumatism cannot be cured. Skepticism is as bad as Rheumatism.

What has Science done for the world?

A good many things; for instance, it has shown that rheumatism can be cured.

It has shown that Neuralgia can be got rid of.

Modern science has proved that Rheumatism is a blood disease, and has provided ATHLOPHOROS as the remedy which can completely cure it.

It has proved that although the old doctors failed to overcome Rheumatism, nature has enough in her laboratory to free the system from this disease.

It has proved that though these torturing diseases were so severe and obstinate, they can be overcome in a quick, safe and easy manner by means of Athlophoros!

Don't be skeptical. If you have any doubts as to what ATHLOPHOROS can do, write to some of those whom it has cured. For instance, Rev. S. R. Dennen, D.D., Pastor Third Congregational Church, of New Haven, Conn., the Rev. W. P. Corbit, pastor George St. M. E. Church of New Haven, the Rev. J. E. Searles, pastor Willett st. M. E. Church, New York city, Mr. Brummell, the well known candy manufacturer, of New York, Ex-Gov. Bigelow, of Connecticut, and many others, equally well known.

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

WABASH ROUTE!

THE BUSINESS MAN

When he travels wants to go quick, wants to be comfortable, wants to arrive at destination on time, in fact, wants a strictly business trip, and consequently takes the popular Wabash Route, feeling that he is sure to meet his engagements and continue to prosper and be happy.

THE TOURIST

Has long since chosen the Wabash as the favorite route to all the summer resorts of the East, North and West, and winter resorts of the South, as the Company has for years provided better accommodations and more attractions than any of its competitors for this class of travel. Tourist Tickets can be had at reduced rates at all principal offices of the Company.

THE FARMER

In search of a new home, where he can secure better returns for his labor, should remember that the Wabash is the most direct route to Arkansas, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, and all points South, West and Northwest, and that round-trip land-explorers' tickets at very low rates are always on sale at the ticket offices. Descriptive advertising matter of Arkansas and Texas sent free to all applicants by addressing the General Passenger Agent.

THE INVALID

Will find the Wabash the most convenient route to all the noted health resorts of Illinois, Missouri, Arkansas and Texas, and that the extensive through car system and superior accommodations of this popular line will add greatly to his comfort while en route. Pamphlet descriptive of the many celebrated mineral springs of the West and South sent free on application.

THE CAPITALIST

Can get the information necessary to secure safe and profitable investments in agriculture, stock-raising, mining, lumbering, or any of the many inviting fields throughout the South and West, by addressing the undersigned.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—Paper bottles are now made on a large scale in Germany and Austria.

—A clay which can be utilized in the manufacture of putty has been discovered in Attala, Miss.

—A Santa Barbara (Cal.) botanist has discovered a species of gooseberry wholly unknown to science, also a new species of olive tree.

—A German paper says that a roof can be made fire-proof by covering it with a mixture of lime, salt and wood ashes, adding a little lampblack to give a dark color. This not only guards against fire, it is claimed, but also is a measure against decay.

—A New Haven man is inventing a new kind of a parachute, which is fastened around the centre of the balloon itself and it is expected to bring the whole affair, including the navigator, down safely if any accident happens to the balloon.—Bangor Post.

—There is hardly any safety railway appliance but may be improved, and inventors who are seeking for profitable fields of labor will do well to investigate the cause of railway accidents and devise means of greater safety to life, limb and property.—Scientific American.

—Mr. Case, a watchmaker of Franklin, Pa., has completed a locomotive and tender six inches long all told, that has every part complete that is found in a working engine. It is made of gold, silver and steel, and is destined for the New Orleans exhibition.—Pittsburgh Post.

—Experiments by Dr. Pehl, of St. Petersburg, go to support the theory that the waters of rivers are purified by the motion (mass or molecular) imparted to the fluid. Bringing waters into rapid motion by means of a centrifugal machine the number of developing germs of bacteria was reduced by ninety per cent.

—The brilliancy in the eyes of cats is caused by a carpet of glittering fibers called the tapetum, which lies behind the retina, and is a powerful reflector. In perfect darkness no light is observed in their eyes, a fact which has been established by careful experiments. Nevertheless, a very small amount of light is sufficient to produce the luminous appearance.—Detroit Post.

—The Photographic Journal reports an ingenious way to prevent forgery of bank notes. This is no other than the employment of an invisible actinic ink, of which no trace can be seen on the paper or upon the image upon the focusing screen. As soon however, as you come to develop your plate, the word forger appears in bold letters right across the negative.

—The height and velocity of clouds may be determined by means of photography. Two cameras are placed 30 feet apart and provided with instantaneous shutters which are released by electricity at the same moment. The angle of inclination of the cameras and the position of the cloud as photographed are thus obtained, and simple trigonometrical operations give the height and distance from those data.—Exchange.

PITH AND POINT.

—Let the light of reason shine through your soul's windows, but keep warm by the fire of affection.

—Fight hard against a hasty temper. Anger will come, but resist it stoutly. A spark may set a house on fire.

—"When er man says dat de laws o' de land jes' bearin' down on him, yer ken mighty nigh allus come to de conclusion dat he is er travin' to git down on de laws."—Arkansaw Traveler.

—"He is very close," was observed by B., "he will's nabobs about a cent." "Well," remarked W., "I have always thought that the less one nabobs about the better."—N. Y. Ledger.

—An article in an exchange headed "Costly Misses of the Ball." About the most costly misses of the males that we know of are indigent young men marrying heiresses.—Boston Post.

—A Nevada lady took an unfair advantage of her husband's indulgence in a bath, to elope with another man, and the betrayed one expressed a conviction that he had been waiting for an opportunity for years.—Detroit Free Press.

—Soft soap for all sorts of people: For a lieutenant, call him a captain. For a middle-aged lady, say you mistook her for her daughter. For a young gentleman trying silver, ask his opinion regarding the comparative merits of Meriden and Rappin as razor sellers. For young ladies, if you know their color to be natural, accuse them of painting.—Chicago Tribune.

—Some people are poetic by nature, but there are others to whom poetical sentiments, language is utter unintelligible. Miss Molly McDude belongs to the latter class. George Smithers has been paying her attention, and a few evenings ago, in a wild rush to the outpurst, he exclaimed: "How fast time vanishes in your company, dearest Mollie! The hours become brief minutes." "How can you tell anything about it? You haven't been looked at your watch," responded the prosaic Molly.—Texas Siftings.

—Some stoic writes:

Martha is married to a woman is of many days full of trouble.
In the morning he draws his salary, and in the evening
School, days gone;
It is a tale that is told;
It is vanished, and no man knows whither it goeth.
He is speechless in the chilly garments of his night.
And seeketh the somnolent nurse one.
Wherewith to stop his infant posterity.
He smoketh a cigar or cry.
And draweth the curtain of his offspring.
He seeketh the shekels in the purchase of fine linen
To cover the bosom of his family.
For him stand the gates of the city
Not one suspender.
Yea, he is altogether wretched.

—Actors have a despiriting outlook for next season. Managers anticipate bad business in consequence of the distractions of the Presidential canvass. Not since the introduction of the combination system have fewer performers been engaged nor smaller salaries offered. Those who last season received seventy-five dollars to one hundred dollars a week can only get forty dollars to fifty dollars.—Chicago Herald.

Some Indian Customs.

The Poncas number 580, and there are but six half-breeds in the tribe. They have retained their purity of blood in a remarkable degree, and are, as a consequence, purer in morals than either the Kaws or Osages. They at one time had a number of half and quarter bloods in the tribe, but these have nearly all died out, and none have been born to fill their places. The Poncas are gaining numerically year by year since coming to this reservation six years ago. They were moved from Bazile Springs, Dak., at that time, but came originally from Dakota. In the matter of civilization they get on slowly. Few of the men and none of the women can speak English. They have a large brick school-house, two and one-half stories high, with assistant, capable of accommodating one hundred scholars, and have an actual enrollment of over seventy. There are no laws compelling school attendance. The children are doing fairly, learning to speak English rapidly, and some of the classes are in the Third Reader. Mathematics come easy to them.

Nearly half the men wear civilized clothing, and all Poncas women wear petticoats instead of leggings. The blanket is never wholly discarded, however, and seems to be nearly indispensable for a wrap and for bedding. Nearly all prefer boots and shoes to moccasins in bad weather. In the matter of farming eighty to ninety families will raise considerable corn this season, averaging, perhaps, six to eight acres to each family. The agent thinks there may be eight hundred acres of corn raised this year by the Poncas. They raise some wheat and potatoes, but are sadly deficient in stock of all kinds. Many families have none of any kind, and very few have teams for farming. The tribe is without religious instruction except a Sunday school. There is no mission here of any kind. The men do what outdoor work is done at all. The Government issues about one-third rations of salt, sugar, beef, soap and flour.

The tribe has 101,894 acres of land and $70,000 trust funds at five per cent. They also have a treaty fund of $8,000 per annum for five years yet, for clothing, etc. They have leased seven thousand acres of land to J. H. Sherburn, the licensed trader here, for five years, for $1,700 per annum. He is to fence it all, and is now engaged in that work. Mr. Sherburn came here five years ago a bankrupt, is now lessee of about two-thirds of the reservation, has a fine stock of goods, and nearly two thousand head of cattle.

In preceding letters mention was made of Kaw and Osage polygamy. But a comparison of these tribes and the Poncas and Otoes is greatly to the credit of the former. The Poncas have a number of polygamists—how many could not be definitely ascertained, nor are the instances always known. The practice is open and acknowledged, sanctioned by usage and sufferance, and it it has not many open advocates it certainly has few or no assailants. All acquiesce in it; none attack it. The Otoes are worse. Out of about fifty families ten polygamous ones were named as well known, with the admission that there were probably several others. Probably one-third of all the married men in the tribe have more than one wife.

The interpreter, a fat, lazy hulk, sat in the agency store taking his ease while his wives drew several barrels of water from the well to haul home. He then got in the wagon and one of his wives drove the team. Their marriages rest upon agreement, are usually made up by friends, and the young couple have less to say concerning it than any others of the tribe. Friends of the groom propose to the friends of the bride. The question of price then comes in. Ponies, calico, etc., are given by his friends to hers. If any uncle, cousin, or other near relative opposes, the match it is delayed or broken off. Usually a few extra presents softens the objections. A feast follows. Separations have not been common in times past, but two cases have occurred in six weeks in which the husband abandoned his wife and children and married another woman. Unless the tribe council breaks up these practices the Government will soon be compelled to take action.

Their funerals partake of the veriest savagery. A prominent Otoe died a week ago. A large crowd of his male friends staid in the woods all night beating a drum and performing incantations. They came to the house of the deceased next forenoon nearly naked, twenty of them having sticks as large as a cedar pencil stuck through the skin and flesh of their arms in many places, and thus naked, bloody and daubed with paint, escorted the remains to the grave with beating of drums and howling of men.

The body was placed in the grave in a sitting position, the mouth of the grave covered over with logs, dirt piled on these, and a horse killed on top of this. The horse must be the best which can be procured, and it is choked to death on the grave. If the dead man had one or more relapses prolonging his sickness, the horses must be tortured in a similarly slow manner. After the burial comes horse-racing and feasting. All friends of the family are expected to make presents of calico and other articles.

An Otoe scandal of the first water has just occurred. A school-girl was recently married to a man much older than herself against her wishes. She soon after ran away with her former youthful lover. The deserted husband was irate and about to follow on the war-path. A council was called, and many of the friends of the runaway couple sat up with him all night attempting to allay his anger. One of them gave him his finest moccasins and leggings, another a brooch, and others still other presents, till he said "his heart felt better; his heart was not so bad as it had been," and he finally said his "heart was all right now," and they might come back. "She was dead." This Otoe custom might be a sensible one in some white communities.—Ponca Cor. St. Louis Democrat.

—The Masons of Philadelphia have the finest temple in the word, and it is said to be the only Masonic building in the country that is given up entirely to Masonic uses.—Philadelphia Press.

Spartan Warfare.

Is the kind you must carry on when the enemy is Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The blood must be cleansed of its poisonous acids. The muscles must be relaxed. The joints must be set free. For all these there is but one specific, and that is ATHLOPHOROS. A. S. Baker 365 W. Harrison St., Chicago, writes: "Have been a victim of Rheumatism for years. My head was drawn over my left shoulder. Half a bottle of ATHLOPHOROS made me a well man." For fifteen years my wife suffered with her back. The other half of the bottle gave her entire relief."

Adulterate Food—The state of New York has a prohibitory law in regard to adulteration of food products. The standard for instance for Baking Powder should be Cream Tartar and Soda only, no filling whatever. The firm of DeLand & Co. made their Chemical Baking Powder on above basis before the law was passed, and their high standard of excellence attained on their Saleratus and Soda is sufficient guarantee that their Chemical Baking Powder will be made as above and of the very best of materials. DR. ALLEN'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most tedious cases are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Backaches, Lumbago, Rheuma, Callouses, Affection of the Spine, Lumbago, Nervous Debility, and all diseases attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience when it is inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

About Corkscrews.

The corkscrew is a contrivance to facilitate the removal of corks from bottles. When a cork protrudes from the neck of the bottle far enough to admit of grasping it with the hand or clinching it with the teeth, a corkscrew is unnecessary. But when a cork is flush with the bottle's mouth, or, through unskillful manipulation, has become lodged down in the neck, a corkscrew is not only a convenience, but almost a necessity. The bottle may be emptied of its liquid contents by crowding the cork down through the neck with a pencil holder or any other suitable article that may be at hand, but this method of opening a bottle is generally regarded as inelegant.

There are several kinds of corkscrews. That which has been the longest in use is the simplest. For several hundred years it was the best, until a genius added an improvement which brought it to perfection. The primeval corkscrew consisted of a wire, pointed at one end, twisted into a spiral with about five turns tempered so as to give rigidity to it, and provided with a wooden handle like that of a gimlet. The spiral part of the wire was about two inches long after being twisted, the part left straight was of about the same length, and the wooden cross piece was round, and about three inches in length and half an inch in diameter. The handle was made fast to the metal by putting the wire through a hole in the wood and clinching it. The metal was not burnished, nor was the wood polished or painted. It is safe to say that there never was a corkscrew job which could not have been accomplished with one of these primeval corkscrews.

The name of the inventor of the corkscrew has not been handed down to these generations. He lived before the days of letters patent. It is held by a certain school of theorists that he was no other than Archimedes. The similarity of the corkscrew to the spiral of Archimedes is $r = a$ theta. The corkscrew can not have a constant equation, for the pitch varies not only in different screws, but in the different spirals of the same screw. A corkscrew fashioned after the equation of the spiral of Archimedes, with important modifications, would be serviceable; but there seems to be no sufficient reason for believing that Archimedes invented the corkscrew.

An important improvement in corkscrews is mentioned in the foregoing. In order to comprehend its value, the practical use of the ordinary corkscrew must be understood. The bottle is grasped by the neck with the left hand, the top of the cork is picked with the point of the spiral, and about six or seven half twists are given to the corkscrew. The body of the bottle is then gripped between the knees, and a lifting force is applied to the corkscrew and through it to the cork. The removal of the cork is accompanied by a sound which may be fairly imitated by putting the left forefinger in the mouth with its end against the inner surface of the right cheek, inflating the cheek, and then removing the finger by a quick push against the yielding right hand corner of the mouth. His perfected corkscrew has the blunt end of the wire brought back through the wooden handle and twisted around the stem of the corkscrew till it comes down to the top of the spiral, where it is wound into a concentric coil. When the spiral has sunk into the cork the blunt end of this coil strikes against the cork near its periphery, and with the purchase thus obtained the cork is turned around in the neck of the bottle and withdrawn far more gently than with the unimproved corkscrew. A good article of the perfected pattern may be bought for about fifteen cents in almost any general store in the country. In a cutlery establishment in the city the price would not be over seventy-five cents.

There are other complications which are intended to increase the usefulness of the corkscrew or make it more conveniently portable. A metallic contrivance shaped like the bow of a jews-harp, is substituted for the wooden handle, and the stem of the spiral is fastened between the ends of the bow with a pin in such manner that the implement may be shut up like a pocket knife. This pattern of portable corkscrew is adapted for excursion or picnics, where there may be bottles of milk to be opened. There is also a very elaborate kind of corkscrew sold in some of the drug stores and cutlery establishments. It is nickel plated and looks as formidable as a toy steam engine. It is so constructed that after it has been adjusted the engine or has only to keep on twisting and the cork will be hoisted high and dry. There are a few rules regarding the use of the corkscrew which are generally observed by the elite. The place to the corkscrew is not by the side of the hostess's plate. Champagne bottles are not opened with a corkscrew, nor condensed milk cans, nor cocoanuts. Any person who has tried to take small cucumber pickles from a bottle with a corkscrew will ever afterward endeavor to have a pickle fork at hand, if he does not go to the extreme of having the pickles removed from the original package before they are brought to the table. It may be set forth as a general rule that any attempt to utilize the corkscrew for any purpose other than the removal of corks will result in embarrassment, and had best not be tried except in privacy. *N. —A. T. Shephard, of Dallas, Tex., visiting at Hartford, Conn., lost a roll of greenbacks amounting to $3,800. He mentioned his loss at the Allyn House and a stranger who was present said he had found a sum of money which he would restore to the owner on proper identification. Mr. Shephard described his missing package in detail and the stranger handed over to him the entire sum. Mr. Shephard offered him a $100 bill, but he declined to take it. He finally consented to accept $10. "I am broke," he said, "or I wouldn't take anything."—Hartford Post.

A Place to Give a Poet Inspiration.

Joaquin Miller, a poet of the Sierras, has just got into his log cabin. I called upon him in it, and found a tall, well-made, blue-eyed man of forty-five, with long, tawny hair flowing out from under his slouch hat, with pantaloons tucked into a pair of fine boots, and a good-natured air of Western wildness, which well accorded with his picturesque surroundings. He received me cordially and kindly showed me over the cabin, saying that for fifteen years he had been wandering about over the face of the earth, and that he was glad to feel that he had at last a place he could call his home.

This cabin is on the heights at the head of Sixteenth street, the great street of the Washington of the future. As Waukeen says: "The President's house is at one end of it and his hut is at the other, but that while he has a cabin the President has only a cabinet." Sixteenth is a great wide street paved with asphalt, and lined alternately with $50,000 mansions and $50 negro huts. The White House, almost bathed by the Potomac and faced by Lafayette Park, is its starting point, and half way up towards Mr. Miller's cabin is a green plat in which a bronze equestrian statue of General Scott looks at the Executive Mansion. The street steadily rises, carrying with it old St. John's Episcopal Church, George H. Pendleton's mansion, negro laborers' cabins, Senator Cameron's great palace, and a like mixture till it reaches the boundary of the town, where there is a jump upward in the shape of a fifty-foot hill or plateau, running back into the country. On this plateau Joaquin Miller has bought a lot and put up one of the prettiest of log cabins.

The lot runs almost to the edge of the hill, and the view is certainly one of the finest in the United States. Mr. Miller says he has never seen anything equal to it, and that if man can write poetry anywhere he ought to be able to write it here. Stand in front of the large yard of the cabin, under one of the great oaks which shade it, all Washington lies before you surrounded by hills which make it look as though the nature around was a mammoth coliseum of the gods and the national capital the scene going on in the arena below. The great white classic Capitol is plainly seen, the Potomac flows on along the edge of the arena, and off on neighboring hills you can look into Alexandria and at the tombstones of Arlington. Washington Special.

Origin of the Name Oregon.

The late Archbishop Blanchet contributed the following interesting paper to the Oregonian in 1883. It will be observed that the Archbishop speaks of himself in the third person: "Jonathan Carver, an English Captain in the wars by which Canada came into the possession of Great Britain, after the peace, left Boston June 6, 1766, crossed the Continent to the Pacific, and returned October, 1768. In relating his travels, which were published in 1774 and republished in 1778, he is the first who makes use of the word Oregon. The origin of that word has never been discovered in the country. The first Catholic missionaries, Father Demers, now Bishop of Vancouver Island, and Father Blanchet, now Bishop of Oregon City, arrived in Oregon in 1838. They traveled through it for many years, from South to North, from West to East, visiting and teaching the numerous tribes of Oregon, Washington Territory, and the British possessions. But in all their various excursions among the Indians they never succeeded in finding the origin of the word Oregon. Now it appears that what could not be found in Oregon has been discovered by Archbishop Blanchet in Bolivia when he visited that country, Chili and Peru, in 1855 and 1857. The word Oregon, it his opinion, most undoubtedly had its root in the Spanish word 'oreja' (ear), and came from the qualifying word 'orejon' (big ear). For it is probable that the Spaniards, who first discovered and visited the country, where they saw the Indians with big ears, enlarged by the load of ornaments, were naturally inclined to call them 'orejon' (big ears). The nickname first given to the Indians became also the name of the country. This explains how Captain Carver got it and first made use of it. But the travelers, perhaps Carver himself, not knowing the Spanish language nor the peculiar pronunciation of the j in Spanish, for facility sake would have written it and pronounced it Oregon, instead of 'Orejon' in changing j to g. Such, in all probability, must be the origin of the word Oregon. It comes from the Spanish word 'Orejon.' This discovery is due, in justice, to the learned Dr. George Haygarth, A. M., M. D., of London, a man well versed in the Spanish, whom the Archbishop met in La Paz, Bolivia."—Portland Oregonian.

A Negro's Prayer.

One day he scored some of the colored ministers on a too feeble recognition of meum non tuum, and then called on a brother to pray who responded as follows: "O, Lord, dou am honest, great an' holy; nothing dat am unclean an' dishonest can tuch de. O, Lord, come an' teach all classes an' colors de less on ob honesty; make un honest wid dare tongues, dare feet, dare hans an' dare heads. FOUR POINTS
Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD.
Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS.
WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC.
WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing; use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes in to soak, rubbing plenty of soap in the most soiled parts. Be sure that the soaking water is hot; soak the clothes half an hour; stir them occasionally so that they may get the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them lightly out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil 10 to 20 minutes, rinse well, blue, and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boiling by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Faucets and joints should not be lifted, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the washboard, and being the best disinfectent known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury; the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press without wringing hand; boil 5 to 8 minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press gently between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron between folds of a towel. Lace curtains soak 20 to 30 minutes and boil 5 to 8 minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, or pin every scallop on carpet over a sheet to dry; no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

Sold by leading wholesale and retail grocers everywhere. Dealers may find it for their customers upon application. ELECTRIC SOAP MANUFACTURING CO., Indianapolis, Ind., and 43 and 45 South Water St., Chicago, Ill.

CLEVELAND AND HENDRICKS.

New York and Indiana Again Furnish the Democracy with Standard-Bearers.

Full Proceedings of the Democratic National Convention in Its Session at Chicago.

The Unit Rule Sustained.—Colonel W. F. Vilas, of Wisconsin, Selected for Permanent Chairman.

A Majority and Minority Report Presented on the Platform—Adoption of the Former.

Governor Cleveland, of New York, Nominated for President, With Thomas A. Hendricks for Vice President.

THE NOMINEES.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

FIRST DAY'S SESSION.

CHICAGO, July 9.—At 12:40 p. m. in the convention was called to order by ex-senator Barnum, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee.

Prayer was offered by Rev. D. C. Marquis, of the Northwestern Theological Seminary. He prayed for a "blessing on this great assembly of representative citizens, that they should be endowed plentifully with that wisdom which is first pure, then peaceable and gentle, and easy to be entreated; that nothing should be done through strife or vain jealousy, but that they should be filled with that charity which is not puffed up and does not behave itself unseemly." He prayed that their deliberations would be guided to such conclusions as would best promote the glory of God and the welfare of the Nation.

At the conclusion of the prayer the Chairman said: "Gentlemen of the Convention—Harmony seems to be the sentiment of this convention. Even the air seems saturated with a desire and a determination to nominate a ticket for President and Vice-President which will be satisfactory to the North and to the South, to the East and to the West; one, in short, such as will harmonize the Democracy throughout the Union and insure victory in November. Harmony, prepared in the deliberations of the National Committee. No effort was made to nominate a temporary Chairman in the interest of any candidate, but, on the contrary, one who shall preside over the deliberations of this convention with absolute impartiality. In that spirit and to that end, I have been directed by the unanimous vote of the National Committee to name the Hon. Richard B. Hubbard, of Texas, for temporary chairman of this convention. As many as favor the election of Hon. R. B. Hubbard for temporary Chairman will say 'aye,' contrary 'no.'

"Hon. R. B. Hubbard, of Texas, is unanimously elected temporary Chairman of this Convention."

Mr. Hubbard, in taking the chair, gave thanks for the honor conferred on him, and which he accepted, not as a tribute to himself but as a compliment to the great State from which he came, a State which was as fair by its loyalty as important in every other. The Democratic party, in all its elements, was the same as it was when founded by the framers of the Constitution, nearly three-quarters of a century ago. Men died as the leaves in autumn, but the principles underlying liberty and self-government were eternal, and the principles that underlie the Democratic party could not perish from the earth, although their authors might cease to be. (Applause.) The Democratic party was to-day as much a party organized for an aggressive war as when victory perched upon its banners. The Democratic party had won the House of Representatives, and would have the Senate but for treason in the Senate chamber itself. (Cheers.) It would have had the Presidency, too, but for the hands of robbers who struck down the expressed will of the people by means of perjury, bribery and corruption. In conclusion, Mr. Hubbard urged that whatever candidates were nominated should be supported loyally, declaring that he who would not support them would not be a good Democrat and hardly a patriot. (Applause.)

The rest of the temporary organization having then been announced, Mr. Smalley, of Vermont, a member of the National Committee, offered a resolution that the rules of the last Democratic Convention shall govern this body, except that in voting for candidates, no State should be allowed to change its vote until the roll of States had been called, and until every State had cast its vote.

Several amendments were offered and an exciting debate ensued on the proposition to abolish the unit rule, the Tammany wing strongly advocating the change, which was finally defeated—651 to 342.

The vote was then taken on the original motion offered by Mr. Smalley, of Vermont, and it was adopted.

The committees on Credentials, Permanent Organization and Platform were then appointed, and the convention adjourned until eleven o'clock this morning.

SECOND DAY'S SESSION.

CHICAGO, July 10.—At 11:30 o'clock Wednesday Governor Hubbard rapped the convention to order, and the opening prayer was made by Rt. Rev. Bishop McLaren, of the diocese of Chicago, the delegates and the convention generally rising at the request of the Chair.

At the conclusion of the prayer a communication was sent to the chair by J. G. Jenkins, of Wisconsin, to the effect that no report from the Committee on Resolutions could be submitted before to-morrow morning.

Various resolutions and memorials on subjects of female suffrage, land-league affairs, convict labor, sumptuary laws, etc., were then introduced and referred.

The report of the Committee on Credentials was adopted with practically no opposition.

A resolution against polygamy was introduced by Mr. Smith, of Utah, and referred.

Further resolutions were offered and referred to the Committee on Platform.

The report of the Committee on Permanent Organization proposing W. F. Vilas for Permanent Chairman was received with cheers.

The report was adopted, and a committee appointed to escort Colonel Vilas to the chair. Colonel Vilas then addressed the convention, returning thanks for the honor conferred upon him.

Mr. Snowden, of Pennsylvania, offered a resolution for the call of the roll of States, and the placing in nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President.

A motion was made to lay on the table Mr. Snowden's motion to go into nominations now. That question was taken by a vote by States, and resulted 456 in the negative. When the State of New York was reached, its vote of 70 votes was announced in the negative. Mr. Grady challenged the vote, and amid great noise, uproar and hisses, tried to present the original tally. The Chairman, however, refused to hear the roll call interrupted. A Connecticut delegate called attention to the hisses, and asked that the ushers be instructed to enforce order. The Chairman said that the guests of the convention could not be permitted to interrupt its harmonious and orderly proceedings, and directed the Sergeant at Arms to remove any person who should violate the order.

The roll call was then proceeded with to the close. After the roll call, and before the announcement of the result, the Chairman recognized Mr. Grady, of New York, who claimed that the report was at variance with the official tally. The Chairman called on Mr. Manning, Chairman of the New York delegation, to state again what the vote was. Mr. Manning gave it as seventy two nays. The Chairman ruled that he must accept the vote of the New York delegation as a unit, because the State Convention had instructed the delegates to vote as a unit on all questions.

The vote was finally announced as ayes, 222 (nobs, 421). So the convention refused to lay on the table the motion to proceed to the call of States for nominations.

Mr. Caine, of California, moved as an amendment to the motion to add the following: "But no vote shall be taken on the nominations until after the platform is adopted."

Mr. Snowden accepted the amendment, and then the motion as amended was agreed to.

The call of States for nominations for President and Vice-President was then at two p. m. commenced.

Thomas Francis Bayard was nominated by George Gray, of Delaware, seconded by C. E. Hooker, of Mississippi.

Joseph E. McDonald was nominated by T. A. Hendricks, of Indiana, seconded by Joan C. Black, of Illinois.

Allen G. Thurman was nominated by J. W. Breckinridge, of California, seconded by Durbin Ward, of Ohio.

J. G. Carlisle was nominated by J. A. McKenzie, of Kentucky.

Grover Cleveland was nominated by Daniel M. Lockwood, of New York, seconded by C. H. Harrison, of Illinois, and E. A. Jones, of Minnesota. Senator Grady, of New York, spoke against the nomination of Cleveland.

W. B. Cochran, of New York, on behalf of the anti-Cleveland element of that State, spoke in opposition to Cleveland, seconded the nomination of Thurman, creating profound sensation.

Mr. Apgar, of New York, replied to Mr. Cochran, and asserted that the same opposition was made in the St. Louis Convention eight years ago to the nomination of Mr. Tilden, then Governor of New York.

John M. Palmer, of Illinois, moved to suspend the order of business for the purpose of giving a recess. Twice the roll of States was ordered to go on, but the call was not finished, and at 6:40 p. m. the convention took a recess until 10:30 a. m. to-day.

THIRD DAY'S SESSION.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Chairman Vilas called the Convention to order at 11:30.

The proceedings were opened with prayer by Rev. George C. Lorimer, of the Immanuel Baptist Church, Chicago.

A communication was received and read from the Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions stating that the committee, notwithstanding assiduous and patient efforts, had not yet been able to complete a platform, and would not be prepared to make a complete report before seven p. m.

The unfinished business of yesterday, being the call of States for nominations, was resumed.

Mr. Mansur, of Missouri, seconded the nomination of Mr. Thurman for the Presidency.

Thomas E. Powell, of Ohio, put in nomination Governor Hoadly, of Ohio.

Senator Wallace, of Pennsylvania, nominated Congressman Samuel J. Randall, which nomination was seconded by Governor Abbett, of New Jersey.

Messrs. Cummings, of Massachusetts, and Youman, of South Carolina, then seconded the nomination of Mr. Bayard.

General Bragg, of Wisconsin, in a speech denunciatory of the action of the Tammany delegates, heartily seconded the nomination of Mr. Cleveland.

The clerk then announced the names of the nominees for President as follows:

Thomas Francis Bayard, of Delaware.
Joseph E. McDonald, of Indiana.
J. G. Carlisle, of Kentucky.
Grover Cleveland, of New York.
Allan G. Thurman, of Ohio.
Samuel J. Randall, of Pennsylvania.
George Hoadly, of Ohio.

The announcements were all received with enthusiastic cheering, but the demonstration was greater when Grover Cleveland was named than in the case of any other candidate. The occupants of the galleries arose en masse and cheered and waved hats and handkerchiefs for several minutes. Many of the delegates also stood up and cheered with the spectators.

When the uproar had subsided the Chair recognized Mr. Hooper, of Tennessee, to move an adjournment. The convention, on motion of Mr. Snowden, of Pennsylvania, instructed the Committee on Resolutions to report at eight o'clock, and adjourned to that hour.

EVENING SESSION.

CHICAGO, July 11.—The session this evening was called to order at 8:35, and R. H. Henry, of Mississippi, immediately presented the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this convention has read with profound regret and intense admiration the statesmanlike and patriotic letter of Samuel J. Tilden, expressing the overpowering and irresistible necessity which constrains him to decline a nomination for the highest office in the gift of the American people, so we, feel, that these truth, force and virtues derived Samuel J. Tilden and Thomas A. Hendricks of the offices conferred upon them by the Democratic party of the Union, we, therefore, declare to our first in the hearts of the Democracy of the country, secondly, that this convention express the Nation's regret that the services of a patriotism so special, so pure, so and abnegation are to be used and rewarded in city and state governments of the great Empire State and not now turned to the American Union of National trust and corruption so long and successfully maintained and maintained by the Republican party at the National capital, to which end a copy of these resolutions be suitably engrossed, and that the Chairman of this convention appoint a committee to wait on the Hon. Samuel J. Tilden and Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks.

The resolution was greeted with loud and long continued applause.

The roll call of the States was called for the presentation of the names of members of the new National Committee and a committee to notify the candidates of their nomination.

On recommendation of the Committee on Resolutions the convention decided that hereafter the National Committee in selecting its chairman need not confine its choice to one of its own members.

THE PLATFORM.

William R. Morrison, of Illinois, said he was directed by the Committee on Resolutions to report the following declaration of principles, and move its adoption. He briefly denounced the Republican party and its platform, the promises of which are declared to be a list of the party's past failures. It then proceeds as follows:

The Democracy pledges itself to purify the Administration from corruption, to restore economy, to revive respect for law, and to reduce taxation to the lowest limit consistent with due regard to the preservation of the faith of the Nation to its creditors and pensioners.

Knowing full well, however, that legislation affecting the occupations of the people should be cautious and conservative in method, not in advance of public opinion, but responsive to its demands, the Democratic party is pledged to revise the tariff in a spirit of fairness to all interests.

But in making reduction in taxes, it is not prudent to injure any domestic industries, but rather to promote their healthy growth. From the foundation of this Government, taxes collected at the custom-house have been the chief source of federal revenue. Such they must continue to be. Moreover, many industries have come to rely upon legislation for successful continuance, so that any change of law must be a very step regardful of the labor and capital thus involved. The process of reform must be subject in the execution to this plain dictate of justice.

All taxation shall be limited to the requirements of economical Government. The necessary reduction in taxation can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample to cover any increased cost of production which may exist in consequence of the higher rate of wages prevailing in this country.

Sufficient revenue to pay all the expenses of the Federal Government, economically administered, including pensions, interest and principle of the public debt, can be got, under our present system of taxation, from customs-house taxes on fewer imported articles, bearing heaviest on articles of luxury and bearing lightest on articles of necessity.

We therefore denounce the abuses of the existing tariff, and, subject to the preceding limitations, we demand that Federal taxation shall be exclusively for public purposes, and shall not exceed the needs of the Government economically administered.

The system of direct taxation, known as the internal revenue, is a war tax, and so long as it continues the money derived therefrom should be sacredly devoted to the relief of the people from the remaining burdens of the war, and be made a fund to defray the expense of the care and comfort of worthy soldiers disabled in line of duty in the wars of the Republic, and for the payment of such pensions as Congress may from time to time grant to such soldiers, a like fund for the sailors having already been provided; and any surplus should be paid into the treasury.

We favor an American continental policy based upon more intimate commercial and political relations with the fifteen sister Republics of North, Central and South America, but entangling alliances with none.

We believe in honest money, the gold and silver coinage of the constitution, and a circulating medium convertible into such money without loss.

Asserting the equality of all men before the law, we hold that it is the duty of the Government, in its dealings with the people, to mete out equal and exact justice to all citizens of whatever nativity, race, color or persuasion—religious or political.

We believe in a free ballot and a fair count; and we recall to the memory of the people the noble struggle of the Democrats in the XI.Vth and XLVth Congresses, by which a reluctant Republican opposition was compelled to assent to legislation making everywhere illegal the presence of troops at the polls, as the conclusive proof that a Democratic Administration will preserve liberty with order.

The selection of Federal officers for the Territories should be restricted to citizens previously resident therein.

We oppose sumptuary laws, which vex the citizen and interfere with individual liberty; we favor honest civil-service reform, and the compensation of all United States officers by fixed salaries; the separation of church and State; and the diffusion of free education by common schools so that every child in the land may be taught the rights and duties of citizenship.

While we favor all legislation which will tend to the equitable distribution of property, to the prevention of monopoly, and to the strict enforcement of individual rights against corporate abuses, we hold that the welfare of society depends upon a scrupulous regard for the rights of property as defined by law.

We believe that labor is best rewarded where it is free and most enlightened. It should therefore be fostered and cherished. We favor the repeal of all laws restricting the free action of labor, and the enactment of laws by which labor organizations may be incorporated, and of all such legislation as will tend to enlighten the people as to the true relations of capital and labor.

We believe that the public lands ought, as far as possible, to be kept as homesteads for actual settlers; that all unearned lands heretofore improvidently granted to railroad corporations by the action of the Republican party should be restored to the public domain; and that no more grants of lands shall be made to corporations, or be allowed to fall into the ownership of alien aliens.

We are opposed to all propositions which, upon any pretext, would convert the General Government into a machine for collecting taxes to be distributed among the States or the citizens thereof.

In reaffirming the declaration of the platforms of 1856, that "the liberal principles embodied by Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence, and sanctioned in the Constitution which makes ours the land of liberty and the asylum of the oppressed of every nation, have ever been cardinal principles of the Democratic faith, we nevertheless do not sanction the importation of foreign labor, or the admission of servile races, unfitted by habits, training, religion, or interest for assorption into the great body of our people, or for the citizenship which our laws confer. American civilization demands that against the immigration or importation of Mongolians to these shores our gates be closed.

The Democratic party insists that it is the duty of this Government to protect, with equal fidelity and vigilance, the rights of its citizens, native and naturalized, at home and abroad; and to the end that this protection may be assured, United States papers of naturalization, issued by courts of competent jurisdiction, must be respected by the executive and legislative departments of our own Government, and by all foreign powers.

It is an imperative duty of this Government to efficiently protect all the rights of persons and property of every American citizen in foreign lands, and demand and enforce full reparation for any invasion thereof.

An American citizen is only responsible to his own Government for any act done in his own country or under her flag, and can only be tried therefor on his own soil and according to his laws; and no power exists in this Government to expatriate an American citizen to be tried in any foreign land for any such act.

This country has never had a well defined and executed foreign policy save under Democratic administration; that policy has ever been, in regard to foreign Nations, so long as they do not act detrimental to the interests of the country or hurtful to our citizens, to let them alone; that, as the result of this policy, we recall the acquisition of Louisiana, Florida, California and of the adjacent Mexican territory by purchase alone, and contrast these grand accessions of Democratic statesmanship with the parchment of Alaska, fitted to Tsar of a Republican Administration of nearly a quarter of a century.

The Federal Government should care for and improve the Mississippi River and other great waterways of the Republic, so as to secure for the interior States easy and cheap transportation to tidewater.

Under a long period of Democratic rule and policy, our merchant marine was fast overtaking and on the point of outstripping that of Great Britain.

Under twenty years of Republican rule and policy our commerce has been driven to British bottoms, and almost has the American flag been swept off the high seas.

Under Democratic rule and policy our merchants and sailors, backed by the stars and stripes in every port, successfully searched out a market for the varied products of American industry.

Under a quarter-century of Republican rule and policy, despite our manifest advantage over all other nations in high-paid labor, favorable climates, and teeming soils, despite freedom of trade among and these United States, despite our population by the foremost race of men, and an annual immigration of the young, thrifty and adventurous of all Nations; despite our freedom here from the inherited burdens of life and industry in old-world monarchies—their costly war navies, their vast tax-consuming, non-producing standing armies; despite twenty years of peace—that of Republican rule and policy have managed to surrender to Great Britain, along with our commerce, the control of the markets of the world.

Instead of the Republican party's British policy, we demand in behalf of the American Democracy, an American policy.

Instead of the Republican party's discredited scheme and false pretense of friendship for American labor, expressed by imposing taxes, we demand in behalf of the Democracy freedom for American labor by reducing taxes, to the end that those United States may compete with unhindered powers for the primacy among nations in all the arts of peace and fruits of liberty.

With profound regret we have been appressed by the venerable statesman through whose person was struck that blow at the vital principle of republics, acquiescence in the will of the majority, that he call not perpetuate again to place in his hands the leadership of the Democratic hosts, for the reason that the achievement of reform in the administration of the Federal Government is an undertaking now too heavy for his age and failing strength.

Rejoicing that his life has been prolonged until the general judgment of our fellow-countrymen is united in the wish that the wrong were righted in his person, for the Democracy of the United States we offer to him, in his withdrawal from public cares, not only our respectful sympathy and esteem, but also that best homage of freemen, the pledge of our devotion to the principles and the cause now inseparable in the history of this Republic from the labors and the name of Samuel J. Tilden.

With this statement of the hopes, principles and purposes of the Democratic party, the great issue of reform and change in administration is submitted to the people in each confidence that the popular voice will pronounce in favor of new men, and new and more favorable conditions for the growth of industry, the extension of trade, the employment and due reward of labor and capital, and the general welfare of the whole country.

MINORITY REPORT.

General Butler then made a minority report, and supported it in a half-hour speech. A motion to substitute this report for that of the majority was then defeated by an overwhelming vote.

THE FIRST BALLOT.

The convention proceeded to ballot with the following result:

Necessary to a choice, 547.

Upon the announcement of the result of the ballot, there was wild cheering for several moments. Repeated attempts were made then to adjourn. A call of States finally secured an adjournment to ten o'clock to-day. The motion was announced lost by 404 yeas to 412 nays. The correctness of the vote being challenged it was verified, and the result found to be 401 yeas and 412 nays. A motion to adjourn to ten o'clock to-day was finally carried, and at 1:30 a. m., the convention adjourned.

FOURTH DAY'S SESSION.

CLEVELAND THE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE.

CHICAGO, July 12.—The convention was called to order at eleven a. m. yesterday. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Clinton Locke, of Grace Church, Chicago.

A delegate from the State of Pennsylvania moved that the convention now proceed to a second ballot. So ordered.

Then Mr. Snowden, of Pennsylvania, with thanks to those who had voted for Samuel J. Randall, withdrew that gentleman's name.

The second ballot commenced at 11:20, with the following result: Alabama gave Bayard 14 (cheers); McDonald, 1; Cleveland, 5. Arkansas, for Cleveland, 14 (cheers). California, for Thurman, 16. Colorado, for Cleveland, 6. Connecticut gave Cleveland 12. Delaware, for Bayard, 6. Florida gave Cleveland 6; Bayard, 2. Georgia gave Cleveland 14; Bayard, 10. Illinois gave Hendricks 1. (Here there suddenly broke out a scene of wild, general and enthusiastic cheering and waving of hats, fans and handkerchiefs. It was impossible for the Chair to suppress it, although he tried. Most of the delegates and spectators took part in it. It was the first exhibition of genuine enthusiasm in the convention. It was renewed again and again, and finally the band joined in the demonstration with "Hail Columbia," and other patriotic airs. Embroidered banners were also brought into requisition, and banners were carried around, and, in fact, the Blaine demonstration of five weeks ago was repeated. The interruption of proceedings must have occupied fifteen minutes. Hendricks himself was not present, having left Lake hall just previously.)

At the end of a quarter of an hour, and while the uproar was at its height, Mr. Voorhees mounted the platform and announced that, at the request of the Indiana delegation, he withdrew the name of Joseph E. McDonald for the purpose, at a proper time, of asking the vote of Indiana for Thomas A. Hendricks. This renewed the cheering, which was kept up for still several minutes longer. At length the rest of the vote of Illinois was announced as follows: Cleveland, 38. Now was the opportunity for the friends of the New York candidate, and they availed themselves of it. A delegation from that State rushed to their feet and cheering lustily, while they waved fans, hats and handkerchiefs. The spectators took part in the demonstration, but not to the same extent as in the case of Hendricks. After a while the band joined in with the air, "We'll not go home until morning," which seemed to stimulate enthusiasm. This scene lasted three or four minutes.

Illinois continued: For Bayard, 3; McDonald, 1. Illinois had one vote less than the full number.

Indiana gave Hendricks 30. Iowa gave Cleveland 22, Hendricks 4.

At this point the Pennsylvania delegation asked leave to retire for consultation.

A New York delegate objected, but the Chairman decided that the Pennsylvania delegation had the right to retire for consultation; and it did so amid great excitement.

During the confusion it was announced that another vote had been gained in Illinois for Hendricks; the vote of the entire State stands: Cleveland, 38; McDonald, 1; Bayard, 3; Hendricks, 2.

The call of the roll proceeded. Kansas gave Thurman 2, Bayard 4, Cleveland 12. When Kentucky was called, Mr. McKenzie, who had nominated Carlisle, withdrew that nomination and announced the vote of Kentucky as follows: For Thurman 1; Cleveland 3, Bayard 5, Hendricks 15; (cheers); Louisiana gave Thurman 1, Cleveland 15; Maine gave Cleveland 12; Maryland gave Cleveland 10, Bayard 6; Massachusetts gave Hendricks 12½, Cleveland 8, Bayard 7½; Michigan gave Hendricks 13, Cleveland 13; Minnesota gave Cleveland 14; Missouri gave Cleveland 21, Bayard 5, Hendricks 6; Mississippi gave Bayard 14, Cleveland 2, Hendricks, 2; Nebraska gave Bayard 1, Cleveland 9; Nevada gave Hendricks 5, Thurman 1; New Hampshire gave Cleveland 8; New Jersey gave Bayard 2, Cleveland 5, Hendricks 11; New York gave for Cleveland 72.

Mr. Manning announced that on polling the delegates there were 50 for Cleveland and 22 scattering.

Mr. Cochran asked, in the name of the disfranchised minority of the New York delegation, to have that fact stated and extended in the minutes.

North Carolina gave for Bayard 22. [A delegate stated that there were 6 of the North Carolina votes for Bayard and 6 for Cleveland, but they had agreed on this ballot to cast their votes as a unit. Ohio gave Hendricks 1, Tilden 2, Thurman 22, Cleveland 21; Oregon gave Bayard 2, Cleveland 2, Hendricks 2; Pennsylvania was passed for the present; Rhode Island gave Bayard 2, Cleveland 6; South Carolina gave Bayard 9, Cleveland 8, Hendricks 1; Tennessee gave Bayard 10, Thurman 11, Cleveland 2, Hendricks 1; Texas gave Hendricks 1, Thurman 1, Bayard 12, Cleveland 12; Vermont gave Cleveland 8; Virginia gave Cleveland 13, Bayard 8, Hendricks 2, Thurman 1; West Virginia gave Thurman 2, Randall 1, Bayard 3, Cleveland 6; Wisconsin gave Hendricks 2, Cleveland 20; Arizona gave Cleveland 2; Dakota gave Cleveland 2; District of Columbia gave Hendricks 2; Idaho gave Cleveland 2; Montana gave Cleveland 2; Washington Territory gave Cleveland 2; New Mexico gave Thurman 1, Cleveland, 1. Utah gave Cleveland 1; Hendricks, 1. Wyoming gave Cleveland 2.

The roll-call being concluded, Pennsylvania was called for, and the chairman announced, for Cleveland, 42 (another noisy demonstration, which interrupted the further announcement of the Pennsylvania vote; for Hendricks, 11; Randall, 4; Bayard, 2; Thurman, 1.

CHANGES.

Illinois corrected its vote as follows: For Hendricks, 1; Bayard, 3; McDonald, 3; Cleveland, 37. Kansas changed her vote as follows: For Bayard, 3; Cleveland, 13; Thurman, 2. North Carolina changed her 22 votes from Bayard to Cleveland. (Great excitement and cheering.) Virginia changed her vote as follows: For Cleveland, 23; Hendricks, 1. Georgia changed her vote as follows: For Cleveland, 22; Bayard, 2. At this time all the delegates were on their feet, and many of them were clamoring for recognition. Florida changed her vote as follows: For Cleveland, 8. West Virginia changed as follows: For Cleveland, 10. Maryland changed her 16 votes to Cleveland.

The changes were so numerous and were accompanied with so much uproar and excitement, that it was almost impossible to keep track of them. The Missouri delegation announced a change of its 34 votes solid for Cleveland.

This set off the enthusiasm again. The cheering was deafening, an anchor of flowers was carried to the New York delegation, and a stuffed eagle was carried in procession. The band struck up more patriotic airs, and flags and banners were waved and the excitement gained the fever point, because the Cleveland vote had nearly reached the necessary two-thirds.

At this juncture, when the success of Cleveland was certain, some of the minority delegates left the hall. Outside the artillery began to boom, and inside quite a uproar was tremendous. When the change of California was announced as: For Cleveland 8, Thurman 8.

Mr. Menzies, of Indiana, changed the vote of that State to Cleveland, and moved that the vote be made unanimous. Illinois changed her vote to 44 for Cleveland. Kansas changed, also, for Cleveland 17, saying it They changed, since that he would rule out of order the motion to make the vote unanimous, as then after the result was announced. California changed her vote to 18 solid for Cleveland; South Carolina changed for Cleveland 10, Bayard 8; Texas gave her whole 29 votes for Cleveland; Ohio changed her votes as follows: For Cleveland 27, Thurman 19; Tennessee changed her vote to Cleveland; Iowa transferred her 22 votes solid to Cleveland. At this moment an immense oil painting of Governor Cleveland was carried on the platform waiting to be set up when the vote should be announced, and still the work of changing the votes was going on in the most confused manner.

John Kelly, attended by some of his supporters, left the hall, confused and disgusted at his thorough defeat.

The votes of the States in detail were then gone over and announced by the clerk for verification.

The general result was announced as follows (at 1:10 p. m.):

Whole number of votes cast	820
Necessary to a choice	547
Cleveland received	683
Hendricks	45½
Bayard	81½
McDonald	2
Randall	4
Thurman	4

The question was then put on Mr. Menzie's motion to make the nomination unanimous, and it was carried triumphantly.

Then the mammoth oil painting representation of Cleveland's head and bust was carried in front of the Speaker's stand and exhibited to the enthusiastic spectators, who greeted it with cheers and whistling, and the waving of everything that could be put into requisition for that purpose, while the band played "Marching Through Georgia," "The Red, White and Blue," and other airs. After order was restored the Chairman announced that, the motion to make the nomination unanimous having been carried, Grover Cleveland was declared the nominee of the National Democracy for the next Presidency of the United states. [Cheers.]

A dispatch was read from Governor Hoadly congratulating the convention, the Democracy and the county on the wise thing done, and promising a Democratic victory in Ohio in October and November.

The convention then, at 1:25 o'clock, took a recess till 5 p. m.

THE EVENING SESSION.

The evening session began at 5:30. On motion of Mr. Stevenson, of Illinois, Hon. William F. Vilas, Chairman of the convention, was elected Chairman of the committee to notify the candidates of their nomination.

Nominations for Vice-President being now in order, speeches were made placing before the convention the names of General W. S. Rosecrans, of California; Joseph E. McDonald, of Indiana; John C. Black, of Illinois; and Governor Glick, of Kansas.

Alabama and Arkansas were passed on the call, and Hon. Niles Searles, of California, placed Gen. William S. Rosecrans in nomination.

Senator Wallace, of Pennsylvania, then said:

I rise in my place on the floor of this convention not to place in nomination a Pennsylvanian by birth, but, sir, to place in nomination for the second gift of the American people a man springing from old Pennsylvania's stock, from the western portion of that old commonwealth. This gentleman is conversant with public affairs; throughout his entire life he has known of Government and its details. Not only a statesman, but a pure and upright citizen, the representative of grossest wrong that ever was perpetrated upon the American people! I nominate to this convention as its candidate for the Vice-Presidency of the United States Thomas A. Hendricks.

Upon the mention of this name the scenes of the morning were repeated. The audience stood up and cheered. Mr. Waller, of Connecticut, and Mr. Menzies, of Indiana, both jumped on chairs and tried to attract the attention of the Chair. Mr. Waller started several times to speak, but his voice was always drowned in the uproar. Finally, Mr. Waller was heard, seconding Mr. Hendricks' nomination.

The audience again broke out, and in the meantime Mr. Menzies, of Indiana, who had remained standing, was recognized by the Chair.

Mr. Menzies of Indiana—Let the convention be not mistaken, I speak to it in words of soberness and earnestness, Thomas A. Hendricks is not and will not be a candidate for the Vice-presidency. I am authorized by him to say that.

Mr. Bacon, of Georgia—I desire to ask the gentleman from Indiana if he is authorized to say that Mr. Hendricks will not accept the unanimous nomination from the National Democratic Convention for the office of Vice-President of the United States.

Mr. Menzies turned around to speak to some of his colleagues, and the Chair recognized the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. Waller. Mr. Waller commenced, when Mr. Menzies turned around and addressed Mr. Bacon, saying: "I will answer the gentleman by saying, in the language of Mr. Hendricks, himself, that he is not and will not be a candidate for the Vice-Presidency."

Mr. Waller, of Connecticut—Mr. Chairman, Connecticut usually has no desire to force on Indiana a candidate against its will; but, sir, this is not an Indiana Convention. (Cheers and laughter.) This is a convention of the country, and the Democrats looking all over the country have a right to take a fit man from any place they may. Connecticut, sir, would not have made at anybody's request a nomination of a man for any office unless they had expressed a little Yankee curiosity as to whether a man would probably take it. It is my mission in this convention says that Hendricks, at this time is not patriotic enough to take a nomination tendered under these circumstances. I will withdraw his name with honor. (Applause.) He does not want this nomination. Every man knows it. He is earnest to the front; and the ticket with the statesman of New York on it in 1844 representing the East, Thomas A. Hendricks, representing again the West, will be, in the opinion of every Democrat who hears me, victorious in November.

Mr. Wallace, of Pennsylvania—Mr. President, it would not be beneath the dignity of an elected Vice-President of the United States to be a candidate for the place a second time. Thomas A. Hendricks has been once chosen to be Vice-President of the United States. He has been deposed of his office. The Democracy of the Republic demanded him again his name as their candidate, and they will not take no for an answer. (Cheers.) Sir, I move you, that the rules be suspended and that this convention nominate Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, as its candidate for Vice President of the United States by acclamation. (Cheers.)

The nominations of Rosecrans, McDonald, Glick and Black were withdrawn.

Every State and Territory cast its full vote for Hendricks on the roll call with the exception of one in Mississippi for McDonald, four in Illinois, which were not voted, and the thirty votes of Indiana, which asked to be excused, but on the convention insisting upon their voting, her thirty votes were cast for Mr. Hendricks.

When the vote of Indiana was announced for Hendricks it was apparent that his nomination was unanimous, the delegates and the audience seemed to lose their heads in the usual extravagant demonstrations. The whole house was a sea of fluttering colors, formed by waving handkerchiefs of every hue, hats, umbrellas and everything else which could be seized upon by the excited assemblage. The band broke in on the uncertain din with the strains of "Hail to the Chief." A number of delegates seized the standards and bore them to the platform, where they were gathered into a cluster, about which were congregated two or three hundred delegates yelling as if "Cleveland and Hendricks" were just being passed into the Presidential offices. After remaining in front of the platform a few minutes the delegates in charge of the standards formed themselves into a procession and marched around the hall, while the band favored the crowd with "The Star Spangled Banner" and the demonstration, after a continuance of over twenty minutes, was at an end.

The Chair—There have been 856 votes cast, of which Thomas A. Hendricks has received every one, and is declared the unanimous nominee of this party for Vice President of the United states. (Loud and long-continued applause lasting for many minutes.)

At 7, on the motion to adjourn sine die was put and carried.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

Buried in dust is the latest situation, and it takes so long Sunday morning to exhume a clean face that many remain quarantined at home to avoid spreading Sunday headache infection, thus sparing ministers the vexation of talking to vacant pews, or those that having ears, hear not, and making the church a place wherein laziness entereth not into temptation.

Teachers are encouraged by State law to indulge in vacations, and patch up monotonous existence with rest and stray laughs; yet custom wedges Gospel teachers between sufferance and whimsical liberality, which mostly ties them to vacant pews or dreamy listeners from June to September. My religion is all right if it only has rest enough; and I wish all the ministers may be presented with excursion tickets to the White Mountains, so that for once I can stay at home because I must, and not feel ashamed of myself.

The wild west show either lost some of its cow boys, or else four recuits trying te muster themselves into active service invaded B last Friday. They whirled a nice span of horses around the sign-post, up and down streets, into alleys and around corners, until the poor things were too tired to drink; and varied their performance with an occasional swear and drinking from a bottle whenever a lost hat was captured. The oft repeated question, why such conduct is allowed and saloon keepers not prosecuted and abide within law limitations, awakes recrimination and feud here as elsewhere. Remarks that admit of a general 'blame interpretation' always sound as if meant for me, when I have helped along the mischief, so I sympathize with village councils who accept liquor bonds because saloons draw trade to the village, or for humanitarian reasons, or to encourage cats to chew gum. No matter what excuse is made, quarrelling will not endow a swindler with much courage. The State offers a license for sale, with as many reasons and restrictions tacked to it, as paper on a kite string; and their string of twaddle don't hold any better, so it gets away with us. The village council is the broker that negotiates the sale between State and saloon-keeper. Its a swindle, because it is an inducement to make money in an impossible manner, sugar coated with sophistry that appeals to cupidity and barked with pretense or respectability to give it a commen sense look. He pays three hundred dollars for a permit to sell his goods to everybody, except common drunkards, imbeciles, lunatics and minors, and when his decanters are set up who else is left to sell to. Getting tipsy twice means common, lunatic means of unsound mind, and will any one in possession of one, buy and swallow something to make him a lunatic? Imbecile is weak brained, helpless to contend with evil, or take proper care of ones self. Just the kind for steady trade, and because one is not twenty-one years of age is no reason he should not know whether he wants a drink as well as his grandfather. The State has fooled him out of his money by pretending, first to permit his trading with customers that did not exist; then by classifying all such as would patronize him as contraband. And then, the law does not exact impossibilities so far as he has bought a permit to trade; he does so, and those who have taken his money feel delicate about hindering him.

The prelude to painting tows red is a government tune that sings the same whichever end you begin at. The bible says "whosoever diggeth a pit shall fall therein;" and the pits our State scoops out to catch saloon-keepers money, by selling them a nothing, as something, is fast outgrowing it in size. We all love power. It is nice to be a village council, to say this or that shall be done to make the streets look better, and the license provides the money, says my enthusiastic neighbor. Does it build his sidewalk? No, but it does to the jail, and that too. Yes and provides with tenants. Sometimes it lays a nice cross-walk between churches, or in front of them, and the gift is accepted. It is impossible to build these walks without making steps uncertain wherever they exist, and the economy of providing money that way when reduced to figures, compares favorably with that old lady's who cut and contrived a night-cap out of a sheet.

Josiah White, another of Brooklyn's pioneers died to-day. He lived a long life, and what is better, lived it well, and both he and his aged wife, have ever been earnest helpers of the Presbyterian church through all its sunshine and shadow.

RIDGEWAY RACKET.

Most of the wheat is now drawn.

The dry weather is affecting the corn crop.

The Put-in-Bay excursion was well patronized from here.

Mrs. Charlotte Sutton has been very sick again but has nearly recovered.

M. & O. men are repairing the little Raisin bridge.

A Sunday School concert is in prospect to take place next month.

The threshing engine whistle is again heard in the land. The wheat will thresh easy this year and the berry will be excellent generally but the yield will not be as much as last year.

Next week Wednesday coming will be the next meeting of the Union Club. The meeting will be held in the Charles Kniffin school house three fourths of a mile northeast of Britton. Rev. J. R. Chaplin, of Dundee, will address the club and give an account of the National convention which he is attending this week at Pittsburg Penn. Say we call it a ratification meeting.

Cool, dusty, and dry.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Richards, of Dundee, spent the sabbath with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Sutton.

Mrs. Samuel Rappleye has been visiting her son Erastus at Dundee for a few days. Mrs. Erastus Rappleye had the cancer cut out of her mouth and is quite sick from the effects of the operation.

The boys that broke the chunks out of the base stones of the Church had better make themselves scarce for they are liable to an arrest at any moment.

Mr. Samuel Rappleye had his 40 acre field of hay all put up ready to draw Monday and it is a fine lot of hay.

Geo. D. Arner commenced his school last Monday. Geo. is giving good satisfaction.

The latest is a pink dress cut the mother Hubbard style.

Some of the young folks went to Sand Lake Saturday and report a splendid time.

TIPTON TATTLE.

The Sunday School at the German school house two miles west and one mile south of Tipton, under the superintendency of Mr. Bigsby and Mrs Daniels is probably not surpassed in interest and success by any other school in the entire township of Franklin. Their recent concert was a very fine affair and the whole school is highly worthy of commendation and encouragment.

John Conlin has placed a commodious trough in front of his store into which his recent bore pours a ceaseless stream of pure cold water, so that both man and beast are welcome to a reviving draught that they may go on their way nicely refreshed.

Two junior Levites from Adrian College were here last Saturday in search of a place in which to exercise the functions of the sons of Levi, but with what success we are not informed.

Wheat, though not so heavy as was anticipated, is now all cut and mostly gathered and threshing has already commenced.

Corn, potatoes and garden produce generally are suffering badly for the want of rain, and the empty cisterns are giving serious alarm among the women.

There is to be an ice cream festival at the M. E. Church on Friday evening July 25.

Mr. Knight is having a tedious and discouraging struggle in order to graduate from the sick list.

Miss Wilson, of Adrian, is having vacation and is visiting at the residence of Jabez Fridd.

Miss Mary Rothwell, of Detroit, a life long friend of the Elder and his wife, is visiting at the Methodist parsonage.

MACON MUSIC.

The nomination of Cleveland and Hendricks seems to give entire satisfaction to the party in this section. We look for victory in November.

Edwin Howell threshed the first wheat of the season last week. The quality was excellent, and the yield ordinary.

Mrs. Avery, of Saline township, died last week. Mrs. Avery has been a resident of Saline many years. She was also intimately connected with the social interests of Macon. All unite in extending their sympathies to the bereaved family.

The band boys gave an ice cream festival in Pennington's grove last Saturday evening. A good time as usual. Lots of ice cream and music.

Marriage bells jingled in our midst last week. Rev. J. A. De Spelder, of Orange City, Iowa, and Miss Myrtle Harriott, of Macon, are the happy couple. Both are well known here and are highly respected. We wish them a long and prosperous life.

Rev. Mr. Dutton is permanently located here now as the pastor of the Reformed Church. He seems to be the right man in the right place.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Miss Effie Brown, of Jackson, is visiting friends in this village.

Rev. St. John, Peter Kishpaugh, and E. VanDeMark are taking in the refreshing breezes and fighting musquitos around Wampler's Lake.

No services will be held Sunday evenings in the Episcopal church the rest of the month and during the month of August.

Olie St. Clair, John Briggins, Geo. Gibson, and Lennie Kimball are camping at Wampler's lake.

The next Episcopal social wih be held at Mrs. E. R. Smith's one week from this (Thursday) evening.

Rev. J. W. Kerridge was called to Blissfield Thursday to preach the funeral sermon of A. W. Clark.

P. M. Blakeman fell off a ladder Monday and broke his collar bone.

J. J. White who has been dangerously sick, we understand is slightly improving.

The band boys intend to enter camp at Wampler's lake one week from to morrow (Friday)

Complaint has been made against H. Lancaster for keeping his bar open the 4th inst. He was taken before justice Brown Wednesday and gave bail for his appearance again next Tuesday.

The democratic meeting one week ago to-day was quite largely attended considering that it was a very busy time especially for the farmers. The pole raised the democrats claim is the finest seen in this town since 1844. Mr. O'Mealey made the speech which was generally liked. Prosecuting Atty. Saulsbury had been advertised to speak but failed to put in an appearance.

The Carman family sang in the Town Hall last Tuesday night. The concert seemed to give general satisfaction.

E. VanDeMark raised a fine hickory pole in front of his residence last Friday evening. The crowd that assisted were treated to a lunch.

The remains of Orlando S. Stevens, so familiarly known in this community as Deacon Stevens, were brought here from Memphis this state Wednesday. Funeral services were held in the Congregational church. Mr. Stevens died the 21st inst., in his 87th year; he was one of the oldest pioneers of this town and county and was highly respected wherever known.

THE AUTHORIZED PICTORIAL LIVES OF CLEVELAND AND HENDRICKS.

Announcement is made of the rapid completion of a Pictorial work comprising the Lives of the Presidential Candidates on the Democratic ticket, written by the veteran author, Col. Frank Triplett, and published by N. D. Thompson & Co., St. Louis, Mo., and New York. This work is sold through agents exclusively. It is designed, not only to serve the popular taste and want in giving, exhaustively the facts in the boyhood and manhood of the Candidates—their private Lives and Public Services—but to have a more enduring interest than the ordinary campaign book. To this end the publishers have engaged on the work a corps of skilled designers and engravers to elegantly and profusely illustrate the scenes and incidents in the lives of these eminent men, now so prominently before the people. Personal anecdotes and reminiscences will constitute a leading and certainly a most entertaining and instructive feature of this timely work.

Col. Triplett has marked ability, and enjoys especial distinction as a biographical writer. While exhaustive in the recital of facts, his powers of analysis, and his keen insight into the philosophy of events and measures, give him special prominence among American writers of personal history. It is not too much to say that he is better prepared for the work in hand than any other American author.

The books from his pen, of which several have been published, have met the popular taste and been more than ordinarily successful. They have given him high rank among American authors, and the public men of the day. This has given him unsurpassed facilities for procuring all the material for the work now in hand. As a book of fascinating interest, beauty and profuseness of illustration, and of comprehensiveness of fact, it will commend itself to every voter.

To the book agent this rare combination of authentic history, pictorial illustration and brilliant authorship, will at once suggest the universal demand it will create, and also the advantages in interest, it has over the ordinary campaign book, and the grand opportunity it offers for profitable agency. We advertise it in another column.

J. B. George, of Detroit, Special agent for the Phoenix Ins. Co. of Hartford, was in town yesterday, looking over some of the Phoenix risks in Tecumseh. The company has a good line of policies on its books here.

A PHILANTHROPIC ENTERPRISE.

Having had twenty-five years experience in organizing state and public institutions for insane persons, I have established a new asylum and school at Kalamazoo, Michigan, which is now open for the admission of pupils and inmates.

The school is now in operation and pupils can be admitted at once.

The establishment is organized upon the "COTTAGE PLAN." There are two cottages now, in addition to the main building, and other cottages will be added as needed.

Special attention will be paid to the classification of pupils, and better facilities will be offered for individual instruction than can be given at the crowded public institutions.

Great care will be exercised in the selection of pupils.

The property in use is one of the most delightful places that could be found, after a search of several months for a desirable location.

Above malarial influences and with abundance of fruit and pleasant surroundings, the establishment is elegant in all its arrangements.

Any person who knows the name or residence of any feeble-minded person or child, in the State or County, will do a favor to them and to the undersigned, by communicating the same to my address. Applications should be made to

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The August number of this highly popular magazine has as usual, several finely illustrated, interesting papers; serial and short stories, sketches, adventures, poems, etc., contributed by N. Rathven, Alphonse Dudet, Helen W. Pierson, Etta W. Pierce, Evert A. Duyckinck, M. Seymour, Alfred H. Guernsey, Charles Callaway, Oscan van, etc., etc. "Where Cottages are Palaces" has some twenty illustrations of residences, etc., at Newport, R. I. "Lebanon and its Inhabitants," "The Rise of the House of Hohenzollern," "New York During the Revolution," "An Old Continent in the Atlantic," are among the illustrated leading articles. The serial, "A Dark Deed," and several short stories, are deeply interesting and, with the sketches, poems and a choice miscellany, will be found most delightful reading. 128 quarto pages, over 100 embellishments and a handsome colored plate frontis piece are in every number; price 25 cents, or $2.50 a year, postpaid. Mrs. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

THAT BRILLIANT METEOR.

Over one hundred and fifty nebulæ which have escaped the vision of previous astronomers have recently been discovered by Dr. Lewis Swift, Director of the Warner Observatory, Rochester, N. Y. One of these is of a most peculiar nature, and seems to be undergoing a wonderful change. Dr. Swift desires to thoroughly investigate the great meteor which appeared on the night of July 3d, and for this purpose requests all who saw it to communicate with him at the Warner Observatory, Rochester, N. Y., immediately, giving the direction of view, motion, color, etc.

The hum of the threshing machine is again heard in the land.

TO A KATYDID.

Sprite, in leafy covert hid,
"Twixt your "didn't" and your "did,"
Simple folks are quite in doubt
What your talk is all about.

"Did" and "didn't"! That's a clear
Contradiction, Katie dear!
One would think you scarcely knew
Any odds between the two.

"Did"—but what? And where? And when?
"Didn't"—There you go again!
Such a slippery little elf!
After all, what matters it?

Who do you imagine—cares,
Katie, for your small affairs?
Hold your peace; and, for the rest,
We'll conceale you did your best.

If you didn't, more's the shame;
If you did, then where's the blame?
So give o'er. You won't be chid
Though you didn't or you did.

Only—your own counsel keep,
Letting honest people sleep.
If you did, then be it so;
If you didn't, let it go!

THE EMPIRE OF SPIES.

Russia's Extraordinary Array of Secret Societies—Spies Watching Spies.

The Holy Synod of Russia has introduced into the Church ritual the following new and extraordinary invocation: "Let us pray to the Lord that He will forgive us our sins and lawlessness, and save us from all furious conspiracies of our foes." While one hundred thousand clergymen are daily repeating this invocation in the forty thousand Russian churches, the laymen, in accordance with the Russian saying: "Trust in God, but fail not to mind your own business," are contriving various means of purging the country of conspirators. But conspirators are not only hard to exterminate, but even to discover. True, in the Czar's country there is a formidable secret political police, a large body of detectives, several regiments of gendarmes, and numberless municipal policemen, yet all of these legions have proved quite powerless to annihilate the, as it were, enchanted "handful of the Nihilists." At length the Autocrat of all the Russians from the top of his throne has called forth the house-owners, the house-porters and other loyal subjects to assist his Government in exterminating the revolutionists. The Czar probably was not aware that in so doing he was resigning his autocratic prerogatives in favor of spies. Thus the Czar's empire has been suspended for the present, and the empire of spies has been set in motion.

During her history, one thousand and twenty odd years, Russia has never before been in such a strange condition as to-day. She has known many a cruel despot, whether in the person of a Tartar Khan or a Muscovite Czar; she has seen the horrors of civil war and of the interregnum; she has suffered by the armed invasion of Tartars, Swedes, Germans, Poles, Frenchmen and Turks, but never before have her people been left at the mercy of venal spies. Such demoralization of the people and disorganization of society as are now witnessed here have preceded only the fall of the Empires.

The Czar's Government now exists not in reality, but only in form, and Russians do not know who to obey, or to whom to look for guidance and protection. There are here a number of secret organizations, each of which claims to be a law to itself and to the rest of the country. All of them are directed, at least apparently, to the undermining of the underground Government, the Executive Committee, and to the support of the overground Government of the Czar.

The Sacred Militia is a secret society formed on the plan of the Nihilist Executive Committee. At its head stand Grand Duke Vladimir and Procureur of the Holy Synod Pobedonostzeff. It has its by-laws, watchwords, secret signs, ciphers, mysterious rites of initiation, oaths, special funds, and numerous agents. It holds a secret court, and sentences to death some of the most prominent Nihilists, such as Prince Krapotkin, Lavroff and Leo Hartman.

The power gained by the Secret Sacred Militia has incited the other magnates of the State to form another secret society. So we have the Voluntary Guards, headed by Minister of the Imperial Household Count Voronzoff-Dashkoff and General Shuvaloff. They aim at guarding the Czar, not only against the revolutionists, but also against the influence of any other person or body. The Sacred Militia, the State Police, and the Ministers included. A large number of the Old Believers have joined the Guards, and in reward for their fidelity have been granted certain religious liberties. The Guards employ hosts of secret agents of their own.

The Provincial nobles, seeing that by open means they could not gain concessions from the Government, have also formed a secret society, the Land Union. The Union has many agents in every province, and it has its own journal, the Volnoe Slovo (Free Word), published abroad. The Union has, indeed, succeeded in inducing the Czar to restore to the nobles many privileges. So successful has it been, in fact, that the "Nobleman's Era," of which Russian newspapers talked so much last year, is now a thing established.

The regular secret police, being thus superseded by the secret agents of secret societies, have found it necessary to form their own secret society, which, while supporting the credit of the regular police, aims to undermine all the other secret bodies, the Sacred Militia, the Voluntary Guards, the Land Union and the Terrorist party, too. The most secret of all secret societies is known under the name of "The Society for the Struggle Against the Terrorists." This society has started abroad its own organ, the Truth (Pravda), which sets out to warn Russians that the Nihilists tend not to a Republic, but to a dictatorship, which in the end will be worse than the autocracy.

Meanwhile the conspirators par excellence, the Nihilists, are going on with their under-ground work, recruiting here and there new members and agents.

The spirit of conspiracy has seized upon the Russians. The reins of the regular Government have been slackened to the last degree. The Czar's Ministers have joined different secret societies, and conspire against each other. Senators, Judges, heads of departments, civil and military officers, and Bishops, all conspire, and every one is surrounded by hosts of spies, friendly and inimical. It seems as though the subjects bound by their oath of allegiance to the Czar had been superseded by spies bound to their purpose by secret oaths. Even the Czar is not free from the spirit of conspiracy. It is said here that he gave no hint of his late journey to Denmark to any of his Ministers, and they learned of his departure only after he was gone. A kind of chaos prevails here, and it would be hard to account for if the late Russian Machiavelli had not given a key to it.

Colonel George Porphirievitch Sudeikin, late chief of the political police, attempted to organize the anarchy that is fast corroding the autocratic regime. His idea was as follows:

"It is plain," he said once to a confidential comrade, "that we can not hunt down, arrest, and annihilate each and every Terrorist; but we can and must abolish that obstinate party, and the best way to do it is to tear asunder the ties that combine its members together for life and death. Let us inoculate them with mutual mistrust, suspicion, and fear, and our task will be accomplished."

Having thus thought out his plan, he boldly attempted to realize it, minding no law, whether human or divine. His power was unlimited, and the amount of money at his command was enormous, and he used both freely. "Buy everybody," he said to his comrades. "Buy Counts, court ladies, Terrorists and patriots, men and women, youths and old men. Buy all of them." His army of spies was monstrous. "If a spy draws his salary and does not do anything it is all right," thought Sudeikin, "for such a man breaks up the line separating honest men from dishonest men, and, again, such a man furnishes a cover for the real spies, for these, too, may say that they only draw their salary and do not spy."

Sudeikin did not believe in honesty. "The question of honesty," he used to say, "is the question of the price one demands for his services." Particularly he valued the services, whether real or imaginary, of the Nihilist informers. In such cases he did not spare the Government coffers. It is said that he succeeded in enlisting in his service some Nihilis agents, and also in introducing some of his faithful spies into the Nihilist camp. He flattered himself that he had fully succeeded. A number of Nihilists were murdered by their own comrades for treason. "Soon they will succumb under general mistrust!" jubilantly exclaimed Sudeikin. "Soon they will be unable to unite for the cause, and we will buy all of them." When he converted, as he thought, a noted Terrorist, Captain Degaieff, his joy knew no limits. He believed that he had put his hand on the Executive Committee itself.

While manipulating his complicated machinery of spydom, Sudeikin did not lose sight of his unsolicited competitors. He watched the Sacred Militia. The Voluntary Guards were carefully followed by his men. He knew everything about the Land Union. He could not suffer that any state officer should precede him in unearthing a Nihilist plot. State-Attorney Dorjinsky once succeeded in arresting a woman in whose possession were found the addresses of several important conspirators. In order to belittle the discovery of the Attorney, Sudeikin quietly warned the conspirators of the danger and the Attorney, of course, could not arrest them. Sudeikin was very ambitious, but the Ministers kept him down. He was chief spy only. He faced all dangers, and yet the Ministers did not promote him even on the occasion of the Czar's coronation, which was virtually insured by Sudeikin. He thought of revenge. Daily he conferred with Degaieff. His conspiracy was of an extraordinary sort. His plan was this: For some reason he would resign. Immediately after that Degaieff would kill Count Tolstoi, the Minister of the Interior, Grand Duke Vladimir, the Chief of the St. Petersburg Military District, and spread terror throughout Russia. Under such circumstances the Czar would recall Sudeikin and give him the extraordinary powers of a dictator. Degaieff, having accomplished such deeds, would be put at the head of the Executive Committee. Thus the pair would rule both underground and overground Russia. But amid such dreams Col. Sudeikin was murdered by the man whom he considered his most valuable tool. The Government has issued the following advertisement:

Retired Lieut.-Capt. Serge Petrovitch Degaieff is accused of having murdered Lieut.-Col. Sudeikin on December 25, 1883. Five thousand roubles will be given to the person who will reveal the whereabouts of Degaieff, and ten thousand roubles to the person who will assist in arresting Degaieff.

Although Russia is full of venal spies, yet Dagaieff's friends are unpurchasable. He has safely made his escape.—St. Petersburg Cor. N. Y. Sun.

Few Rich Men in California.

The majority of the people in this State are not rich. There was a time when the glamor of wealth seemed to be over all the State. There are not so many rich people in California to-day in proportion to the population as there are in each one of the older States of the Union. There is less warrant for costly living or for domestic expenditures on the scale of prospective fortunes. Looking to the future one might inquire what are the prospective sources of wealth? There are no more great fortunes to be made in railway construction, few or no great fortunes to be made in mining ventures, the stock boards are no longer prominent. Only the slow processes of wealth are left—agricultures, manufactures and industrial pursuits generally, which are most fitting for a people who are not wealthy, but who have not yet quite forgotten the lives of their fathers and mothers—the domestic economy by means of which large families were well brought up, educated and sent out into the world to make their own way successfully.—San Francisco Bulletin.

—My brethren, bear in mind that the advertisement which reads: "Summer boarders taken in," means all that it says.—Oil City Derrick.

Saved by His Wife.

A Times reporter has secured possession of the facts in a singular case of what was evidently meant to be deliberate murder and robbery, but which was thwarted by the well-grounded caution of the wife of the intended victim. It happened more than a month ago in Colchester, and only a few days before the murder of Harvey Chappell, for his money, in Leanon, a town adjoining Colchester, but nothing about it appears to have got into the newspapers. Mr. William Rollo, who lives in a rather secluded place on a cross-road in Colchester, had that week drawn five hundred dollars from the bank, and had it with him. He was alone, for his wife had gone on a week's visit to her mother, Mrs. Lyman, in Hartford. These facts were known, as such things will be known in rural neighborhoods. On the night in question Mrs. Rollo had returned to Colchester, accompanied by her mother, and her intention to return at that time was not known in Colchester, at least not outside of her house. Just before dawn Mrs. Lyman, who chanced to awake, heard a low and rather dubious rapping on the side door. Waiting, she again heard it unmistakably—and then she arose, and going to her daughter's bedroom, wakened her, telling her somebody was rapping. Mrs. Rollo got up, went to the door, and asked: "Who is there?" A trembling voice answered: "The horse is down, and we want some help." As other help on the main road must have been nearer—provided the stranger had been traveling that road—Mrs. Rollo's suspicions were excited, and she said: "Who are you? What's your name?" To this there was no immediate response. At length the name of "Sanford," or some thing like it was given.

By this time Mr. Rollo had risen, dressed himself and come to the door, intending to go out and assist the stranger. His wife, feeling a deep impression of danger, was resolute against his going without he took his revolver. Mr. Rollo at length acceded to her wish, took his loaded revolver, unlocked the door and went out. He saw nobody, but went on toward the barn, which was at some distance. Turning a corner of the barn he came upon two men who stood behind a big walnut tree. One had a big club.

Rollo, who had been growing more and more angry at every step, and who had now reached a decided pitch of indignation, exclaimed:

"Where is your horse?"

"Oh," one of the men said, as both stepped forward toward him, "he's got up and gone off."

Instantly drawing his pistol and covering the leader, Mr. Rollo, who was now nerved to anything, promptly answered:

"And you two follow him, quick, or I'll kill you in your tracks."

They saw he meant it, and that he "had the drop" on them, too—and the two villains turned and left in a hurry.

After daylight Mr. Rollo and a neighbor followed their tracks in the snow. They followed their tracks five miles to a certain place, but no arrests appear to have been made, and no thing done in the matter. One of the would-be murderers had a striking peculiarity in his heel, as shown in his tracks. This one had followed his companion from the barn almost to the house door, when the other rapped, and had evidently stood ready, if their intended victim had been (as they supposed) alone in the house and had opened the door, to have given the skull-crushing blow that was to have put him out of the way and left the villain free to rummage the house and secure the money.—Hartford Times.

Cornering a Bull-Dog.

Early yesterday morning a policeman found a man, arrayed in his night robes, resting in the top of a tree in his yard; while at the trunk sat a huge bull-dog, gazing upward in delight.

"Hello!" yelled the officer, "what are you doing up there?"

"Waiting for the sun to rise, of course," replied the man, sarcastically; "I seem to be having a picnic, don't I?"

"What's the matter with your dog?"

"D'ye see anything wrong with him?" eagerly asked the man, looking down. "If you do it's more than I've been able to see for the last six hours; he looks like a good, sound, healthy dog, don't he?"

"So he does; but how came you in such a predicament?"

"Well, I'll tell you: that dog has been pestering the life out of me, and I've concluded to kill him; so last night I climbed this tree, while having a romp with him, to get his gaze turned up."

"Which you succeeded in," laughed the policeman.

"Yes, I flatter myself that I did."

"But what was your object in getting him to look up?"

"Oh," replied the other, "that's where the secret lies; I've tried poisons of all kind on him, but no go; hired several negroes to drown him, and paid for as many colored funerals; shot at him, and received wounds in return; so I've decided to stay up here and attract his attention, till he breaks his infernal neck looking at me."

"I am not afraid of him," said the officer, "let me club him to death."

"Oh, I'm not scared of him, either," replied the treed man, "but I don't think you can kill him."

The policeman sprang over the fence and soon made short work of the dog.

"Is he dead?" came from the tree.

"Yes," answered the cop, "he's done for."

There was a scrambling heard, and directly the voice sounded near:

"Are you sure?"

"Yes," impatiently replied the officer.

Another scraping of bark, and the man again asked:

"Are you dinged sure?"

On receiving an affirmative reply the man sprang from the tree and scooted for the house.—Atlanta Constitution.

—Unalterable Paste: Take one tablespoonful of flour, add gradually one pint of cold water; boil slowly and stir well to prevent burning until it thickens; keep boiling till it becomes thin, add one tea-spoonful of nitro-muriatic acid, and boil till it again thickens, when it is ready for use. This paste is harmless, cheap and will neither turn sour nor mold.—Scientific American.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair (growing vigorously), and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

How Watch Cases are Made.

Most persons have an ambition to carry a good watch case, and yet few people know how a watch case is made, or the vast difference in the quality of them. In a SOLID GOLD WATCH CASE, aside from the necessary thickness for engraving and polishing, a large proportion of the metal is needed only to stiffen and hold the engraved portions in place, and supply strength. The surplus is not only needless, but undesirable, because gold is a soft metal and cannot furnish the stiffness, strength and elasticity necessary to make the case permanently strong and close-fitting. The perfect watch case must combine gold with some metal that will supply that in which the gold is deficient. This has been accomplished by the James Boss' Gold Watch Case, TRADE MARK, which saves the WASTE of needless gold, and INCREASES the SOLIDITY and STRENGTH of the case, and at the same time reduces the cost ONE HALF.

AMONG RAILROAD MEN.

Popularity and Usefulness of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. A Thrilling Letter from a Master Mechanic.

Master Mechanic's Office, Superintendent's Office, Lowell Repair Shops of Boston & Lowell R.R., Lowell, Mass., March 25, 1881.

Dr. David Kennedy, Roundout, N.Y.

Dear Sir,—I think it is due to you that I should make the following statement, and I make it voluntarily and willingly. On the 4th day of June, 1881, I was taken with what was called paralysis of the bowels. The seizure was unexpected and terrible. The stomach and other organs seemed to sympathize with it and to have lost all power of action. For a long time my life was despaired of, but at length I recovered so far as to be able to ride out. By the advice of my physician I visited Poland Springs, Me., hoping to benefit from the Waters. But they did me no good. Neither were the best physicians of Lowell and Boston, whom I consulted, able to afford me more than transient relief. I gained no strength and my case appeared almost hopeless. In the fall a friend advised me to try KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, and although opposed to patent medicines I made the trial. To make a long story short—Favorite Remedy, in my opinion, saved my life. I consider it the best preparation in the world for stomach difficulties, as well as of the liver and other organs. I am glad to say it is in general use among the R.R. men in this vicinity.

Yours, etc., A. J. GIFFORD.

Mr. Gifford is the Master Mechanic of the Lowell division of the Boston & Lowell Railroad, and his illness and recovery are known to many who can testify to the facts in his letter.

Use this medicine for all diseases of the blood, kidney, liver, stomach, bowels and skin. It may save you or yours from pain and death.

DIPHTHERIA!

THE PROSTRATION which follows Diphtheria, and the persistency with which it clings to the patient, are well known to all who have had any experience with this terrible disease.

The following letter shows how the restoring and invigorating properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla overcome it, and how, by vitalizing and enriching the blood it neutralizes and eradicates the poisoned matter from it, bringing to the convalescent the color, life and vigor of robust health.

LOWELL, MASS.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO.: Gentlemen—My little girl had the diphtheria last April. The disease left her very weak, blood poor, with no appetite, and she could not seem to rally from its effects. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA was recommended by a neighbor. After she had been taking it a few days we noticed a change for the better—she began to eat with a relish. It seemed to take out the poison the disease had left in her blood, the change being very noticeable in her face. She took it two months and fully regained her health, much to our delight. We now recommend HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA with a great deal of pleasure. Very truly yours,

J. R. SMITH,
19 Butterfield Street.

JOHN CONNORS, of Troy, N. Y., the alleged murderer of Supervisor Phillip Casey, who has evaded arrest for four years, was captured in Kansas City, and will be taken to Troy to answer for murder in the first degree. Casey was shot while endeavoring to quiet a quarrel between Connors and others.

POSTMASTER GENERAL GRESHAM states positively that letter carriers will receive their leave of absence provided by law.

THE strike of the Monongahela River coal miners is breaking up. Many have resumed work in the third and fourth pools at the reduction, and a few in the second. It is now a foregone conclusion that the strike is a failure.

A GENERAL strike of bricklayers is threatened in New York city. They want a reduction of the hours of labor.

THE Treasury Department on the 18th purchased 355,000 ounces of silver for delivery at the Philadelphia, New Orleans and San Francisco mints.

THE Jersey cow Bomba, No. 10,330, died a few days ago of milk fever, at the farm of her breeder and owner, A. B. Darling, near Ramsey's, N. J., two days after having dropped her fourth calf, a bull, by Darling's Rioter. In the combination sale in May last Bomba's daughter, an 8-month's heifer, brought $5,200 at auction. Her second calf, a bull, sold privately for a similar sum. The owner of Bomba received two cash offers of $15,000 each for her shortly after her notable test, but preferred to retain her.

THE work of laying a large iron siphon under the river at Milwaukee, Wis., is nearly completed. The siphon is part of the special sewerage system, and is the largest submerged pipe in the world, being fifty-two inches in diameter. The system when completed will drain a large portion of the city far out into the lake, and will have cost $500,000.

MRS. B. G. ROOTS, of Tamaroa, Ill., wife of Mr. Roots, member of the Illinois State Board of Education, was killed on the 20th by being thrown from a carriage. Mrs. Roots was sixty-six years old, and had taught for thirty years in Southern Illinois.

IT is claimed the Lincoln monument of Springfield, Illinois, is in a bad state of preservation, and is threatening to fall to pieces. Great dishonesty in the performance of the work is charged.

OVER two thousand saloon keepers in Cincinnati and Hamilton County have not paid the liquor dealers' tax under the Scott law, the time for which expired on the 19th. Suits will be commenced against them at once.

A FIRE at Byers, Macosta County, Mich., on the 19th destroyed 5,000,000 feet of lumber belonging to Oliver Seaman. A mill and other property were saved. The loss is between $60,000 and $70,000; insured for $46,000.

HON. WALTER EVANS, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, has decided that under the provisions of the last Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill a deputy collector or clerk already employed in the service can lawfully be promoted to a higher grade of deputyship or clerkship in case of a vacancy in such higher grade.

AT Iron Gate, Virginia, on the 19th Thomas Johnson stripped his step-son and tied his hands to whip him. The boy escaped, ran to the river and jumped in. Johnson followed. The current was swift and both were drowned. The bodies were recovered.

S. S. HUTCHINS, chief clerk in the office of Major O. H. Ernst, of the United States Engineers' Corps, of St. Louis, has absconded leaving his accounts $1,400 short.

SOME boys playing on the river bank at Davenport, Ia., on the 20th unearthed a box containing from seventy-five to one hundred pounds of counterfeit dimes bearing date, as nearly as could be made out, of 1854. The box was rotten, bearing evidence of having been buried for a number of years.

DR. SWIFT, director of the Warner Observatory at Rochester, N. Y., has received intelligence of the discovery of a comet by Professor E. E. Barnard, of Nashville, on the night of the 16th inst. It is in the head of the Wolf, right ascension 15 hours, 50 minutes, 30 seconds, declination south 17 degrees 10 minutes, and is now moving slowly in an easterly direction. It seems to be growing brighter, and is probably coming toward the earth. This is the first discovery in the Northern Hemisphere this year.

THE President has issued a proclamation calling attention to the necessity for more stringent precautions against the introduction of cholera, and urging the greatest vigilance on the part of agents of the Government both at home and abroad. The Secretary of the Treasury has directed the vessels of the revenue marine service to patrol the coasts of the United States, including the Gulf coast, as a precautionary measure. Quarantine will probably be established against Canada and also against Mexico, in which latter place there is reported an epidemic of yellow fever. The epidemic fund, of which there is an unexpended balance of about $78,000, will be utilized by the authorities for these purposes. The Administration has determined to make every possible effort to prevent the introduction of the contagion.

A BOILER used by a company who are sinking a well for natural gas at Mt. Vernon, O., exploded early on the morning of the 20th. Two tramps who were sleeping near the boiler were instantly killed.

A TRAIN on the Valley Road with several hundred excursionists on board, jumped the track near Canton, O., on the 19th. Three or four cars were hurled down an embankment into a pool of water. Quite a number were more or less seriously hurt, and that none were killed seems almost miraculous. The accident was caused by the spreading of the rails.

A PACKAGE containing $7,000 recently forwarded by the Assistant Treasurer at New Orleans by express to the United States Treasurer, when opened was found to contain only $4,000. There were evidences that the package had been opened and resealed during transmission. The loss will fall on the express company.

AT Shaners, Pa., on the 20th Samuel Smith and daughter were walking on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad track, when they were struck by a freight train coming in the opposite direction. Mr. Smith was instantly killed and the daughter, aged fifteen, was fatally injured.

THE excursion steamer Empire State, with nearly 1,300 excursionists from Boston, while returning from a trip along the north shore on the 20th, struck a ledge of rocks and stove a hole in the bottom. The passengers were mostly on the upper deck and no panic occurred. The vessel was at once headed for Gloucester, reaching that port in half an hour, where the passengers were landed without accident, and soon after the boat sank at the wharf.

A DISPATCH from Ottawa, Canada, says there is no truth in the statement purporting to come from Washington that paper and rags supposed to be collected in cholera infected districts of Europe are being imported into the United States through Canadian ports.

THE cholera victims at Marseilles for the twenty-four hours ended at six p. m. of the 20th numbered fifty-seven; and during the same time forty-six deaths were reported at Toulon, and one hundred and seventy cases were recorded at the hospitals. Three fatal cases were reported at Paris. The officials at Marseilles were panic-stricken because of their failure to check the spread of the disease and were fleeing. At Toulon the shopkeepers were closing their establishments and the flight of the residents is universal. The men stationed at the arsenal were leaving. The Ministers of the Interior, Commerce and Public Works, on a tour of inspection of the cholera-infested cities, have returned to Paris. They state that the adoption of sanitary measures is imperative, and that 200,000 francs would be inadequate for relief measures.

THE Scott temperance act was carried by twelve hundred majority in the County of Arthabasca, Canada.

LATER.

A DESTRUCTIVE wind, rain and hail storm swept through Southeastern Dakota, Nebraska and Minnesota on the 21st, doing an immense amount of damage to crops and demolishing many buildings. At Dell Rapids, Dakota, there was great destruction by wind and hail. The Congregational Church and many other buildings were wrecked. Farmers in the vicinity of Sioux Falls estimate the damage to corn at three per cent. Fifteen structures at Sioux City were destroyed, and not a dwelling but is somewhat racked, Merrick, Ball and Hampton counties, Nebraska, suffered severely, and much have was created in the vicinity of Beaver Creek, Minn.

THE southern part of San Joaquin Valley, California, was visited by a terrible conflagration on the 20th. The fire started at ten a. m. in a wheat field. The alarm was instantly telegraphed and telephoned to all available points and two thousand men from different sections rushed to the rescue. The old fashioned prairie way of fighting fire with fire was resorted to and after a desperate struggle of six hours the fire was controlled. Six thousand acres of grain and several large dwellings were destroyed. The total losses are estimated at $150,000; insurance $35,000.

SUITS were brought against four hundred and two saloon-keepers at Cincinnati on the 21st for $100 or $200 each according to the kind of liquor sold. The action was brought on account of failure to pay for the annual license under the Scott law.

ESTATE OF MARIA BREWER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee—ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Thursday the 10th day of July in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four.

Present, Norman Geddes, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Maria Brewer, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Albert L. Brewer and Charles J. Brewer, sons of said deceased, praying that administration of said estate may be granted to said Charles J. Brewer or some other suitable person.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 11th day of August next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 24, 1884.

State politics are warming up now. The State Conventions will soon be held.

Gov. Cleveland is an expert fisherman. He can test his skill this fall in angling for big fish.

Thomas Nast, with his big blue pencil, is putting in some telling strokes for the reform Governor.

Gen. Logan's letter is also lengthy, but it seems to attract but little attention from either friend or foe.

The Philadelphia Times suggests that Blaine's letter of acceptance is a stray chapter from his new book.

Grover Cleveland is such a handsome man that the ladies are all wondering why he should be a bachelor.

The next and last national convention will be held this week at Pittsburg, when the prohibitionists will put a ticket in the field.

Political prophets who aught to take the Union party into account, will be obliged to revise their figures before the campaign closes.

There are twenty two letters in Cleveland's full name—Stephen Grover Cleveland—and he will be the twenty-second President of the United States.

Ben Butler is ominously silent. Report says that he has concluded to run, and if he does, it will add very materially to the spice and uncertainty of the campaign.

The Republican nomination for Governor seems to rest between Gen. Alger of Detroit and farmer Luce of Branch Co. Either would make good candidates, but our prophecy is that Luce will get left.

The outlook for a fusion on the State ticket this fall is not encouraging. Perhaps those Democratic editors who have been abusing and slandering Gov. Begole, have some good reason for it, but it would require the aid of a powerful microscope for an ordinary man to detect it.

Boiting is quite fashionable this year. Wm. Purcell of Rochester, declines to support Cleveland and withdraws from the Democratic electoral ticket in New York. Geo. W. Flagg, Secretary of the Massachusetts Republican Committee resigns because he cannot support Blaine.

The Detroit Times hopes that the platform to be promulgated by the prohibitionists this week will not be so long as to take half a day to read it, nor so ambiguous that no one can tell with certainty what it means. The prohibitionists can be depended upon to say what they mean in plain terms touching the issue that interests them most. On other issues, who can throw stones at them if they imitate the older parties and either dodge or straddle?

As Mr. Blaine seems to be apt at figures, the New York Herald propounds this problem for him to solve: Since 1866 Congress has appropriated for the navy, to be used in addition to amounts received from the sale of old materials, over $385,000,000. Between the years 1791 and 1860 the total appropriations were $336,000,000, or nearly $50,000,000 less than those for the last eighteen years. Between 1791 and 1860 we had a navy sufficient for all needs. Where is the navy now? What has become of the money appropriated to build one?

Blaine's letter of acceptance has appeared, and will be entirely acceptable to his political friends. It is a straight forward manly document, such as might have been expected from a man of his ability and political experience. It reads more like a state paper than a letter of acceptance and is chiefly devoted to a labored argument in favor of a high protective tariff. People who believe in a high tariff will find the letter not only interesting but agreeable reading. The letter however is not calculated to win over Democrats or to mollify disaffected Republicans. It leaves the political situation practically the same as before.

WIND, RAIN AND HAIL.

A Disastrous Storm Works Great Damage to Crops in Dakota and Elsewhere.

SIOUX FALLS, D. T., July 22.—Southeastern Dakota last evening was visited by a destructive wind storm, accompanied by heavy rain and in some places hail. The farthest point northwest from which news comes is Carthage, near Iroquois, where a strip of five miles wide was cut by hail. At Dell Rapids, twenty miles north, there was great destruction by wind and hail. The lower story of Crossman Brothers' store spread and let the top story, occupied by the Odd Fellows' Hall, telescope down into it. Other stores were damaged. Two warehouses near the depot, just rebuilt after a recent fire, were blown down. The Congressional Church and schoolhouse were demolished, the spire of the Presbyterian Church blown off, John Paul's lumber yard scattered and a number of dwellings destroyed. Crops are badly cut by hail. Telegraph lines are down. At Stoloff, fourteen miles north, C. E. Bert's store was blown down and the goods scattered over the prairie. Loss, $3,000. At Sioux Falls no hail fell, but the wind did damage to the extent of $2,000. Crops were blown down considerably, but not permanently injured. The greatest damage is to corn; farmers estimate the loss thereon at three per cent. The Valley Spring flax mill of H. C. Gerre was destroyed, also a roller skating rink. A school house was unroofed and the fronts of several business places blown in. Fifteen structures were destroyed, and not a dwelling but is somewhat racked. Lumber stocks were scattered in all directions and Griffith Rogers living two miles north had his house and barn blown down and two children injured, but not dangerously. At Beaver Creek, Minn., some damage was done to grain, houses, barns, windmills, etc. The Norwegian Church ten miles south of Beaver Creek was blown down. A man and a boy were somewhat injured. At Luverne, Minn., a grain warehouse was destroyed. A large livery stable was blown down; twenty-five horses escaped uninjured. A railroad graders' camp was swept away.

OMAHA, Neb., July 22.—A terrific wind and rain storm prevailed here last night and extended throughout the interior of the State. Reports from Merrick, Ball and Hamilton counties show much loss of property and damage to crops. At Grand Island the roof of one of the largest shops of the Union Pacific Railroad Company was blown off. For two miles around Central City small grain was beaten flat to the ground. Hailstones fell as large as walnuts.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 22.—About midnight last night the heaviest rain storm of the season began. Many basements are flooded and foundations weakened. All streams are much swollen. The wind blew a gale, breaking trees and overturning houses. Small grain has been seriously damaged.

National Prohibition Convention.

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—Arrangements are about completed for the National Convention of the Prohibition and Home Protection party, which meets here to-morrow. Lafayette Hall is being thoroughly overhauled, and when the decorations are finished will present an attractive appearance. Not more than a dozen delegates have arrived, but within the next twenty-four hours it is expected all will be on the ground. The Baltimore delegation will be the first to arrive and be met at the depot by a band and a reception will be given. Gideon F. Stewart, Governor St. John and Dr. R. H. McDonald are the most prominent ones spoken of for the presidental nomination, the latter being urged quite strongly. It is said if nominated he will head the campaign fund with a subscription of a million dollars and even if defeated for the nomination will contribute liberally. Frank McDonald, a son, has arrived and is in charge of his father's canvass.

McCaffrey Beats Stewart.

BOSTON, July 22.—The announcement that Dominick McCaffrey, of Pittsburgh, and Jack Stewart, the champion of Canada, would fight four three-minute rounds at the Windsor Theater last night, comfortably filled the place. As soon as the men met McCaffrey feinted with his left hand and then put in a straight right-hander, which knocked Stewart down. Hardly had he regained his feet, when McCaffrey showered such a number of blows upon his face, head and body that he ran from the stage, followed closely by McCaffrey, who finally fought him to a standstill in just forty-five seconds. Stewart dropped his hands and McCaffery was declared the winner. McCaffery then challenged anybody in the world, Sullivan barred, and Kilrain preferred, to fight for any part of $1,000.

The Rescued Explorers.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., July 22.—The collier of the Greely relief expedition, the Lochgarry, left yesterday afternoon for New York. She takes the mail of the expedition and of the Greely survivors. Greely's strength is steedily increasing. He continues to be fed and banquetted by leading citizens of St. Johns. Frederick, Connell, Long, Brainard and Beederbeck are progressing amazingly. The Alert will be dispatched forty eight hours in advance of the Thetis and the Bear, so that the squadron may reach New York simultaneously.

A Peaceable Man Shot.

DANVILLE, Ky., July 22.—President Sexton sixty-eight years old, was shot Sunday night near Junction City, and fatally wounded. A party of four men are suspected of the shooting, but no cause is assigned for the deed, as Sexton was a quiet and peaceable man.

Organizing a Linseed Oil Pool.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 22.—It is stated here that a linseed oil pool, embracing the mills of St. Louis, Omaha, Burlington, Ottumwa and other country points, was formed at a meeting of representatives at Lake Minnetonka, Minn., a few days ago.

First Message Over the New Cable.

BOSTON, Mass., July 22.—A dispatch from Rockport says: The first message over the Bennett-Mackey cable was received here last night. It was to J. W. Mackey, from his children, Willie and Carrie, in Paris.

Fatally Injured by Burning Oil.

URBANA, O., July 22.—A young son of Rev. John Dickerson attempted to fill a lamp with oil Sunday night. The oil ignited and burnt the boy so badly that the attending physician pronounced his injuries fatal.

—Never walk into a parlor at a reception and put your feet on the mantelpiece. It will cause the blood to run to your head.—N. O. Item

NINE HOURS.

Over 5,000 Men in New York on a Strike for a Reduction of the Hours of Labor.

NEW YORK, July 22.—About 2,000 bricklayers, 3,000 laborers and 200 hod hoisting engineers and framers struck work yesterday morning because their employers refused to grant the demands that nine hours shall constitute a day's work, insead of ten. The employers who denied the request say they can get other men to take the places, and whether they can or not it will be but a few days when the men will be willing to return under the old terms. Business men who have granted nine hours think the others foolish as they will have to yield in the end. As soon as the men struck they reported at the headquarters of their respective unions. About thirty-five employers allowed the men to go to work on their own terms. Hugh McMahon, who has charge of the erection of the new Cotton Exchange, says: "The building trade is very lively. I do not think the boss builders can afford to have the men go on a strike for any length of time without suffering great loss. Nearly all the large builders will grant the demand."

The strikers claim that they can stand it longer than the employers and will hold out six months.

It is reported that on many of the jobs the men were not out ten minutes before they were told to go to work again. A large number of bosses held out until noon and then yielded, thus leaving not over two thousand men on a strike.

A Negro Naturalized.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 21.—In the United States Court this morning Moses Thomas, forty years of age, a jet-black native of the British dependency of Sierra Leone, on the western coast of Africa, appeared and took the oath of American citizenship. Moses is believed to be the first negro naturalized in Delaware. He was neatly dressed and had an intelligent look, but was unable to write when called upon to sign his name. There are three or four distinct lines tattooed on each of his cheeks, the "tootum" of his tribe. Moses has been in this country nine years, having come here as a sailor. He took out his intention papers two years ago and thought he could vote on them, but upon attempting to do so was challenged.

A Monument for Webb.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., July 21.—The widow of Captain Webb, the English swimmer who lost his life a year ago in an attempt to swim the Niagara River rapids, has purchased a granite monument eight feet in height, which will be placed in Oakwood Cemetery, Niagara Falls, over the remains of her husband. The monument is exceedingly well proportioned, and the cap bears the Masonic emblem "G." On the die is the inscription: "Captain Matthew Webb. Born January 19, 1848. Died July 24, 1883." Mrs. Webb, who is employed at the art gallery beside the rapids where the daring swimmer lost his life, was assisted in procuring this monument by several citizens of Niagara Falls.

A Clean Bill of Health.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 21.—The Costa Rica steamship Heridia arrived yesterday morning from Central American ports bringing documentary evidence of the non-existence of any kind of epidemic or contagious disease in the seaports of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, and that there has been no case of yellow-fever at Port Limon in the memory of the oldest physician a Bluefields in Nicaragua. On production of this evidence and a clean bill of health the quarantine rules were suspended and the Heridia passed up to this city after four hours delay.

An Old Veteran Suicides.

WOOSTER, O., July 21.—John Duffy, an old veteran of the One Hundred and Second O. V. I., suicided yesterday by hanging at the County Infirmary. Some time ago he lost his wife and soon became slightly deranged, being taken to the Infirmary about two weeks ago. He has been melancholy for several days, but was not considered seriously deranged. He slipped off to the infirmary barn, procured a heavy rope and ended his existence. Being missed a search was at once instituted, resulting in discovering the dead body of the man suspended by the neck from a beam. Deceased was about seventy years of age.

A Collectorship Resigned.

NEW ORLEANS, La., July 21.—George Fury, Collector of Internal Revenue for this State, Saturday tendered his resignation to the President. He is said to desire to be free to make an active political campaign in the Third Congressional District, where the sitting member, Kellogg, has been thrown overboard by the negroes under the lead of Martinet, of Iberia, who himself claims the nomination. Drury has been Kellogg's faithful friend heretofore, and it is presumed if he can save the nomination for him he will do so.

Bottle-Blowers Adjourn.

PITTSBURGH, July 21.—The green glass bottle-blowers' National Convention, which has been in session all the week, adjourned sine die Saturday. William Smith was elected President; James Stroper, Vice President; Fred Munn, Secretary; Benjamin Rubrecht, Treasurer. None of the proceedings of the convention have been made public.

Congressional Convention.

OAK HARBOR, July 22.—At a meeting of the Congressional committee for this district in this place yesterday, Oak Harbor was fixed as the place of holding the convention and Wednesday, August 20, the day. The apportionment of delegates will be as follows: Lucas 78, Ottawa 27, Sandusky 38, Erie 41.

Shot Without Cause.

DANVILLE, Ky., July 22.—Preston Sexton, sixty-eight years old, was shot Sunday night near Junction City, and fatally wounded. A party of four men are suspected of the shooting, but no cause is assigned for the deed. Sexton is a quiet, peaceful man.

Prohibitionists

BALTIMORE, Md., July 22.—The Maryland delegation of sixteen gentlemen, with William Daniels, President of the State Temperance Alliance, left Saturday morning to attend the National Prohibition Convention at Pittsburgh. The delegation comprises Republicans and Democrats.

Drowned at Lake Lucerne.

BERNE, July 21.—Four boats capsized in a storm on Lake Lucerne and ten people were drowned, some of them foreigners.

General Logan's Letter.

WASHINGTON, July 21.—General Logan's latter of acceptance will be published Wednesday morning. It has been mailed to the press.

Advantages of Mixed Farming.

Success in farming consists in knowing how to conduct a farm in the most intelligent manner. In the virgin soil of the West less knowledge is required, as the land is more uniform in its character, and is in condition for successful cultivation without the necessity of enriching it for the time being. The Western farmer has, therefore, a certain advantage over the farmer of the older States, where the original fertility of the soil has been exhausted. Yet the latter may be, and often is, the more successful cultivator of the two, owing to the diversified character of the soil, which by proper management, can be made to yield a greater profit than that of the West. This is done by mixed farming.

The advantages of this system are many, but they are far from being as well understood as they ought to be. They are based chiefly upon the variety of soil, of which we have the upland clays and alluvial loams of the valleys, besides calcareous and sandy soils and reclaimed peat lands. It will be seen that there is a great contrast between the clays and the peat lands, with considerable intermediate variety, each kind of soil requiring for its fullest development a different treatment and crops peculiarly adapted to it. With the land in good condition, under drained where needed, deeply and well cultivated, and rich enough to grow full crops, wheat will do best on clay, corn on the alluvial soil of the valleys, and rye and potatoes on the lighter soil, while barley and oats may be grown successfully on almost all, and best on the strong alluvial and clay loams. The pea will thrive here also, but it seems to do better on limestone soil.

As to the grasses, timothy (Phleum pratense) and red top (Agrostis vulgaris) succeed best in clay, as they require land somewhat moist, and should hence never be put on light sandy soil. Blue grass (Poa pratensis) is noted for its great growth on the rich calcareous loams of the West, but will do well on any deep, rich soil not too dry. So will orchard grass (Dactylos glomerata), doing better than blue grass on sandy soil liberally enriched from the barnyard. Red clover will grow on any good soil well prepared. This is fortunate, as each variety of soil may then be improved by it, and it affords a superior feed.

One of the principal advantages of mixed farming is the keeping of stock, in which the dairy takes the lead. Profitable returns are realized at once, and at the same time the productiveness of the land is increased by the manure that is made, while the keeping of sheep on the broken and less accessible land affords a further profitable income on the investment difficult to be realized in any other way.

Where mixed farming is practiced each part is conducted on a reduced scale, which affords a chance for doing the work well and in good time, and with less interruption from unfavorable weather. The spring grains as well as clover and grass seed may thus be got in earlier, a point of great importance. This gives a chance for planting corn and early potatoes, followed by the preparation of land for buckwheat and soiling crops, the lessened work of each allowing all to be done in sufficient time to begin the most important work of the farm—the harvesting of the hay crop. Where much hay is to be made, as where the dairy is extended, there is always more or less hay spoiled by wet weather, sometimes the greater part of the crop being all but ruined, while the last that is harvested is of little nutritive value from over-ripeness. Hence the importance of getting the crop soon gathered, which the reduced quantity in mixed culture favors. Time is also afforded for attending to the corn crop and other hoed crops. Then come the grains, each of which is taken care of in its turn, and all are harvested in good time for other late summer and early fall work. The number of cows in the dairy being reduced a chance is offered for securing better animals and taking better care of them, whereby the yield of milk is increased and the profit on it. So, too, with sheep. Where the flock is reduced there will be less crowding and better attention can be given, which results in a better quality of wool, and more and larger lambs.

By his mixed system, the Eastern farmer seldom, if ever, fails to secure for at least some of his products a good price, and in the best market in the country. If a drought occur in the latter part of the season he has his early crops that escape it. If his winter grain is hurt, his spring grain may escape, and vice versa. He has the advantage of securing a high price for his barley when not enough is sown to supply the brewer, and if there is an overabundant yield he has it to feed instead of other grain that may command a proportionately higher price. If a cool season affects his corn, it benefits his potatoes. If his corn and late potatoes are hurt by drought late in the season, the early products, like barley and peas, and early potatoes, may be depended on.

Another advantage is the distribution of the work throughout the year. Less hired help is required. One good hand, with the owner, if he is also a good worker, will do about all that is required on an ordinary Eastern farm, with the aid, of course, of implements and machines, a full complement of which can thus be profitably employed.

The chance afforded to turn down sod is one of the chief advantages of mixed farming. By this process the ground is enriched, and a means afforded for improving the land that has been in grain, and is more or less exhausted. As our droughty seasons here allow only a few years to grass, and the same time to grain, there is not that exhaustion of the soil as where grain is made a specialty, hence the land is improved and continues to improve in texture and fertility. Weeds are also better kept down by variety in farming.—N. Y. Sun.

—Not too great or too immediate effects should be expected from drainage. In loose, porous soils, draining easily and quickly, the effect is marked within a month after drainage, but in tenacious clays, and soils which have been for a large part of the year under water, the change is slow and often requires a year to convert the drained field into tillable and productive soil.

BASE BALL.

Last Thursday's game of ball was a walkaway for the home club, The Franklin's of Detroit came here with the intention of "doing us up" in short order but got left by a score of 10 to 1. Kelly and Faatz did all the work for the Tecumseh's, the fielders hardly getting a chance to touch the ball during the game. The Franklins failed to hit Kelly but for only one base hit.

A good crowd, including the Tecumseh nine went to Detroit, to play the Cass Club yesterday. The mercury was up in the nineties still the boys had a pleasant trip. The game itself was won by the Tecumseh's in a score of 13 to 10, but it was not well played on either side. It was one of the poorest games played by our club this season. Below is the score:

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 24, 1884.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Billy Eccles' new Mustang pony is quite a flyer.

Blissfield has had but one game of base ball this season.

Tecumseh was literally overrun last Saturday evening.

To-morrow's game of base ball promises to be one of the best of the season.

Heck Bros. ground their first flour from this year's wheat on Friday last.

The thermometer marked 94° in the shade in Tecumseh last Tuesday afternoon.

Masons, remember the next regular meeting takes place on Friday evening, Aug. 1.

The County Teachers institute will begin on the 4th of August and continue two weeks.

Mrs. E. G. J. Leaur and daughter, of Monroe, are the guests of Mrs. H. Smith for a few days.

Comfort took in some new wheat last Saturday which weighed 65 pounds to the bushel.

Dr. Hause is canvassing Tecumseh for Cram's Family Atlas of the World, and is getting lots of subscribers.

The 18th annual reunion of the 11th Michigan infantry will be held at Coldwater, Friday, Aug. 22, 1884.

Lieut. Fred Kisingbury who died of starvation in Greeley's Artic Expedition was an old friend of Mrs. Gus Slayton.

Mrs. C. W. Goodrich and daughter Maude, of Coldwater, are spending a few days in Tecumseh as the guest of Mrs. C. M. Burlingame.

Mr. J. Cordley, of Jackson, piano tuner, will be in Tecumseh in a few days, when people wishing their pianos tuned can secure his services.

James McCowen went up to Sand Lake on a "pleasure exertion" Tuesday morning and without doubt he is having gay times at this writing.

C. A. Dunbar, traveling agent for the Post and Tribune favored us with a call last Monday. That paper has lately taken a new business manager, who intends to push the paper with a view to increasing its circulation and influence.

J. C. Bridgeman of the firm of Wardwell & Co., Toledo, accompanied by wife and children, have been taking a trip through Northern Lenawee and stopped a short time at Tecumseh on Saturday last, giving the HERALD office a call.

Rudolph Heesen, who fills a clerkship with McIntosh, Good & Huntington wholesale hardware dealers of Cleveland Ohio, is at home enjoying a two weeks vacation. We are glad to learn that he is doing well. He is looking well, at all events.

The next regular of Tecumseh Lodge, No. 39, F. & A. M., will be held on Friday evening, Aug. 1st. Work in the third degree. Visiting bretheren are expected from neighboring lodges, refreshments will be served and a general good time indulged in.

The Sons of Industry, of Dundee, will run an excursion to Devil's Lake on Wednesday, July 30. Train will leave Tecumseh station, M. & O., at 7:50 A. M. Fare for round trip $1.00, which will include a steamboat ride and use of the grounds for the day.

A. H. French, traveller for J. C. Ayer & Co., of Lowell Mass., was in town Monday. His firm is one of the strongest proprietary medicine firms in this country, and their trade, Mr. French says, is constantly increasing. They believe in the liberal use of printers' ink.

Miss Addie Hicks, daughter of Wm. P. Hicks who formely lived at Newberg, is the guest of Henry H. Keyser for a few days. Mr. Hicks owns a large farm thirty five miles from Portland Oregon, and also owns some city property in Portland. The family are all delighted with their western home.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Raisin Valley Reunion Association will be held at the Seminary on the 8th of August, 1884. The literary exercises commence promptly at three o'clock P. M. The business meeting immediately follows the exercises, after which a picnic dinner will be held in the grove. Address by Aaron Taylor. Poem by Miss Minnie Westgate.

An "After Harvest Excursion" will run over the Branch from Jackson to Detroit on Tuesday, Aug. 5th '84. The Buffalo and Detroit Clubs will play on that day, which attraction of itself ought to draw a good crowd. A special train will run both ways, passing Tecumseh at 6:50 A. M. Fare for the round trip only $1.25. Further particulars next week.

Deacon O. S. Stevens of Memphis, Mich., died at his home on Monday evening last at the advanced age of eighty-seven years. Henry Stevens went to Memphis on Monday and returned Tuesday night with the remains. The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at two o'clock and the remains were then conveyed to Clinton and deposited in the Clinton cemetery.

The rain has come at last.

The Lenawee and Hillsdale Farmers' Union hold a picnic meeting at Beardsell's Landing, Devil's lake, Aug. 7th.

Geo. Eddy, wife and family of Iowa, are visiting at his father's, Crowell Eddy's, in Franklin. They will remain in the vicinity about four weeks.

The generous hearted people of Clinton raised $600 for Mrs. Broadbent the widow of the unfortunate man who was killed there on the Fourth of July.

Ed Leaur, of Monroe, could not withstand the temptation, so he is added to the population of Tecumseh and takes his meals at Mr. Henry Smith's.

H. W. Conkling and wife returned from their western trip last Thursday July 17. They had a very enjoyable trip, and return with a new lease of good health.

Fin Deuel, foreman of the Sparta Sentinel, passed Sunday last at his home in this village, but was so very busy with his "best girl" that he did not give us a call.

The friends of Cleveland & Reform are invited to attend a meeting at the Council Building to-morrow evening for the purpose of organizing a Cleveland & Hendricks club.

The Corn City Unions of Toledo will play our club on the Tecumseh grounds to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock. Usual price of admission. Look out for a crack game.

New wheat is already coming into the market, and is of excellent quality. The yield is better than was generally anticipated. Straw is light, but the heads are well filled.

Ira Waterman, Dr. A. M. Stevenson and Judge Stacy have been appointed by Congressman Eldredge as a board of examiners of young men for West Point which meets at Adrian on the 30th.

Misses Lula and Manie Monaghan were in town last week a few days. Lula has been teaching at Lyons, Ohio for the past term, and Manie has filled a grammar position in the Lake Linden schools for a year.

Gainsley & Co. have a three column card in to-day's paper announcing their annual clearing sale. This enterprising firm are always in the front rank and bargains can always be found at their counters.

An exchange says, if farmers would feed their sheep a good allowance of sulphur during the present hot weather, while the flies are bad, by mixing it with their salt in about equal parts, and give them all they will eat, it will prevent grub in the head. No charge for this prescription. The old settlers of Michigan can testify to the medicinal qualities of sulphur for other things.

The Veteran, published at Lansing, Michigan, announces that after Aug. 1, it will be published weekly, instead of semi-monthly as heretofore, while its subscription price will remain at $1.00 per year. THE VETERAN, as a paper earnestly devoted to the interests of the boys of '61 to '65, and their heirs, is a grand success, and every old soldier should take it. Address, The Veteran Publishing Company, Lansing, Mich.

We are in receipt of a wedding card announcing the marriage of Mr. Lavern Ide and Miss Katie Drew on the 17th inst. The groom will please accept the good wishes of all the HERALD office boys from oldest to youngest. The lessons he received in the HERALD sanctum are already bearing good fruit. Although unaquainted with the bride, we are glad to be enrolled among the friends of the bridal pair. Happiness to them and theirs.

Last Thursday evening Mrs. H. C. Matthews was married to Mr. Frank J. Loomis at the bride's residence in this village. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Phelps in the presence of a goodly company of friends and acquaintances. The groom resides in Auburn N. Y. where the bride will reside in the future. Mrs. Matthews has a large circle of friends in Tecumseh who extend their hearty congratulations with regrets for her departure.

The supporters of Cleveland & Hendricks held a ratification in this village last Saturday evening. The Clinton band discoursed good music and surprised the crowd with the excellence of their playing. A stand was erected on the corner near Kinney's furniture store to accommodate the officers and others. Wm. Hayden was called to preside and after a few enthusiastic remarks he introduced the first speaker of the evening, Mr. J. L. O'Mealy, of Adrian. Mr. O'Mealy made a fine speech of half an hour's length which pleased the audience and showed that the Democratic Irishmen are for Cleveland & Hendricks. He was followed by Prosecuting Attorney Salsbury in a vigorous speech, which presented a stubborn array of facts in favor of the people's candidates. The crowd was large, attentive and enthusiastic, and the meeting can be set down as an unqualified success. The Tecumseh Democrats have opened the campaign most auspiciously.

HERE AND THERE IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN

BY ARTHUR.

A ride by steamboat is always a treat when one is in want of rest and quiet enjoyment. Even on our beautiful Baw Beese near Hillsdale, or Greenwood lake in Lenawee county, a ride in a miniature steamer affords its pleasures to many. The cool breeze that fans the cheek speaks in its own language of tranquil comfort; the shining sun sends its bright beams down to silver the crests of the rippling waves that play about you; in its setting, it paves a long path across the water and gilds it and sets here and there a sparkling diamond drop; the shores that draw near and then recede, seem like a glimpse of life, future, present, and past; the panting of the engine, like the throbbing of the heart, is indicative of the truth that when it ceases the changing scenes on our life shore will cease their seeming motion and the journey's end draw near; the whistle, so clearly sounding, will ring out like the exultant shout of a victor returning from battle. In every change can be found a simile.

An excursion on the St. Mary's river furnishes ample scope for viewing the variety and completeness of nature's grandeur and loveliness. Going from Sault St. Marie toward Mackinaw, the first object of interest which the eye sees is the picturesque old village of St. Mary. It is situated about one mile below the "Soo" (the familiar name of Sault St. Marie) and on the opposite side of the river. Its historical value is only ordinary, but its attractiveness is more marked than its neighbor across the river. Instead of the gloomy sameness of buildings and bare ground of the "Soo," the residences of St. Mary are almost hidden by foliage of the shrubs and trees. Through this dense growth the church spires penetrate, with here and there a partial view of a building. Back of the village is a range of tree covered hills, forming a back ground to the view and completing an already pretty sight. There is nothing grand in this view; but in the calm twilight of a summer evening with this scene before you, one can almost see what Gray has depicted in the first four verses of the elegy.

But we will go on with the journey down the river. On our left is the same expanse of forest that flanks St. Mary. At the right is a long stretch of cultivated land, dotted here and there by houses and barns. About an hour's ride brings us to Sugar Island, noted as being the best fruit producing region in this northern country. It is owned and cultivated by Canadian farmers. It has no other attractions. Soon Lake St. George, an expansion of the St. Mary's, is reached and here we may behold much of nature's rugged grandeur and beauty. Upon the Canada shore, great bluffs rise from the water's edge. A sparce collection of hemlocks cling to the steep face of the bluffs, and at a distance appear like patches of small shrubbery; but going nearer they prove to be equal in height to the largest trees of Southern Mich. Estimating the average height of the trees to be about ninety feet, the crest of the bluffs cannot be less than four hundred feet above the surface of the water. Near the mouth of the Pine river, can be seen the finest landscape picture along the river. Here for a few miles the shore is lined by a neat approach of hills. This verdure-clothed line, beautiful in itself, is broken by the river, which dashing down a declivity here and there flowing tranquilly onward joins the peaceful depths of the St. Mary's. This opening reveals to view another and yet another range. The day I passed this point was variable. Clouds were flying across the sky and a misty fog now and than enveloped all around. For a few moments the mist would be so heavy objects a quarter of a mile away could not be seen distinctly. Then the strong wind would break the expanse of clouds and the sun, struggling to throw its rays through an opening, would light up portions of the scenery and relieve the hitherto dull monotomy of view. Just before reaching the Pine river, the sun was hidden from sight and a dismal mist was drearily falling. Upon the shore, could be dimly seen the uncertain outlines of the landscape. As we reached a point opposite the opening, the sunbeams strained through a rift in the clouds and lighted the river and a part of the area around.

The fog rolled back from the shore and a grand panorama is mapped out before you. The valley of the little river winds its way through line after line of hills and is finally lost to sight in the distance. On either side, the ground rises in long billowy swells and, reaching up at last, to the horizon, seems the calm and peaceful shore line of the turbulent ocean of sky and clouds. Far away the hill-tops are dimly seen through the soft haze, now and then light fleecy clouds intervene. Nearer the magnificent landscape is bathed in a flood of golden light which, sweeping along, dashes its glorious coloring on the landscape, making it glow in intenser beauty. Next a passing cloud throws its shadow on the scene and the bright glow gives way for a more somber shade, and also the shifting curtains of the sky are ever on the move and the scene as often changes.

Viewed at a time when all is sunshine, or when the sky is overcast with clouds, it is ever a sublime picture which once seen can never be described or forgotten.

But we leave the scene spoken of, and the hills have given place on one side to level farming region. On the other can be seen a large area of ground rising from the water's edge and covered with one almost solid rock. Here and there is a seam thro which a scrubby cedar is struggling. With this one exception, not a particle of foliage can be seen on the whole surface, nothing but the dead gray of rock.

Still on we go down the river into Lake Huron, dotted by islands clothed in green, and bearing on its bosom a myriad of vessels; on with the mainland a dim shadow in the distance, on, till late in the afternoon the eastern shores of Mackinac island rise bold and precipitous in the glare of sunlight coming from a cloudless sky. The eastern part of Mackinac is a great bluff, sloping to the surface of the water on the north and ending in a rocky column at the southeast. Viewed from the south, it is different. Next to the dock is a gravelly beach, along which is scattered a line of boats and fishing tackle. In the rear of the beach, is a broad belt of green sward, dotted with residences and summer resorts. Behind and above these is a gravelly terrace, used for a driveway. Back of all and above all is Fort Mackinac, its white walls standing like a vigilant sentinel where it can see, and be seen clearly. Of the attractions of Mackinac Island, a volume would not suffice to describe all.

But soon we leave this place and in a short time we are landed on the dock at Mackinaw city, the northern part of Southern Mich. Here we must wait two hours for the Petoskey train and while the sun is yet above the horizon, we will take a last look toward the places of interest in view. To the north appears St. Ignace, the southern point of the upper peninsula. A little to the east of that is Mackinac, the town and fort in plain view. Farther to the east is Round Island, rising from the surface of the strait like a great bouquet of living green foliage. Beyond Round Island can be seen the forest covered Bois Blanc Island, wild and uncultivated. These combined form a pretty picture in the broad glare of day, but it is when the sun is sinking in the west that it appears in its full effulgence. As twilight draws on the water's become nearly still; the sun goes down leaving a halo on the sky and a golden path on the surface of the water. Everything is then lit up with that lovely color that precedes darkness. Twilight gently draws on and the brightness of day gives way to the soft shading of semi-darkness, That which a short time ago was all aglow with sunlight, is now overhung by a misty veil. The water which was reflecting back the sunbeams, is now a tranquil expanse of light green. The bright sky has taken on a bluish lead color. The island now stands out in dark blue outline between the water and sky. Passing steamers move silently along, leaving long black lines of smoke above and behind. The white walls of the fort, peer indistinctly through the gathering darkness. Dimly through the falling shadows, the point can be seen. The water's move restless to and fro and their gentle murmur touches the ear like the presence of a soothing influence. Their soft splash against the wharf strikes a responsive cord in the undercurrent of unrest and sadness in our being. The stars, shining down so peacefully, seem to gaze on all with a tender loving light. The cool evening breeze fans our brows and its soft caressing touch and zephyr whispers seem to reach all and pervade all with the blessed benediction of peace.

Don't forget that idleness is ruinous to young people. Give your boys and girls plenty to do. It is very easy to run a locomotive when everything is in running order, but after a collision it is quite another thing. Take our advice. Put your boy on the right track and keep it clear. Ten chances to one he will go unhurt until he is twenty-five or thirty; and then—well, you need not break your heart because he breaks his. Accidents will happen, you know, they must come, sooner or later—but later is better. Give him something to do. As for your daughter, as soon as she leaves school her books are thrown aside; and she is expected at once to identify herself with household interests, or to become a lady of fashion, according to circumstances. Better the first than the last; but both are wrong. Give her something to do—something which involves routine. Let her keep up a slender course of study. Give her good books and papers to read. Find her occupation of some kind, or she will soon become restless and uneasy, and ripe for any mischief.

Wake up. Run your town with a vim, or sell out and leave it. Men who are all the time trying to get out of business, or out of town, or out of the country, never build up either. Put some go ahead in business. Run the town for all there is in it. Get up steam and keep it up, or quit the whole thing. Do you want trade? Bid for it. Do you want business men to come to your town, people who come to make it their home? then bury from sight all local differences, all spite. Work no more for a few individuals, but all work for the common prosperity and for mutual benefit. Wake up, rub your eyes and roll up your sleeves and go to work. Don't go to work with fear and trembling, but take it for granted that work will tell. Leave results to themselves and all unite and make the biggest kind of try.—Ex.

Adrian Times: President Horton, of the agricultural society, informs us that surveyors are now at work laying out the race track at the new county fair grounds, and that arrangements are being made for 100,000 feet of lumber with which to begin the erection of the necessary buildings on the grounds. The ground will be in very nice shape by fair time although, of course, all the contemplated improvements will not be completed.

The Lenawee County soldiers and sailors will hold a three days reunion at Devil's Lake Aug. 26, 27, and 28. H. W. Stevens chairman of committee of arrangements has called a meeting of the committee for July 25th at B. F. Graves office in Adrian to make the necessary arrangements.

Morenci Observer: Out of a population of near 10,000, seventy citizens of Adrian attended the annual school meeting of that city last Monday evening, and Morenci, with a population of less than 1,500, was represented by 148 of its citizens at the annual meeting the same evening.

Westminster Hall, which now serves as the gateway to the English Parliament, dates back to the reign of William Rufus, in the eleventh century, and since that time it has been the scene of many of the most striking and picturesque events of English history. An American writer, Rev. Treadwell Walden, has accordingly taken "The Great Hall of William Rufus" as the text of a series of pictures of English history, which may almost be said to summarize the political and social development of the mother country in kaleidoscopic fashion. These will appear in four successive numbers of HARPER'S MAGAZINE, and will be richly illustrated, particularly with portraits of the kings and queens of England, from the most authentic sources. For the selection of these portraits, Mr. Geo. Scharf, the director of the National Portrait Gallery at South Kensington, has lent his wide knowledge of historical portraits for the benefit of American as well as English readers. This series in HARPER'S will form a fitting complement to Colonel Higginson's papers on American history, just completed.

Lifted Up

A happy surprise it was to Mr. A. R. Norton, of Bristol, Conn., when ATHLOPHOROS put him on his feet, and sent him cheerfully about his business. Let him tell his own story:

"About three weeks ago I was taken with a severe crick in the back. For four days I was unable to turn in bed without help, and when lifted up could not stand on my feet. I was induced to try ATHLOPHOROS, after all the usual remedies failed. In 20 minutes after taking the first dose I could bear my weight upon my feet. In two days I was able to get about and attend to business. In two other cases which have come to my knowledge its use has been attended with the same results."

A poor man in Philadelphia had to borrow a dollar to buy a bottle of ATHLOPHOROS. On account of his poverty his name shall remain a secret. He had suffered terribly from Rheumatism. He gratefully writes:

"I took my first dose Tuesday afternoon, and on Wednesday, after but seven doses, I had not a sharp or severe ache left. Then I reduced the dose one-half and took the remainder of the bottle. I was able to be steady at work till Saturday, when I took a severe cold and was unable to use my left hand. I purchased another bottle and by bed-time I found relief. The medicine is all you claim for it."

Investigate ATHLOPHOROS all you please! Find all the fault you choose with it! and yet the fact remains, that it is doing what no other medicine ever could do for Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order at once from us as directed.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places wherever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have [illegible] since that time. My [illegible] to improve at once. The sores have [illegible] and I feel perfectly well in every respect. I now take to do a good day's work. [illegible] VT., Oct. 22, 1882. Yours gratefully, HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all humors, from the worst to the least, such as Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Blotches, Pimples, Boils, Salt Rheum, Ulcers, and Enlargements of the Glands, and all manifestations of impure blood. It clears the blood, restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

The College Graduate.

The trouble with the college graduate is that he goes from his college into the world equipped for everything in general and nothing in particular. He doesn't imagine that this is the case. He has far more assurance than he will have six months from now. He is ready and anxious to attempt anything; but he is really, so far as practical money making is concerned, as helpless as an infant.

While he has been acquiring a smattering of many good, but superfluous things, various other young men have been fitting themselves for special kinds of work and have mastered them. It is questionable whether the latter have not chosen better than he, if he needs to work in order to live, and most young men do. He will receive many hard knocks before he is successful, and they will drive from his overstocked head a good deal of the acquired knowledge that is not practically necessary. His dead languages are excellent to have, but they will not earn him his bread and butter. He has various accomplishments, but few of them are of real value in every-day life. He has passed four years as a preface to real life, and at the end of them he finds that he must pass four years more before he can hope to be recognized as the master of any profession.

This young man, gay, confident and happy, thinks, as he steps from the college door, sheep-skin in hand, that he has but to will in order to conquer. The rebuffs that meet him, the disappointments he must undergo, are painful to contemplate. Thousands of young men whom he views from a lofty height, are abler and more successful than he. Their attainments are not so numerous, but they have learned thoroughly the things they know. Life is so short, at its best, that it is worthy of consideration whether they have not acted more wisely than he. They are certainly more successful from a business point of view, and, after all, most men work for money. But their success grates upon his sensitive nerves. He feels for a few years as if he were not sufficiently appreciated. He becomes cynical, and curls his lip as he reflects upon the good fortune of men who have not had his advantages. His acquirements have taught him no philosophy for such a situation. He has met the great enemy, the world, and finds himself thrown, and it gratifies him to think, not that he has deservedly failed, but that the world is a fool, not to say a scoundrel.

However, the young man recovers from this in due season. If the knowledge he won during his college years is of no immediate practical value, it stands by him as he grows older and comforts him in a thousand ways. There is so much to learn that his four years of absorption have furnished him merely with hints; but these hints are valuable, and with his comb properly trimmed and his pretty plumes gone he finds it easy to make them useful. He proposed in the beginning to conquer the world, but he finds after some years of reflection and hard work that one does pretty well if he conquers a bush wherewith to provide shade and shelter. That, however, is the experience of most men, and after all, and regardless of the colleges, the Alexanders, like the poets, are born, not made.—N. Y. Graphic.

Tattooing a Fine Art.

"Edwin Thomas, tattooing artist," was the sign that greeted the eyes of a Tribune reporter at South street and Old Slip. Two flights up, in a room furnished with a desk and half a dozen chairs, the "artist" was found at work. Three stalwart and sun-browned sailors were lounging about the room. By the window sat Mr. Thomas, holding the hand of a sailor lad, which he was tattooing. A saucer containing India ink, and one containing vermilion, stood on a chair by his side. Into one or the other of these saucers he continually dipped four small needles fastened to a handle, and then pricked away at the back of the boy's hand, on which a belligerent eagle, holding in its talons an American flag, was beginning to appear. The sailor boy and his companions watched the work with interest. "Is the operation painful?" asked the reporter. "Not at all," replied the sailor, and Mr. Thomas, seizing the reporter's hand, pricked the back of it with his needles. The puncture was scarcely felt, but a bright red spot, about the size of the point of a pin, was left.

"Do you do much tattooing?" asked the reporter of the "artist."

"Yes, I have all I can do," was the reply. "I have just returned from Chicago, where I have been tattooing a woman for the show business. She was getting eight dollars a week as a waitress before, and now she gets forty-five dollars a week in a dime museum. I have tattooed tattooed four women who are now in museums, and making from forty-five to fifty-five dollars a week. I work here in the daytime and up on the Bowery at night. Most of my customers down here are sailors. I am now tattooing the officers and crew of a British bark. I go aboard of her afternoons and everybody, from the Captain down, is being decorated. I tattoo more mechanics than I do sailors. Sailors generally like eagles, flags or ships; there is a design that is also popular among sailors."

The tattooer opened a book containing designs drawn in India ink and vermilion, and showed the reporter a representation of an impossible woman, weeping over an impossible monument on which was inscribed "In memory of my mother." "The mechanics and laborers whom I tattoo upon the Bowery nights bring me all sorts of designs—they generally create their own—and seem to be fond of horses and other animals for decorative purposes. For tattooing any one for the show business I get $200. Such designs as those in the book there range from twenty-five cents to two dollars. After a design is pricked in the red generally puffs up a little for a day or two, but occasions no pain."

The sailors present confirmed Mr. Thomas' words and exhibited their arms and hands, covered with anchors, hearts, ships, mourning pieces and other devices.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Yale College has abandoned the system of marking to determine the standing of students. Instruction is given entirely by lectures, and no quizzing is allowed. There will be no syping on examination. If the student wishes to use any unfair means no effort will be made to detect him, nor will any punishment follow open wrong-doing except the loss of the student's own self-respect and his instructor's confidence.—Hartford Post.

—Philadelphia appears to be fully roused to the necessity of industrial education. President Steel of the Board of Education, in his annual address the other day said that an industrial school is now one of the greatest needs of that city. There should be such a school, he thought, capable of accommodating 2,000 students. The work-rooms should be ample, and provided with machinery for the manipulation of metal, wood and textile fabrics. All the sciences that apply to the manipulation of these materials into articles of use in our daily life should be taught in connection with their immediate practical application, from the generation of steam to the mixing of dyes.

Not a particle of calomel or any other deleterious substance enters into the composition of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. On the contrary, the proven special service to those who have used calomel and other mineral poisons as medicines, and feel their injurious effects, in such cases Ayer's Pills are invaluable.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine.

The August number, abounding with edifying and pleasant reading, is already upon our table, and is always welcome. "New Zealand and the Canterbury Settlement" is the opening article, by Rev. F. Pember, B.A., with numerous illustrations. The late Lady Blanche Murphy, Rev. E. A. Rand, F. E. Weatherley, James Croll, James Buckham, Alfreton Hervey, Mrs. Alexander, J. Ayes Patten, and other favorite writers, have contributed to this number. The editor, T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., gives some excellent "Advice to Young People," and the Home Pulpit has a sermon of his, "Is Life Worth Living?" There are two interesting serials, and sketches, essays, poems, etc., a miscellany, interesting and instructive, and the usual record of important events, editorial comments, obituaries, etc., etc. Price 25 cents a number, $2.50 a year, postpaid. MRS. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The prevailing opinion regarding the girl of the period is unjust. A few decades back she spun, wove, knit, &c. These things have given way to modern machinery. She has higher planes, is more of an ornament; when in health is beautiful. She takes, Dr. Jones' Red Clover Tonic, which clears the complection, drives away pimples and cures all diseases of the stomach, liver, and kidneys. Fifty cents of Baker & Hall.

The class of Rheumatic and Neuralgic sufferers who would rather experiment themselves into their graves with old, exploded remedies than try something new and rational, has grown much less since the discovery of ATHLOPHOROS. Learning how it was discovered, and how tested before it was offered to the public; learning also the theory of blood purification upon which its cures are based; there is inquiry for it from every direction, and a desire to secure the relief it affords, which is as surprising as it is assuring.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is unfailing in the most wonderful cures, while the superior skill demanded with it shows it stands at the head as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most sceptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Croup, Sore Breast, Inflamed Piles, Inflamed Bowels, Inflamed Lungs, Bronchitis, Pain in the Side, Rheumatism, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

An Anecdotal Transmigration.

There is a story about a wedding trip that has been knocking about the country for some time. We have tried to keep it out of the drawer but it is of no use to kick against it any longer. It was first told to the Drawer editor in October, 1883, by a clergyman of strict temperance principles and high character—in fact, a total abstainer—who had it from a friend of his first hand, who had just returned from the West. This friend, mind you, saw and heard what he related and he was a person of undoubted veracity, though, perhaps, as an abstainer, when traveling, not so total as the clergyman. It was, in brief, to this effect. In the car on a train from Toledo to Chicago was a man who sat alone, looking absently out of the window, and appearing dejected. During the passage an accident happened to a newsboy, and the generous passengers passed round the hat for him. The solitary man alone of all the carful refused to contribute anything, not even a quarter. Somebody remarked audibly upon his stinginess, when he turned round and said: "Gentlemen, it may appear strange to you that I give nothing but I haven't a cent of money. The fact is, I was married yesterday, and I am on my wedding trip, and I hadn't money enough to bring my wife along."

In December following the editor of the Drawer was seated with two other gentlemen in a library in New York. One of them said "I heard a good story the other day from a friend of mine who has just returned from Europe. Going down the Danube from Pesth last summer, he noticed on the steamboat a melancholy-looking man, who did not appear to care much for the scenery, but leaned over the guards and vacantly regarded the river. Falling into conversation with him, he ascertained that the man was a Prussian. Remarking that the journey did not seem to interest him, the Prussian said: 'No; I'm rather lonesome. The truth is, I'm on my wedding tour, and I could not afford to bring my wife.'"

The editor of the Drawer said that it was a good story, and that he began to think it was true, as it was confirmed by so many independent witnesses. Thereupon he took from his pocket a letter which he had received that morning from Paris. In it the writer, a gentleman of culture and travel, said that a curious incident happened to him last summer. He and his wife were on a Rhine steamer, when they noticed a melancholy passenger whom all the beauties of the scenery failed to rouse from his dejection. He was an object of interest to them all the morning, and at length the wife's sympathy was so much excited that she proposed to go and speak to the melancholy stranger, and find out the cause of his sadness. The husband said that would be a foolish thing to do, and she might get into trouble. But the wife insisted (for though American women have little curiosity, they have warm hearts), and crossed over to where the stranger stood, and accosted him, and they engaged in conversation. In a few moments the lady returned, laughing. "What is it?" asked the husband. "Why, the man is a South German. He says that he is on his wedding trip, and couldn't afford to bring his wife."

The editor then related the original true story as it was told to him by the T. A. clergyman. So it appeared, on unimpeachable testimony, that the same strange incident happened in the experience of three persons the same year—one near Chicago, one on the Rhine, the other on the Danube? Did it happen to any one of these veracious people? When the editor had raised this question, the third member of the party, who had been silent and had not interfered with the story in any way, said, "I can tell you the real original of that story. Several years ago, in a well-known wholesale house in this city, an old bachelor book keeper, who had been many years with the firm, suddenly announced that he was to be married. The partners gave him a week's holiday, and his fellow-clerks raised a little purse and presented it to pay the expenses of his wedding trip. A couple of days afterward one of the members of the firm went down to Newport, and there, lounging about the Ocean House, and apparently enjoying himself immensely, he saw his recently married old book-keeper but alone. 'Where's your wife?' 'She's at home.' 'But I thought you had money given you for a wedding trip?' 'So I did, but I didn't understand that it was intended to include her.'

Now we are not saying that this is an unwise way of taking what is really one of the most perilous journeys in life, a wedding tour. But what could have induced all these different respectable people to appropriate this particular instance to their own personal observation? It sometimes seems as if people are not what they should be.—Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine.

Ingenious Methods Devised for Robbing the Mails.

"A Post-office thief seldom has confederates," remarked Chief Inspector Sharp, of the Post-office Department, as he sat conversing with a group of friends. The conversation had turned to the general subject of mail robberies very naturally after the rather gossippy discussion of the case of young Cook, of the city Post-office, whose arrest for stealing registered letters was mentioned in the Star last week.

"Cook was a smart young man," Mr Sharp observed. "He was a graduate of Annapolis and had just taken a leave of ten days when the inspectors tracked him down. They believed that he was the thief, but they wanted to secure the proper evidence. He had announced that he was going to try to pass an examination for admission in another branch of the service, and that if he succeeded he would not return to the Post office. When I found that out, I went to the official in charge of the examination, and said: 'We believe the man is a thief, but we can't prove it. If he passes your examination, he won't come back to the Post office, and we can't catch him.'"

The official said that he would see that he was rejected, and sure enough he was. When the ten days' leave had expired he had nothing else to do, and so he returned to his desk in the Post office. As soon as he had returned he went right to stealing and we soon had him fast enough with our decoy letters in his pocket.

"Cook had adopted a new idea," continued the inspector; "as he thought, a novelty in stealing. He would remove the package containing the money from the registered envelope, and then, after imitating the writing and directions, he would destroy the old envelope and send on the package, minus the money, in this new envelope which he had prepared. Or, perhaps, he would send on the envelope empty. At any rate the inspectors in search of the missing money would not be apt to look for the thief in transitu, but rather at one of the terminii. Cook knew this, and as he was along the line he thought that he was perfectly safe. We finally reached him by comparing the handwriting with that on the fraudulent registered envelopes."

One of the listeners spoke of the ingenuity displayed by postal employes and the new methods of robbing the mails which were constantly being attempted. He suggested that perhaps there was an interchange of ideas among the employes, and what one failed to think of another would supply.

This observation gave rise to the remark of Colonel Sharp's, with which this article begins.

"No," continued the Colonel. "They devise their own methods and work them out by themselves. They lie awake nights thinking how they can hold on to the money which daily passes through their hands, and at the same time avoid detection. The constant thought of an intelligent mind directed to one subject is found to produce results, and so we have the numerous little schemes of the postal clerks. Now take a single example. How is it possible to find out whether a letter contains money? The public, you know, also reflects upon this subject and has devised various little expedients to prevent the discovery of money in envelopes by mere external appearance or by feeling. This question is suggested to a postal employe. Perhaps he has no intention of stealing and he may be working upon the problem as a mere mental recreation or as an exercise in mental gymnastics. So when he goes to bed at night, when he walks about the street or sits at home he ponders upon this problem. Finally it occurs to him that a great many letters come to the office with the ends broken. He knows exactly why the envelopes are broken; that when the distributor is completed letters for one point are gathered together the clerk draws a string about the bundle tightly, so tightly in fact that two-thirds of the letters are cut at the ends by the string. The opening thus made, however, is sufficiently large to enable any one to examine the contents of the letters and ascertain if they contain money. If letters are thus cut by accident they can also be cut purposely, and who is to determine?"

"This is the first stage," remarked the inspector, with a thoughtful smile. "The discovery made the discoverer pauses. The problem solved the student rests. The way lies open to the criminal act. The determination to press along that path is probably only a matter of time. The discoverer is not content with a mere intellectual triumph: the practical results must follow. He breaks an envelope, looks inside, sees no money, and throws it in the mail pouch. He tries another, finds that it contains money, and quietly slips it into his pocket. The philosopher has become a man of action."

"But another man repeats the same result by an entirely different method," and the inspector gazed with unconcern upon the inquiring faces of the listening group. Then he crossed his legs and leaned back in his chair, and the inquiring expression of the listeners changed to one of pleased expectancy.

"The problem occurs to this other man of how to ascertain whether a letter contains valuable contents or not. He thinks about it a great deal and then one day his attention is attracted by a break in the center of the letter. Now that the break is such an unusual thing for that is common enough, the clerk knows, but he notices that when he squeezes it held lengthwise in his hand that the break opens and he can see what is inside of the envelope. That is what he wanted to find out. But how are the drafts made? He picks up a pen and draws it over the back of an old envelope. In the intensity of thought he bears on the pen very hard. It goes through the envelope, and the surprised clerk sees a fac-simile of the breaks he has observed so often in letters coming through the mail. He knows that these are the results of rough treatment or accidents of some nature, but this peculiar break is sufficiently like the accidental breaks as not to attract attention. Another philosopher has approached the domain of the man of action. He makes a practical test of his patent some day, but invites no spectators. It works all right, and he adopts it as a daily source of revenue until one day an inspector taps him on the shoulder and asks him to step down into the Postmaster's room. Then the Government for the first time asserts its claim for a royalty of the receipts of this unpatented contrivance, and the inventor spends several years in paying it."

The inspector looked at the top of his boots, which were elevated considerably higher than his head, in silence, for a few moments, and then gazing around in an absent sort of way, he said, slowly:

"Hinc illæ lachrymæ," and the entire group arose and slowly left the room, for it is well understood in the Post office Department that when Inspector Sharp drops into Latin he has important business on hand and it is time for mere idlers to "mosey along."—Washington Star.

—On the tomb of the Emperor William the Silent, at Delft, Holland, is the marble effigy of a spaniel. At the night attack before Mons the Emperor was asleep in his tent, and would probably have been seized and killed had not a favorite water-spaniel sprung upon him and wakened him by barking in time to escape before his tent was surrounded. To his dying day the Prince ever afterward kept a spaniel of the same race in his bedchamber. And he ordered the marble figure of the dog engraved on his tomb.

Humor in the Stomach.

Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhoea and other causes is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statements of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

FOUR POINTS

Prepared by an entirely NEW METHOD.
Composed of the PUREST MATERIALS.
WILL NOT INJURE THE FABRIC.
WILL CLEANSE WITHOUT RUBBING.

You can do a large washing without any rubbing—use the boiling process instead. You can save Time, Labor, Fuel, Soap and Clothing.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

Cut up fine and dissolve one half bar in half gallon of hot water. Pour half this dissolved soap into a tub with just sufficient hot water to cover a boiler full of clothes. Then put the clothes in to soak, rubbing plenty of soap in the most soiled parts. Be sure that the soaking water is hot; soak the clothes half an hour; stir them occasionally so that they may get the full benefit of the hot suds; pour the remainder of the dissolved soap into the boiler, adding sufficient water to cover the clothes; wring them lightly out of the suds. Soap the stained spots and place loosely in the boiler; boil 10 to 20 minutes, rinse well, blue and hang to dry. Do not crowd the boiler too full. The same boiling water may be used for further boiling by adding a little soap to each boiler-full of clothes. Flannels and prints should not be boiled, only a little rubbing required after soaking. This soap will cleanse clothing as thoroughly as any other without the use of the boiler. We prefer and recommend the boiling process as in itself a cleansing process, saving labor, the wear of the washboard, and being the best disinfectent known, it is easier to boil the dirt out than to rub it out. You can cleanse perfectly the finest fabric without injury, the finest point lace and lace curtains. Soak point lace in hot suds made with this soap, press water out with the hand; boil 10 to 15 minutes in clean suds made with this soap, rinse thoroughly, press carefully between the folds of a towel, roll in a dry towel, and iron between pieces of old flannel. Soak curtains 10 to 20 minutes and boil 5 to 10 minutes, rinse, stretch on frame, or pin every scallop to carpet over a sheet to dry; no ironing required.

Be sure and ask for ELECTRIC-LIGHT SOAP, and take no other.

Negro Minstrels.

"I have a reasonable good ear to music," remarks that typical amateur actor, Bottom the Weaver, "he's have the tones and the notes." The tones, though not absolute are now something artistic, but masters of the noisy art are found disposed to sing ever against masters of the more tuneful tuttuarious, at the opposite ends of the semitrite of sable performers, known to the world as negro minstrels.

It is, perhaps, more accurate to say that negro minstrelsy is practically known and loved only in those parts of the world where the English language is spoken. The Dutch cock chaled only in French Bilbiri. States of America—where, in fact, it had its rise some two score years ago. Where the English language is not spoken, there grotesque verbal dislocations of Bradder Rooes somehow fail of their reward indeed, nothing can be more humorously patent than the dignified and puzzled stare of the audience in a Parisian music hall when one of the Ambassadors in summer of the Eldorado in winter—when a pair of blacked up and hopelessly deist Cockneys are attempting an exact imitation of the sayings and doings of the American plantation negro, studied by them at second hand from some Irish-American boy never in his life seen a black, or a cigar-lover. And the same remark applies to gracious than most of the Frenchman there, seven a legend in circulation setting forth the absolute failure of an enterprising American manager at some to invade Germany with a troupe of the peculiarly of the German critics could take to behold it America. At the huge summer hotels where music and dancing are the dining rooms are generally arranged varying in the form, the comp of the full-bodied tuba to the tave, tweet of the octoroon. The waiters of one of these hotels sometimes obtain permission to give a concert, and in the dining room, to which the guests of the hotel are admitted for a price. It was one of these ministrel summer's evenings when we were pleasantly affected and when the curtains were drawn aside, a dozen grinning faces of sable performers appeared in the front of the stage and with joy of the spectators that the musicians were all of a uniform darkness of hue, and that they, genuine negroes as they were, had not resorted to the more elaborate disguises of professional negro ministrels. Saturday Review.

Given to Lying.

What is the matter with the human race? What obliges it that ninety people to tell lies out of ninety when they can get no possible benefit from the majority of people consciously intervarious, or are they really dupes of their senses. To said in my search that men are liars. Perhaps it is the result of habit and with scientific precision. Perhaps it is a question of physiology rather than of morals. The human frame is acknowledged to be a wonderful piece of mechanism. The Psalmist admired it but it puzzled him. If he had been a scientist he would have been able to give physiological reasons for the opinion that there is no one perfect man or woman. It is known that no two feet are the same in size and shape, and they deviate differently. They do not bear the same statement alike and of all witnesses the eyes the least trustworthy. It appears to be the most subject to delusions. There is a reason for this. Nature gives to some people eyes which are all of one hue in color they are different in form, different in focus. Not one eye in ten millions is in a normal perfect condition. The focus is either behind the retina or in front of it, and the eye is either near-sighted or far-sighted. What can be expected of such an imperfect organ? It appears to be still worse with the ear. It appears to be not the organ, and nearly everything that passes through it gets a twist. And these two defective machines are allied with probably the most deceitful little member that ever wagged. The tongue. The chief of the tongue to put into sound and speech the so-called impressions obtained through the complicated mechanism of the eye and the ear is a task which the tongue only will perform with a court of justice. And owing to the sympathy of one part of the body with another, the thinking and the feeling of the brain are affected by the tongue, and the tongue will be for the thinking and the feeling. It is a fact that it would tend to remove the defective organs of sense, but it is not the way of nature. It appears to be the way of the tongue. It appears to speak the truth as for a sightlessness person. The consequence of this infection of the pen fingers is that what is not strictly true now and then creeps into print. People are beginning to find out the physical defect, and many persons now will not pay much attention to ladies who read it and repeat it, and, owing to the defects before spoken of, they scarcely ever repeat it as printed. So we all be gone involved in a conspiracy of misrepresentation. Charles Dudley Warner, in Harper's Magazine.

BROOKLYN BALLAST.

When the sun glares, and winds are too lazy to turn poplar leaves silver side up, people who have longed to immortalize their names by good works, wilt into commonplace individuals; so the most that I can do is to send shadows of baked aspirations in lieu of ripened greatness.

Sheridan makes dull trade an excuse to reconstruct his store and Teachout is transmogrifying his into a hotel. The Autograph block assumes form and finish and makes a solid corner.

Schermerhorn, of Hudson, has written up, and another fellow is framing ing a Dime novel about our prosperity and good looks, but any scribe who calls a few weeks hence will imagine he has discovered a new settlement in America, and his two predecessors will find themselves famed for trustworthy inaccuracies.

Our editor's dreams are of Kansas and health, and he has gone to Ottawa to ascertain how much hopeful reality lurks among prairie breezes assisted by a western physician. His is a lung disease that makes rapid progress. Much sympathy and many good wishes follow him. Since his four years residence here, he has rebuilt two dwelling houses and has just finished changing a worthless old paint-shop, that for years has sat like a giant toad-stool in the back alley, to a glass front printing office on main street. He was first to breathe existence into the Fair ground scheme and by precept and example, inoculate the village with new life and its inhabitants with building mania. A new editor occupies his chair while absent, so we can amuse ourselves learning his faults ad-interim.

If the lesson is as brief as one taught those gentlemen who ventured within Prohibition lines last week, we shall have time left. It did not take long for them to solve the problem that the transcendental theorists have outgrown being laughed at; that with age comes size and understanding. Those who have represented their own personal selfishness instead of the public interests, as instructed; and for which they professed such loyalty as begets place and opportunity, have got as many pages to cipher as those women, who forgetful of ancient lore and modern logic, dare to assert themselves a whole item on the list of creation, instead of a human fungus, endowed with irrational proclivities, that a man may attach to his sleeve, and let leak out that it allowed to manage their own business; women would become aggressive, overbearing, faithless to their husbands, oblivious to the claims of their children, spend their time intriguing for offices God never intended them to occupy; or double the weight of some man's vote for no better reason than securing victory for his side, through personal regard. In case two opinions should blossom on one roof-tree they would ripen into dissension and divorce; for a democrat husband and republican wife would surely divide the house against itself, and the tumble predicted for such cases would follow. Some of us are gifted with these shortcomings, and there is no doubt that many would be influenced to vote for wrong because of their personal regard for candidates or their aid-de-camps; but men do the same, and I will patent any means they will leave untried to accomplish the same end. Morenci Observer: Now is the time when the "numerous" candidate calls on some man or men of "influoence" in every town and blandly asks, "how's my chances here?" The m. o. i., already besieged beyond endurance and anxious to be let alone, assures him that they are doubtless good, and the candidate rushes away highly elated, adding this to the other towns which he has "solid" in the same way. Then comes the convention, and the candidate wonders why in thunder he did'nt get more votes.

COUNTY TEACHER'S INSTITUTE.

The Teachers Institute for Lenawee county will be held at Adrian, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., Monday, Aug. 4, and continuing two weeks. Prof. A. E. Curtis, Adrian, Local Committee.

It is becoming a well established fact that an interchange of views, such as is given in these Institutes, is of great practical benefit to those who attend them. The teachers that are found in the front ranks of their profession are generally those who take interest enough in their work to avail themselves of such means of improvement.

The institute law, as amended by the last Legislature, allows teachers, whose schools are in session at the time appointed for the County Institute, held under the direction of the State Superintendent, to close their schools during the continuance of such Institute without forfeiting their wages for as many half-days as they are in attendance at the Institute. This removes a cause that has prevented many teachers from attending these Institutes in the past; and in view of the inducements to self-improvement thus furnished by the law, County Examiners and School Boards will exercise wisdom and practice justice by giving preference to those teachers, others being equal, who seek all such means better to prepare themselves for the work of their profession.

It is designed to make the work in these Institutes as practical as possible, and thus meet the wants of the teachers of all grades in their everyday work. At the same time it will be the purpose of every worker to raise the standard of the profession of teaching, and to gain for it that dignity to which it is entitled. Especial attention will be given to such subjects as have been recently added to the list of those in which teachers are required to pass examination before obtaining certificates.

The exercises will be conducted by persons of extended experience, known ability, and eminent success.

The morning and afternoon sessions will be devoted to the discussion of topics of peculiar interest to teachers, while the evening lectures will be of a popular character.

There will be no tuition or enrollment fee. Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the local committee.

Soldiers, Attention!

At a joint meeting of the committees of the Lenawee County Soldier's and Sailors' association, the 18th Michigan Volunteer Infantry and G. A. R. reunion association, held at the office of B. F. Graves, Adrian, on Monday, Comrade G. W. Fleming was called to the chair and B. F. Graves, elected secretary.

On motion, it was resolved that the several executive committees of the different organizations meet at the same office August 8th, for the purpose of reporting progress for the coming basket picnic, to be held, at Devil's lake, Aug. 26, 27 and 28.

It was moved by Comrade Stevens that Lieut. H. M. Cole be a committee for obtaining speakers for the Lenawee county association, and Comrade Spragum be a committee for the G. A. R., and Fred Bay for the 18th regiment. Also that a committee of one on music from each of the organizations be appointed, viz: Lenawee soldiers and sailors, S. E. Graves; G. A. R., F. H. Cobb; 18th regiment, R. H. Baker.

Moved and adopted that Comrade H. W. Stevens be instructed to procure reduced railroad fare over the M. & O. to Devil's lake, and steamboat fare to the landing.

Signed, G. W. FLEMING,
Pres't Lenawee County As'n.

Peterson's Magazine for August, leads off with a capital steel-engraving, "Meetin's Out," from the original picture by E. L. Henry, one of the very best things we have ever seen, and thoroughly American. The tales sketches, etc., are all original, and are unusually good. We have often said that every lady of refinement should take this magazine, and we now repeat the advice. The price is but $2 a year, with great deductions to clubs. Address C. J. Peterson, 306 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

This is a family secret and we ought not to publish it, but we feel that it right and proper that the public should know it. Editors actually have to pay money for what they eat and wear, and besides the paper makers have the cheek to charge an editor for the material he gets; but don't mention it.

A CANDIDATE SUGGESTED.

EDITOR HERALD:

As county politics begin to enliven and the merits of available candidates are being mentioned through the press for the various county officers, we desire with becoming fitness to name the name of Cyrus T. Crandall of Raisin for the position of County Clerk. The Republicans of Raisin feel that while they have ever been active and zealous in the interests of the party and having never since its organization been represented by a County official their request at this time should be regarded with consideration. In urging the name of their esteemed townsman they firmly believe in him they present a man thoroughly qualified to fulfill the duties of that office in every particular. Mr. Crandall is a young man endowed with more than an ordinary degree of energy and industry. He has improved the opportunities offered for a thorough education and is possessed of superior clerical abilities and has at different times successfully filled positions requiring clerical responsibility. He is a young man of large personal acquaintance in the County and it is the accepted verdict of those who are the most intimate with him that he has both character and capacity to fit him abundantly for any duties which might devolve upon him.

Trains stop at Eldred, River Raisin and Sutton, going and returning.

Adrian Record—Wednesday afternoon a stranger, having the appearance of an honest farmer, entered Ald. Bowerfind's bakery, and professing to be able to speak or write anything but German, induced Mr. Bowerfind's son to aid him in making out a check for $50 on Whitney & Wilcox. Shortly after he entered the clothing store of Mr. Dan Benedict and attempted to get a suit of clothes in payment for which he offered a check for $80 on Tobey & Co., but Mr. Benedict refused to accept it. He then tried to work the same dodge on Wesley & Sons, presenting to them the $50 check; and they also refused it. About seven o'clock he called on Mr. Bowerfind and stated that he wanted to get out of town that night and must get the money on the checks, he induced Mr. Bowerfind to let him have the money on the $50 check. The $50 check purported to be signed by Jake Fisher and the $80 check by Chas. Fischer. When Mr. Bowerfind presented it at the bank yesterday morning, he discovered that it was a forgery. In the meantime, the festive stranger had made himself scarce, and the officers are still looking for him.

On Tuesday morning last Elijah Harris, a colored man was buried in a well in Adrian. He and a man by the name of Horace Craig were engaged in digging a well, when the earth caved in under the curbing burying Harris about four feet deep. Owing to the disadvantages under which the rescuing party were forced to labor the body was not recovered for about two hours. Mr. Harris was one of the best known colored men in Adrian and was highly respected by every one.

BLANCHE.

Blanche was our baby, sweet and fair
I used to wonder in days gone by
[illegible]
A boy her elder than ours, and I
Grew fond and proud of her pretty ways;
I learned her prattle to understand
Ah! those were beautiful, hopeful days,
When she lisped the mistake of Babyland.

Here at our cheerful home beside
Sunlighted and blessed like a pretty flower
Her mother's pet and her father's pride,
She grew to girlhood, sweet, pure, and true.
I planned and hoped—while she laughed and played
While I made her garments with love and food,
Of wedded her aprons, torn and frayed—
How she would help me when I was old.

A school-girl gay, with a winsome face,
Careless, thoughtless and strong of will
Darting, romping, yet full of grace
And loving kindness, I see her still.
Taking no lessons so dull and drear,
Dreaming of something the girls had said
How little we think of our days when here—
How much we miss them when they have fled!

Here, in our watchful care secure,
But yet far from the friends she knew,
She grew to womanhood, sweet and pure,
With a soul that was trustful and always true.
She loved, and her joyous heart was won;
We gave her away, a happy bride,
To one who was worthy to be our son,
And worthy to walk by our darling's side.

And thus, in the morn of her hopeful years,
To the pleasant tasks of her wedded life
She passed with our blessing and our tears,
A faithful wife and a loving wife.
She passed where the fields were fair and green,
Where the blossoms bloomed and the sun light shone.
She dropped, she died, and her soul passed
Has peacefully passed to the dread unknown.

Ah! the hours seem long and the nights seem drear—
Our hearts are heavy with grief and care;
But often we fancy that she is near—
Her beautiful presence seems everywhere.
Here is the room that she neatly kept;
Here are her treasures, sacredly by said;
Here is the bed where she sweetly slept,
Just as she left it, before she died.

I miss the touch of her tender hand—
That soft on my brow used to fall;
The eyes that a mother's love commands,
As strong, as true, as a band of steel.
The sound of her voice is the sweet, glad
Of some new-born pleasure, some future fair;
The spoiler that barred from her vision
eyes,
Her faithful ears from another's care.

Over the dark and the sundered sea
Where the waves break on the Hyperion strand,
She has learned the mighty mystery
That only angels can understand;
She was so light in her robe of white,
With a glory crowning her forehead fair;
She went her way and wants by the golden gates,
To gladly greet us when we come there.

STORY OF A BANK CHECK.

The Sad Result of a Paying Teller's Mistake—Driven to Lunacy by an Overpaid Check—How a Portion of the Money was Recovered.

What I have to tell is absolutely true. It did happen exactly as I shall try to write it. The only things I will omit are the names of the persons and the place where it happened. I might by lengthening out the story show the play of those fell passions, greed and covetousness, but I trust what I have to say will not lose its point from brevity. The moral is the same old trite one, that honesty is the best policy. When a man is tempted to commit a wicked action it often happens that the injury done another becomes reparable. There is a penalty attached to most transactions which escapes the offender. Retribution follows close. It is now almost instantly, as quickly as an explosion when the hammer of the gun-lock strikes the cap containing the fulminate, or the fire may hang back, but it will come some day or other. This is a longer preamble than I thought would be drawn from my pen, but as I am not a young man I may indulge in such comments, because in the life of any one who has passed the half-century the force of the inevitable consequence usually occurs to him. A man of my age has been long enough in the world to have seen passing before him many a sad drama; he has been present at the very first scene, and has been an unwilling witness of the terrible conclusion.

I suppose few people who have had direct transactions with banks are not aware that errors sometimes happen. The heads of firms rarely are acquainted with such mistakes. It is the business of clerks who have the checks cashed to see that the amounts paid them are correct. Paying tellers, if they do err, are rather likely to pay too much than too little. Should they give more money than the face of the check calls for, if the receiver of the money is dishonest, then the payer does not always hear about it. If he underpays, the demand for the difference is invariably made at once. I am rather inclined to repeat the assertion that in such mistakes as are made in the rush of business it is the commoner error to pay too much. Sometimes a very tired man, whose brain has been too long on the stretch, or who is ill or nervous, mistakes the number of the check for the amount, and pays away some thousands instead of hundreds. I have known this to happen in a New York bank to a young friend of mine. He had sufficient good judgment not to embarrass the paying teller by making any noise about it. He resumed his place in the line, handed back his bank-book, politely requested the teller to look at the check he had presented, the amount he had received, and it was all so quietly done that he made for life a fast friend of a careful and expert bank teller. I have two or three times been overpaid by a bank teller. People who shop have very often mistakes made in their change to their advantage. Need it be said that without waiting an instant restitution should be made?

I was clerk in a house when the incident I am about telling happened. We did a large business in the city of ——, and our check-book was in constant demand. I made out the checks and kept the bank account, but did not have the signature of the firm. Generally for greater security, when the amounts were large, I drew out the money myself. A great many of the transactions we were engaged in required us to pay at once to the individual the hard cash.

The paying-teller of our bank in the business season had all he could attend to. The money to be paid for an agricultural product very much in demand would on some days make the cash disbursements of this bank amount to $70,000. I remembered that on one occasion, looking at the teller, he seemed tired and depressed. Presenting my check for something less than $1,000—wanted by me in five and ten dollar bills—he overpaid me $50. He had counted the money over twice before passing it to me. I recounted the money, found the error, and, being pressed for time, could not return the $50 until after three o'clock. The teller was obliged to me but I noticed he looked a worried look. A month after this we had some balance to pay a customer living out of the city, amounting to $326. A check was drawn for the amount, handed to the teller, and his account balanced. The transaction entirely dropped out of my mind.

Some three months afterward the firm received a letter from this man, which was rather ambiguous of its kind. There was an error, he said, in his account. Would we look over it? At once I examined the books, checked off every item, went through all the debits and credits of his business, and ended by inspecting the final check paid him. My employers, who were very honest and careful gentlemen, were satisfied with the accuracy of the account, and I was instructed to write him a letter to that effect. I did so, as politely as I could, but at the conclusion of my letter I said: "You leave us in the dark, however, as to one thing. Three months have elapsed since our check was given to you. If you had not been paid what was due you we should have certainly heard from you before. Have you been overpaid?" My senior employer, a shrewd business man, looking over my letter, remarked: "Perhaps your question here might not be liked by Mr ——. However, let it go." I mailed the letter. We heard nothing more about it for a month. Then there came a tortuous letter from the man. "His account was wrong," he wrote. "Maybe he had come across some money he could not exactly account for." He did not state how much money it was, or how it happened. It was a mean slander on his part. I knew that. He had a sick-of-a-conscience that I was certain of. The firm consulted with me what they should do. I made up my mind that more money had been paid the man on the check than we were entitled to. I went at once to the house of the bank. I found him ill, nervous and tremulous. "Yes," he said, "my accounts were wrong. There had been a big deficit. I have not slept for months. I am afraid I have overpaid some one. But thank God I have made it up. I mortgaged my house and passed the amount short to the credit of the bank. I must have made a blunder somewhere. But the strain on my mind has been killing me. I feel as if I were no longer fit for the place." He seemed to me to have moments of doubt and uncertainty. "I stick to my place," he said. "Of course I have no recollection of having ever paid that check of $456." I said to him "that I had hopes of getting some of the money back," but I did not like to tell him how. But what I did do was to go that evening to the President of the bank and state the case to him. As it had been through him that I owed my position in the firm he had every confidence in me. My advice was asked. I was forced to declare that I thought the paying teller had better be given another and lighter position. Next day, when I went to the bank, the old teller had been apparently relieved. He was casting up some accounts in the ledger. When I spoke to him across the railing he did not seem to recognize me. Next day I was shocked to learn, through the President of the bank, that such positive indications of mental trouble had been shown by the teller that his friends had thought it wiser to confine him in his house. His accounts had been at once rigorously examined, and were found to be correct. It was perfectly true that he had mortgaged his house, and had paid the amount received into the bank. He had concealed the loss for three months or more from the bank, which was a mistake on his part, but he had been punctilious enough to even add the interest for some ninety days.

Now, I felt absolutely certain that the man to whom the check had been paid must be a rascal. If he had offered restitution it came late—very much too late. My firm gave me my carte blanche to manage the matter as I pleased. I could not have him arrested. As he lived in an isolated part of the country, no efficient summons could reach him. If I had been aggressive before probably not a cent would have been returned. I wrote now a sharp letter. I said that "a very large amount of money must have been paid him over and above the face of the last check given him, which was $456." I stated that "I knew exactly how much it was." I must confess outright that this was a bluff. I was not sure that the teller had not made other mistakes besides this one. I wrote that "unless the money was at once restored I would blast his reputation. If he was inclined to be honest, even at this late date, let him do all he could and send back the whole amount." I thought it wiser not to let him know the mental condition of the teller. I was quite certain that if he knew the teller was out of his mind not one penny would he return. I wrote to him that he "must be in a hurry about it. That only the teller and I knew of it, and that my firm were as yet in ignorance."

At once, by return mail, I had a letter. The sum was not, as we said, what I represented it to be. He made some specious arguments about a man finding a purse, and the description of it not tallying with the actual purse lost or the amount in it. Under such circumstances was a man bound to return it? If I could prove that he had been overpaid I ought to state exactly what was the amount. He might, he added, "never have written me a word about it, and no one would have been the wiser. But he had a conscience," so he said. I replied with a vigorous letter. I confuted his arguments. "He knew," I said, "the moment he had the bank-notes passed over to him that he had been overpaid." A man might find a piece of gold in the dust of the road, and could never tell who dropped it there. But there was no analogy between the two cases. I cried "for immediate restoration, or there would be an exposure." His answer did not come for ten days. "I was mistaken," he said. "He was not aware that he had been overpaid until he got home. Then he did not know of it for a week afterward. It came out then in his accounts." I knew this to be a wicked lie, but it contained at least the written acknowledgment that he had been overpaid. His letter concluded as follows: "This matter has worried me considerably, has taken up a great deal of my time, and time for me is money. Don't you think there should be compensation allowed me, or in other words, can't we make a compromise?" On the back-guard! "It sends a thing would be arranged I will come to the city and pay over to you the money." I am not afraid of the bank. I consider that my transactions have been with your firm."

The money overpaid by the teller had been some $1,000, and he had probably counted out $456 instead of $456. I failed to do it, but I offered the second-sighted his traveling expenses. His reply came promptly. To leave his business was worth a great deal more than that. Then, again, he thought of bringing his wife on with him and enjoying them selves." The up and down of it was that I must offer him a certain amount. "My temptations, you remember, have been very great." I offered him $500. I was disgusted. I felt like going to his place and tackling him myself. "This is my ultimatum," I said. "If I do not hear from you in ten days I will disclose the whole matter, and you will be dishonored." His letter came back promptly enough. "He would take the $500." It wasn't very much. The bank was ever so rich. Corporations had no souls." I consulted with the bank President, who thought it was better to close with the man. Would "it be believed that the wretch and his wife came to —— apparently on a pleasure trip? He had done a sharp and clever piece of business. He had not the least compunctions of conscience. He came to the office of an evening, and I do not hesitate in saying that in his hip pocket there was a revolver. He handed me over something less than $2,000, asserting that the amount received less the traveling expenses and the $500 made up this balance. When the money had been transferred by me to the safe I gave him a piece of my mind. I did not spare him. I heaped on him every insulting epithet I could think of. Then he showed his temper, which was an ugly one. "Now," said I (remember I was twenty-six then, and hotter blood ran through my veins than to-day), "you have wrecked an honest man's brains. That teller of the bank whose money you took, has lost his reason. He will, I am afraid, never be a sane man again. This is your work." That seemed to cow him. "Your repentance comes too late. I hate you so that—God forgive me—had you as much as lifted your finger against me, I should not have hesitated in killing you like a dog, and no jury in the land would have touched a hair of my head. Go out of this city by the early morning train, or I will make you." That wretch left the office like a whipped cur. What was the sequel? A sad one. The bank-teller lapsed into a melancholic condition, which rendered all mental labor impossible. He had some little money, but many friends, and such few comforts as he required were ungrudgingly given him. He died ten years ago. He never did completely recover his senses. As to the canting rascal, his fate was a dire one. Somehow the whole story came out, though I did not divulge it. In that section of country where he lived he was discredited. He took to drink, and became a confirmed inebriate. He neglected his business, and his plantation was sold. His wife sought and obtained a divorce. Two years ago I read that in a brawl in the most degraded quarter of a town in Alabama this man met his death in a negro dance-house.—N. Y. Times.

Nostrums and Imagination.

A patient, suffering from some intractable complaint, in which a hopelessness of cure forms no inconsiderable obstacle to the physician's efforts, procures some new nostrum. The very sight of the invariable string of testimonials inspires confidence. There are certain to be included in the list of cures similar cases to his own. He reads and believes; and the nostrum, possibly harmless as the bread pills prescribed by the physician for the hypochondriac, receives another tribute of grateful praise. The analogous case of Liebig, who when a young man, had neglected to prepare for his master's visitors the nitrous oxide, or "laughing gas" of the modern dentist, but filled the inhalers with atmospheric air instead, illustrates once again the power of faith. The common air produced all the symptoms of mild gaseous intoxication which the laughing gas was expected to induce. Venturing within the region of household medicine and popular surgery, perhaps the charming away of warts presents us with another instance of the literally remarkable influence of the mind in modifying not merely physical states but bodily structures. Every "wise woman" in the remote districts of the country, to which the spread of educational sweetness and light has mostly confined such homely oracles, possesses a "charm" for driving away the excrescences in question. Even in the time of Lucian such female practitioners of a mild species of occult art were celebrated for their successful treatment of warts. Dr. Tuke gives a case in point, in which, through the effects of the imagination, even in a cultured person, the growths in question were made to disappear. A surgeon's daughter had about a dozen warts on her hands, the usual modes of treatment having availed nothing in their removal. For eighteen months the warts remained intractable, until a gentleman noticing the disfigurement, asked her to count them. Carefully and solemnly noting down their number, he then said: "You will not be troubled with your warts after next Sunday." At the time named the warts had disappeared, and did not return. Here the connection between the imaginative impression of some occult or mysterious power and the cure was too close to leave a doubt that, as in other cases of bodily ailment, the mind, which so frequently affects the body to its hurt, had in turn favorably influenced the physical organization.—Gentleman's Magazine.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs; none so feared with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, treating perhaps from a trifling or unnoticed cause, is often the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung disease, and should be taken at once without delay.

How Watch Cases are Made.

This process of manufacture was invented by James Boss, who started in business in 1854, and the methods and tools used in making these watch cases are covered by patents. This is the only watch case made under this process. For many years the introduction of these goods was slow, owing to popular prejudice against "plated" goods, but gradually the public learned that the James Boss' Gold Watch Case was not a cheap gold-washed or electro-plated article, but was made of genuine gold plate of standard quality and thickness. Unscientious adherence to the determination to make the best watch case ever put on the market, and the adoption of every improvement suggested, has made the James Boss Gold Watch Case the STANDARD.

In this watch case the parts most subject to wear—the bow, crown, stem, thumb-catches, etc., are made of SOLID GOLD.

Cures all Humors, from a Common Eruption to the Worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude, cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venereal Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using, will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 6 ounces, Sold by dealers in medicines.

If your druggist does not happen to have it by hand, request him to order a supply of it for you as it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

WE DO NOT CLAIM

that HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA will cure everything, but the fact that on the purity and vitality of the blood depend the vigor and health of the whole system, and that disease of various kinds is often only the sign that nature is trying to remove the disturbing cause, we are naturally led to the conclusion that a remedy that gives life and vigor to the blood, eradicates scrofula and other impurities from it, as HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA undoubtedly does, must be the means of preventing many diseases that would occur without its use; hence the field of its usefulness is quite an extended one, and we are warranted in recommending it for all derangements of the system which are caused by an unnatural state of the blood.

Why Suffer with Salt-Rheum?

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen—I was a great sufferer from Salt-Rheum on my limbs, for a dozen years previous to the summer of 1876, at which time I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. The skin would become dry, chap, crack open, bleed and itch intensely, so that I could not help scratching, which of course made them worse. At the time I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla (in the summer of 1876) they were so bad that they discharged, and I was obliged to keep them bandaged with linen cloths. The skin was drawn so tight by the heat of the disease that if I stooped over they would crack open and actually bring tears into my eyes. The first bottle benefited me so much that I continued taking it till I was cured. I used one box of Hood's Olive Ointment to relieve the itching. Hoping this may induce others to make use of Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit as I have, I am,

Very truly yours,
MRS. S. S. MOODY,
No. 75 Broadway.

General News Summary.

Interesting Home and Foreign News.

DOMESTIC.

IN a general fight at a colored picnic at Oakley Grove, ten miles north of Cincinnati, on the 24th, five persons were more or less seriously wounded by bullet or knife. No one was fatally hurt.

FRANK DEWALT, the defaulting Leadville banker, has been sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary.

A FIRE at Eagle Bay, a new town on the Duluth & Iron Range Railway, on the 23d destroyed seven frame buildings used as saloons. Loss $40,000 to $50,000; no insurance.

AT Plano, Tex., on the 24th, Cora, aged eleven, and Helen, aged two, daughters of John Ransdale, were burned to death by the explosion of a coal oil can, with which the eldest child was attempting to kindle a fire. The bodies were burned to a crisp.

IT was stated at Washington on the 24th that the President would make no appointment to the position of chief of the newly created Labor Bureau at present. A number of candidates are being urged since it has been announced that Jarrett would probably not be appointed.

A TIDAL wave was felt on the 24th in the Menominee and Milwaukee Rivers. It was the most noticeable at "Straight Cut," as the entrance to the rivers is called, where the waters receded three feet, returning in about fifteen minutes. Above the dam in the Milwaukee River, two or three miles from "Straight Cut," swimmers who were standing in the shallow water were completely submerged by the returning water.

A PARTY of outlaws entered a livery stable at Wymore, Neb., on the 24th, and presenting cocked revolvers demanded the horses to be given up. The stable men resisted and compelled the robbers to beat a retreat.

AT a meeting of the auditors of the suspended banking firm of Clinton R. Weeden & Co., Providence, R. I., on the 24th the statement showed the liabilities to be $654,000. Assets, nominal, $597,000. Unsecured liabilities, $270,000. Estimated available assets $128,966.

A CONSTRUCTION train on the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Texas Pacific Railroad fell through a bridge near Delta, Miss., on the 25th, killing Engineer Vanderberg and the fireman. The accident was caused by the rails being torn up for the purpose of wrecking the train.

THE Pennsylvania Railroad Company have purchased one hundred and twenty-five acres of land at Freedom, Pa., from John Conway for $104,000. It is their intention to erect repair shops, round-houses, etc., and make up all east and west-bound freight trains at that point. They will reorganize the freight work and spend $1,500,000 on improvements. The yard will accommodate about seven thousand cars.

THE executive committee of the Lehigh Coal Exchange on the 25th agreed to make no change in the price of coal during August.

THE Coal Miners' State Convention adjourned at Pittsburgh on the 25th after electing the following officers: President, George Harris; Vice President, Louis Hopkins; Secretary, Richard Davis; Treasurer, Thomas A. Armstrong. It was decided to change the name from the Miners' Amalgamated Association to the Miners' and Laborers' Association.

A MOTION was argued in the New York Supreme Court on the 25th to vacate the attachment levied upon the property of Ferdinand Ward in the suit by the Marine National Bank to recover $700,000 loaned by the bank to Grant & Ward prior to their assignment. The application was made on behalf of George C. Holt, the assignee of Ward. The attachment had been granted upon the ground of an alleged fraudulent disposition of Ward's property prior to the making of the assignment. The court reserved its decision.

ON the morning of the 25th locomotive No. 346 on the Lehigh Valley Railroad pushed a freight train from Mauch Chunk to Fairview, Pa. On its return there were four men in the cab, Jacob Hassle, the engineer; his son, John Hassle, brakeman John Armbruster, fireman, all of Mauck Chunk; and Robert Smith, night operator at Nescopeck. At a point near Whitehaven the boiler of the locomotive exploded, instantly killing the two Hassles and Armbruster. Smith, the operator, was pinned down to the track by the tender truck, but before he could be rescued a coal train dashed down the track and plunged into the wreck in which he still lay. Thirty-five cars were more or less damaged and the engine derailed and broken. The body of John Hassle, the brakeman, could not be found. Farm hands at work a mile away say fragments of metal fell about them in the field. No reason has been assigned for the explosion.

THREE children of Joseph Ashley were drowned while bathing in the river at Green Bay, Wis., on the 25th.

FROM statements furnished by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue it appears that the aggregate receipts for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1884, was $121,590,039, a decrease compared with the preceding year of $22,963,305.

CAPTAIN TRAYNOR, in the dory Harold T. Bibber, landed at Martinicus Island, Me., on the 23d, nine days from New York. He proceeded next morning for Bristol, England, in good health and confident of reaching his destination.

C. F. SAUER & CO.'s tannery at Louisville burned on the 25th, involving a loss of $60,000; partly insured. Captain William Herman, of the fire department, fell from the burning building and was seriously, if not fatally injured.

THREE children of Mrs. William Hovey were recently burned to death in a barn at Tannersville, Pa. The mother has become insane.

COLONEL CHARLES MORTON, assistant postmaster of Brooklyn, N. Y., is still missing. His family and friends profess to know nothing of him. The rumor that he has gone to Europe is not verified.

AT San Francisco, Port Collector Sears interprets the amended Chinese restriction act to extend the restriction until 1884, according to section one. This adds two years to the period of restriction of the original act.

RECEIVER JOHNSON, of the New York Marine Bank, on the 26th began the payment of a fifteen per cent. dividend. Three hundred depositors were paid $460,095. The total amount of the dividend will be $800,000.

THE President has appointed John G. Brady, of Alaska, George H. Ihrie, of Pennsylvania, and Chester Seeberg, of California, Commissioners for the District of Alaska, to reside respectively at Sitka, Wrangel and Gunalaska.

FRANK G. VITTUM, Frederick Jones and John Orendorf, youths of good families in the town of Canton, Ill., while fishing recently in a boat above Copperas Creek dam, on the Illinois River, were drawn into a whirlpool, the boat capsized, and all were drowned. The bodies were recovered.

OVER fifty arrests have been made of parties supposed to be implicated in the Lizzie Bradley outrage in the camp on the Monongahela River near Pittsburgh recently. One gang of thirty-two laborers employed on the Baltimore & Ohio Road, were arrested on the 26th; also George Helton and Robert Grimes, of West Elizabeth, Pa. A portion of Miss Bradley's jewelry was found in Helton's possession. The parties will have a hearing August 1.

A CYCLONE visited Cimarron Station, eighteen miles from Dodge City, Kan., on the night of the 26th, demolishing about a dozen houses, including a dry goods store and livery stable. Mrs. Barton and her child were seriously hurt and several other persons received painful injuries.

OFFICER MCLAUGHLIN, of the Minneapolis (Minn.) police, was fatally shot by three roughs named Tony Carteney, Mark German and James Parker, whom he was endeavoring to arrest on the 26th. The prisoners escaped but were afterward arrested and jailed. Lynching was threatened.

JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL SWAIM has been suspended from duty pending his trial by court martial. It is now thought when the trial comes off he will be called upon to answer charges of embezzlement in connection with the disposition of money raised for the Garfield Monument fund. Colonel Lieber, assistant Judge Advocate General has been ordered to act as Judge Advocate General during General Swaim's suspension.

SILAS HUDSON, James Podgett and Arthur Page, young men, are under arrest for placing logs on the track of the Richmond & Allegheny road at Lynchburg, Va., a few days ago.

A STORM in Eau Claire County, Wis., on the 26th damaged crops and buildings to the extent of $20,000. Hail stones fell which are alleged to have measured six and eight inches in diameter.

FOLLOWING is the statement of the New York Associated Banks for the week ended July 26: Loans increase, $1,155,500; specie increase, $2,061,100; legal tenders increase, $356,000; deposits increase, $789,400; circulation decrease, $54,200; reserve increase, $2,229,850. The banks held $30,638,125 in excess of legal requirements.

JUDGE COMMAGER, of the Lucas (Ohio) Common Pleas Court, rendered a decision on the 26th in the case of O. Shepherd, vs. Philip Smith, treasurer of Ottawa County, and of Jacob Bolin vs. Joel W. Kelsey, treasurer of Lucas County, being assessment collection cases growing out of the Scott law. In each case the question arose upon a motion to dissolve a temporary injunction enjoining the respective treasurers of the two counties from enforcing by distraint the payment of the assessments upon the business of selling intoxicating liquors. The decision sustains the injunction.

IT is reported that James R. Keene's estate at Newport has been sold to Mr. Fiske of New York, for $80,000.

DISPATCHES of the 28th from Dakota, Nebraska and Minnesota, indicate a good spring wheat crop. James Baynes, statistical agent for Dakota, says the yield will be twenty bushels to the acre, making a total yield of 26,000,000 bushels. Hail storms damaged localities, but the damage was not very general. Daniel H. Wheeler, statistical agent for Nebraska, says winter wheat will yield thirty to forty bushels to the acre and spring wheat twenty to twenty-five. No damage from rust or bugs. The injury by storms was entirely local. H. H. Young, State statistician for Minnesota, says the yield will be 44,000,000 bushels of corn. Oats, barley and rye promise well.

It makes every humanitarian sad to see invalids seek such relief as is given them by the use of bitters, kidney medicines and other nostrums. The first few doses may make them feel better on account of its stupefying ingredients, combined with some strong cathartic and diuretic that are used in its composition, but they eventually grow worse. The only cure for weakness, nervousness, debility, aches, pains, rheumatism, sores, urinary and digestive troubles, is to make the blood rich, red and pure, by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla, a remedy widely endorsed by physicians who have examined into its composition and effect.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine.

The August number, abounding with edifying and pleasant reading, is already upon our table, and is always welcome. "New Zealand and the Canterbury Settlement" is the opening article, by Rev. F. Pember, B. A., with numerous illustrations. The late Lady Blanche Murphy, Rev. E. A. Rand, F. E. Weatherley, James Croll, James Buckham, Alfreton Hervey, Mrs. Alexander, J. Alex. Patten, and other favorite writers, have contributed to this number. The editor, T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D., gives some excellent "Advice to Young People," and the Home Pulpit has a sermon of his, "Is Life Worth Living?" There are two interesting serials, and sketches, essays, poems, etc.; a miscellany, interesting and instructive, and the usual record of important events, editorial comments, obituaries, etc., etc. Price 25 cents a number, $2.50 a year, postpaid. MRS. FRANK LESLIE, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

Nervous, dyspeptic individuals, whose distress of mind and body make life miserable, if your sufferings have been prolonged and increased by the use of bitters and pretended cures of kidney and liver diseases, throw all such nostrums aside and find health, strength and vigor in that simple remedy known as Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It purifies the blood, strengthens the urinary and digestive organs, and infuses new life into all parts of the body. No other remedy equals it. Have your druggist get it for you.

KITTY KENT'S TROUBLES. By Julia A. Eastman. Illustrated. Boston: D. Lothrop & Co. Price 25 cents. The Publishers have shown rare judgment in putting this excellent story into their new and popular Young Folks' Library. Miss Eastman, it will be remembered, took the prize of one thousand dollars offered several years ago by this house, for the best Sunday school story, and the present book is in every particular its equal. The heroine is the daughter of a clergyman, "a girl who was neither all good nor all bad, but partly one and partly the other," and the narrative of her trials and experiences is intended as a guide and a help to other girls who have those of the same kind to contend with, and to impress upon them the lesson that "the only road to happiness lies through the land of goodness."

If your lungs are weak, if a cold causes you quick distress, you will breathe easier, you will cough less, you will strengthen the pulmonary organs, you will feel better every way if you will occasionally use Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. Ask your druggist for it.

The Emerson Center Postoffice is now known as Beebe.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 31, 1884.

A Union Club was organized at Clinton last Monday evening with twenty members.

The Prohibitionists have a Saint and a Daniel on their ticket and will shout for home protection and reform.

The tendency of party organs to abuse and scandalize political opponents is aptly touched up by the Morenci Observer thus:

"Are we a nation of rascals?" inquires John L. Hume in the North American Review. Well, John, a faithful reading of Democratic newspapers will make you think that most Republicans are rascals; on the other hand, by reading Republican papers you will think that most Democrats are rascals. As together they make up the biggest part of our country, the answer to your question, of course, must be in the affirmative.

The Prohibitionists are in the field with a ringing platform and a thoroughly good ticket. Their convention, although not as large as the two Chicago conventions, was composed of a fine body of able earnest men. The Union ticket will not run itself this year as hitherto. With the dissatisfaction existing in the old parties, the Prohibitionists have a golden opportunity to make a strong fight with the probability of carrying three or four states.

The New York World says: It is sad to see an alleged Labor organization in Baltimore adopting resolutions denouncing GOV. CLEVELAND for his veto of the Tenement House Cigar bill. That wise prohibitory measure became a law through GOV. CLEVELAND'S assistance. It was declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals. Last winter it was re-enacted by the Legislature in a revised form and was signed by the Governor. The managers of Mr. Blaine's "Aggressive Campaign" have started a good many stories of this character, but they do not promise to live long.

The Detroit Evening Journal in its editorial columns says:

The Evening Journal is not a scandal monger.

This its readers well know.

It deprecates attacks upon personal and private character.

And this its readers will know.

In its news columns it relates an old exploded scandal about Grover Cleveland, which is so improbable on its face, that even the Republican party organs decline to pollute their columns with it. The Journal has plumed itself on being a "clean" newspaper. It should now take the Pharisaical stool upon which it has been perching and chop it up into kindling wood.

The Prohibitionists resemble the old abolitionists. If they get licked once, they pick the flint and try it again. In 1872 they ran a national ticket and polled 5,608 votes.—In 1876 their vote reached 9,522.—In 1880 they polled 9,770 votes.—During the past four years they have maintained their organization and developed remarkable strength in several states, notably in Kansas, Ohio, Iowa, and Michigan. In this state in 1882 they secured 6,752 votes for governor, and they claim 50,000 this fall. This number is probably exaggerated, but it is more than likely that the Union ticket will develop sufficient strength to hold the balance of power in this state next November.

The New York Herald says: The Democratic platform does not raise the tariff issue as the main issue of the Presidential campaign, and in this the framers acted wisely. The campaign is not to be fought out on such an issue, because the nomination of Blaine gave prominence to another and more important one—that of honesty and decency in the administration of the Government. We do not want to see the gang of speculators, of lobbyists, of corrupt and swindling contractors who live on the Government's extravagance, of professional office seekers who run any office they can get for all it is worth—we do not want to see these men in power under the lease of one who did not hesitate to sell his influence when he saw an opportunity for personal gain. Here is the real issue—an issue of personal character and honest administration, and that is quite sufficient for one campaign.

HUDSON NOTES.

Business having called us to Hudson last Friday we spent a few hours interviewing some of the leading characters of our neighboring village. The newspapers of course came in for a share of our attention. Bro. Schermerhorn of the Gazette is still at the desk and seems to be happy over the outlook for Cleveland and Hendricks. The Gazette is a first class newspaper of which Hudson may well be proud. The Post also seems to be flourishing. One would hardly suppose, from a look into Bro. Searritt's benignant countenance, that he pens the blood and thunder editorials against the "Adrian political ring". He is enlisted for the war however and intends that the banner Republican town of the county shall have something to say on politics this fall.

The Comstock House is booming and is well patronized by the traveling public.

Henry C. Hall is still in the van in the grocery trade. He runs an advertising sheet of his own, called Hall's Hudson Grocer which has attained a large circulation.

Oren Howe still sells goods at the "lower corner" store, and keeps a large and well assorted stock.

Beardsell's old stand is crowded as usual. The senior partner is now giving his attention to his summer resort at Devil's Lake.

J. K. Boies & Co. are running the old corner store which has supplied the people of Hudson for so many years.

Considerable building is going on in Hudson this summer, and the village has a general appearance of thrift and business enterprise.

CLEVELAND & HENDRICKS CLUB.

The Democrats met at the Council Building last Friday evening for the purpose of organizing a Cleveland Club. H. H. Keyser was made temporary Chairman and F. B. Wood, Secretary. After some informal discussion it was resolved to proceed to the election of officers and the following persons were chosen:

President—Alfred James.

Vice Presidents—A. P. Coddington, E. B. Wood, William Hayden, Wm. Bresie, Minor Davidson.

Secretary—Fred B. Wood.

Finance Com.—H. H. Keyser, J. F. N. Bowen, Jas. A. Boyd, M. L. Root, Ben Garlinghouse.

The Chairman of the finance committee was made Treasurer ex officio. This committee is authorized to have charge of all funds and to call to their assistance other members of the club in raising funds for campaign purposes:

Ex. Com.—A. James, D. McNair, G. A. Kies, Jno. Benedict, Jerry Root.

This committee is to have charge of the general business of the club, to procure speakers, superintend meetings, etc.

On motion this committee was instructed to procure a suitable club room.

The executive committee was instructed to make a canvass of the village and township at once.

The club starts off in good shape with money in the treasury.

Our Time of Tribulation.

This is the season of the year that surely and sorely tries the soul of a local scribe in his sorrowful search for news to quiet the hungry cravings of a host of subscribers, who expect to find the local paper full from margin to margin and from head-line to foot-slug with interesting local matter; and if they fail to find it the editor is a blockhead and does not fulfill his mission to the people—so they think. The scarcity of legitimate local matter is the editor's path to perdition. He feels a responsibility resting upon his shoulders heavier than two loads of basswood, cut sled length, and in his efforts to do his duty to the people he departs from the path of truth and rectitude and enters the broad road that leads to ruin, and robs him of his veracity. Necessity is the mother of invention and the local editor is the father of the child. If the sweet angel of fortune smiles on him and makes his heart glad by the announcement of a birth, an elopement, a marriage, a runaway team and a mutilated wagon, he clutches at it with all the eagerness of a brown cow in a cabbage patch. But the angel fails to smile frequently, and the poor editor, like a penniless beggar, knows not where the next local meal is to come from. His imaginations must furnish all deficiencies in the weekly calendar of events until he sinks to the common level of a congressman, and is pointed out as the banner liar of a whole country. Verily, an editor's life is of many days and full of trouble, and he longs to drop the quill and rise to the proud dignity of a Durham calf at a county fair.—Saline Observer.

The New York Sun says: A newspaper in Buffalo has published scandalous charges against Mr. Cleveland, and the Utica Herald compares them with the charges against Mr. Blaine, contending that if the one is a proper subject of discussion the other is. No accusations produced without legal proof after the nomination of a candidate are worth a copper, and the publication of such accusations is a scandal of itself.

PROHIBITION.

Ex-Governor John P. St. John Nominated for President Unanimously.

Hon. William Daniel, of Maryland, Assigned the Second Place on the Ticket—The Platform and List of Officers.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

PITTSBURGH, July 23.—The National Prohibition Convention was called to order at eleven o'clock yesterday morning. Lafayette Hall presented a scene more animated than any seen under its roof since the day thirty-two years ago, when the anti-Slavery National Convention, representing all the free slave States, assembled to initiate an emancipation campaign. The hall is gaily decorated in flags, wreaths, flowers, banners and evergreens. Shields bearing the names of the various States were pendant from the galleries. A sheet of canvas stretched from wall to wall bears this inscription: "Constitutional Convention for the people, by the people." At the right and left of the President's chair are bowers composed of star spangled banners, the Union Jack of old England, National flags of Spain and Italy. Over the chair swings the motto: "Our homes and mothers must be protected." Five hundred men and women wear silken badges as delegates to the National Convention of the Prohibition Home Protection party.

The call of the convention was then read by W. R. W. Nelson, of Chicago secretary.

The address of welcome was delivered by C. L. Rose, of Pittsburgh. He described it as a very great honor and pleasant duty to welcome to Pittsburgh the delegates of the National Prohibition Convention. Never did a party more justly plead for help than his own. Back of them was a century of desolation caused by a legalized liquor traffic. The demands of the age could not be met without a Prohibition party. As Noah's ark would not do for a steamship, neither were old political parties suited to this day. This was the only political party that offered to the women of the Nation equal rights in managing the affairs of the Government. The prohibition harvest could not be gathered without the co-operation of the women. If asked "what is the influence of women in public places," the answer was, "Lucy Hayes." Every Nation was interested in the work of the convention, and when it came to chose a candidate for the Presidency he should be one whose labors have most richly blessed the cause of prohibition.

Gideon T. Stewart, chairman of the National Committee, responded in behalf of the convention. The hall in which they met added, he said, its historic welcome. Nearly thirty-two years ago the anti-slavery patriots assembled in it to organize another National campaign against the collassal crime which then ruled and well nigh ruined the Republic. He thanked the citizens of Pittsburgh for Lafayette Hall for its majestic memories, for its enlightening truths, to teach and inspire them for the great conflict. When he had finished his response to the address of welcome, Mr. Stewart proceeded to deliver the opening address. He referred to the relation between the liquor crime and the slavery crime. The anti-slavery men, he said, were strangely blind to the co-relation of the two evils. Their platform thirty-two years ago was silent as to the parent crime of which slavery was but the natural offspring. When Senator Brown, of Georgia, declared in the Senate some weeks since that African slavery was the product of Northern distilleries, he only echoed a truth shown in the whole history of the African slave trade and slavery. America had poured the destroying curse of the liquor crime on Africa, and by the fiat of avenging justice Africa had poured back the curse of slavery upon America. The two crimes had mutually sustained and strengthened each other. The anti-slavery reformers had lifted the ax of civil liberty to cut down one great branch of the upas tree, which, with its malign shadow, had darkened the republic, and today they met to lay that ax to the roots of the same upas, and to remove the main source of oppression and injustice to labor and of all crime, vice, and ignorance, poverty, debasement and misery. The whole compromise system for the pretended regulation of taxation and moral cultivation of the liquor crime was a sin against God and a crime against man. The arguments in its support were all rotten with wrong and reeking with blood. It was the logic of coiled vipers, flavored with the rhetoric of friends. Its absurdity was equal to its infamy. One of the most prevalent and dangerous forms of compromise with the liquor crime was that "of local prohibition" or "local option." A National crime organized and in control of the Government, demanded National prohibition by a party formed for the purpose. An attempt to reform the National Government and to abolish a ruling crime by merely changing laws and constitutions of States, was as vain as to expect a revolution of the sea by the mere winds that turn its waves. Within State limits constitutional prohibition had accomplished great good, but as opposed to the National crime, they were as impotent as ropes of sand in the teeth of Niagara. There were four nominally prohibition States at the North and half a dozen at the South, and yet, in the late National Republican Convention at Chicago, not a delegate from one of those ten States has dared to sign a minority report on the liquor question, and it was the same in the Democratic Convention. Thus all the Republican and Democratic Prohibitionists were bound as serfs of the liquor power under the lash of their party keepers when the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, represented by the honored and worthy head of Miss Francis Willard, stood at the door of the Republican National Convention pleading for the protection of homes, it was treated with silent contempt. What could more vividly illustrate the object and servility of that party to the liquor power and its perfidy to its own pledges; the anti-Slavery convention of 1852 and the Prohibition Convention of 1884 differed in one important respect. They first ushered in a political party; triumph followed by civil war; this convention came to proclaim glorious peace. Its mission was reunion, republican not in mere form, but in fact, in truth and hearts of all people. As a first and indispensible step to that reunion there must be total absolution of the two political parties. It was of no consequence which of them went first. In the grave of their master, the liquor power, they should both be quickly buried. Year after year the war between the two great political parties was protonged, although these many years the cry from the hearts of all people and all churches had been for a new party of peace and progress. The Prohibition party, called into being, met that cry; reclaimed the policy which bound unity and all religious and moral forces. Prohibition was civil liberty against crime, License was personal liberty for crime. The air was tramped with spirits, illustrious founders, patriots and sages of the republic, appealing to them to forward this mighty cause. From all the battlefields of the Nation, white-winged angels rose to bear their banners from the million graves its martyred heroes; and from unnumbered millions of dark, sad graves those who have been murdered by the liquor crime, pale hands were rising to point the way. Let this convention rise to the grandeur of its mission and do its duty fully, bravely and right, and a grateful future would come to crown its work with faultless glory.

The address was listened to with close attention and occasional plaudits. The reference to Miss Willard was greeted with applause, and her treatment by the Republican convention was greeted with shouts of "shame!" shame!"

The temporary organization was affected in the choice of William Daniel, of Maryland, as Chairman, and Mrs. Woodbridge, President of the Ohio Women's Christian Temperance Union, and Charles S. Carter, of Washington, as Secretaries.

Mr. Daniel in taking the chair spoke of the progress which prohibition was making in the State of Maryland. The general result was that the jails of Maryland were empty, property had appreciated, schools and churches were better filled, and every interest in the State was better promoted. So long, however, as the National Government allowed liquor to be imported, and issued license stamps, the State Constitution and State laws in favor of prohibition could not be enforced.

The General Government as well as the State government must prohibit this gigantic crime. The General Government fostered and protected intemperance throughout the license system, and therefore they must strike at the general good and they could only do that by putting in power the Prohibition party. Neither of the two parties had dared to touch the question in their recent conventions. One of them had found place for the protection of the wool of Ohio, but neither of them had found a place for the protection of the homes of the people. He believed that if the Democrats failed in the coming election, the best elements of that party would come in the Prohibition party and so with the Republican party. The thing for the Prohibitionists to do, was to poll a big vote in the coming election, that would hurt both parties. If the Christian and temperance voters of the country were united today, he believed they would put St. John, or some other good man, in the White House. Many of the politicians would have to swim in cold water. They had been swimming in whisky long enough, and now they would be taught to swim in cold water. If they should get a million votes in the coming election as Governor St. John said they would, they would break the back of one of the two parties, if not of both of them.

They were told, however, that they could not form a party on a single issue, but that depended on the size of the issue. They had put their colors to the front and would never draw them back, but would march up with them. The politicians were against the movement because they knew if temperance got into politics it would get them out. He wanted the Prohibition party in order to cover the bloody chasm between the North and South. Just as long as the Democrats are arrayed against the Republicans the old memories of the war would be fresh and there would be hate, vituperation and bitterness which would never cease until the ranks of the party were broken and this new party came in with the best elements of the North and South. There was victory in the air. It was coming as sure as they lived. This question would not "down." Leaving it out of the platform would not keep it down; never. If true to God and true to themselves they would succeed and would control the Government. He hoped, therefore, that the prohibition cause would have their prayers and their votes.

The band struck up "Where the Old Folks Lie," and there were three cheers for Maryland and her "little giant." The audience sang "Dare to Think, Dare to Do."

The Secretary reported the following representation in the convention: Alabama 2, California 23, Connecticut 2, Illinois 45, Maine 3, Kansas 17, Kentucky 6, Michigan 56, Nebraska 3, Dakota 1, Ohio 34, New Jersey 18, Maryland 10, New York 75, Missouri 10, Tennessee 12, Texas 10, Pennsylvania 58, Wisconsin 55; total, 446.

Miss Willard, President of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, appealed to the convention to listen at this time to the memorial prepared by the Union, and it was read by the Secretary, as follows;

THE W. C. T. U. MEMORIAL.

To the National Convention of the Prohibition party:

We, the members of the Women's Chaistian Temperance Union herein represented by the signatures of our officers, believe that while the poison habits of the Nation can be largely restrained by an appeal to the intellect through argument, to the heart through sympathy and to the conscience through the motive of religion, the traffic in these poisons will be best controlled by prohibitory law. We believe the teachings of science, experience and the "golden rule" combine to testify against the traffic in alcoholic liquor as a drink, and that the homes of America, which are the citadels of patriotism, purity and happiness, have no enemy so relentless as the American saloon. Therefore, as citizens of the United States, irrespective of sect or section, but having deeply at heart the protection of our homes, we do hereby respectfully and earnestly petition you to advocate and adopt such measures as are requisite to the end that prohibition of the importation, exportation, manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages may become an integral part of the National Constitution, and that your party candidate shall be by character and public pledge committed to a National Constitutional prohibitory amendment.

The views and principles expressed in the memorial were adopted by a rising vote.

THE PERMANENT ORGANIZATION

was then announced, with Professor Samuel Dickey, of Michigan, as President. A large number of Vice Presidents, among them several ladies and General Clinton B. Fiske, of New Jersey, and several secretaries, the first among them being Mrs. Woodbridge, of Ohio. The report was adopted, and a committee appointed to conduct Mr. Dickey to the chair Professor Dickey in taking the chair expressed appreciation of the high honor done him. They were here for work, not for words. They were here because they were driven into the work by their powerful convictions. They were not in harmony with those who believed in taxing or licensing the liquor system. They could not let it alone. They believed it ought to be suppressed. There was no hope to be placed in political parties. This Prohibition party stood committed to earnest, independent, political action. Their object was to found and to build up from its foundation an intelligent body of voters whose political thought would be the complete suppression of the liquor traffic. To that work they were pledged, and by that work they expected to stand. With the power of the General Government in their hands it would be weilded wisely and well, and the Nation would be redeemed from the curse of the rum power.

The convention then adjourned until this morning at ten o'clock.

SECOND DAY.

PITTSBURGH, July 24.—The Prohibition convention, under the rules adopted yesterday, met this morning at nine o'clock and was called to order promptly at that hour. The delegates filled the space assigned to them and the galleries were crowded with spectators. A short time was occupied in the singing of hymns. Prayer was offered by Rev. W. Lee, of New York.

The convention then proceeded to the call of States for the nomination of candidates for the Presidency.

When the State of California was called Mr. W. Babcock came to the stand and proposed the name of R. H. McDonald.

When the State of Illinois was called Mr. George C. Christian, of that State, nominated ex-Governor St. John.

Miss Frances E. Willard seconded the nomination of Mr. St. John in a stirring speech, which brought forth loud and long applause.

A delegate from Kentucky and one from Maine seconded the nomination of McDonald, and W. T. Eustis, of Maine, put in nomination Gideon T. Stewart, of Ohio. Mr. Minor, of Massachusetts, also seconded the nomination of Mr. St. John, expressing the belief that he would receive the nomination of the convention on the first ballot, and by an overwhelming majority.

Mr. Michael J. Hanney, of Michigan, seconded the nomination of Mr. St. John.

The nomination of Mr. St. John was also seconded by W. W. Satterlee, of Minnesota, and by Mrs. Mary Hoffman, President of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Missouri.

Mr. Ransom, of New Jersey, seconded the nomination of St. John. The nomination of St. John was also seconded by Hopkins of New York, Finch, of Nebraska. So many good things were said of him by the various speakers that the remark was made on the stage that the audience had been listening to-day to a new gospel of St. John.

When the State of Ohio was called, Mr. Gideon T. Stewart, of that State, came to the platform and said that the presentation of his name as a candidate by the delegation from Maine was against his wish and against his positive request. He had at all times stated that he was not a candidate and would not be a competitor for the nomination. St. John was with the Prohibition party now and forevermore until the death and burial of the liquor crime, and with that assurance he seconded the nomination of St. John.
